All About the Pageant

WHAT IT IS, WHAT IT TYPIFIES, WHO ARE CONSTRUCTING IT, WHO WILL BE IN IT AND HOW AND WHEN IT WILL BE PRESENTED

Being a Comprehensive Survey of All the Essential Information Concerning St. Louis' Great Historical Celebration.

Four Complete Performances Will Be Given, the Dates Being May 28, 29, 30 and 31, the Latter Two Holidays the Pageant Beginning at 5:30 Each Afternoon and Being Followed by the Masque.

BY CARLOS F. HURD.

WHAT do YOU know about the Pageant? If you can answer the questions, What, Who, Where, When, Why and How, in reference to the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis, you do not need to read this article.

But if you are one of those who are still asking whether prizes will be given for the best waltzers in the Masque, or whether it is too late to get a float representing your place of business into the Pageant, or whether the whole thing will be in pantomime, like the "movies," it will be worth your while to read on.

Such questions as the above are not catalogued as "foolish questions," even by the Pageant management. But they will be foolish questions hereafter, if this article fulfills its purpose. That purpose is to tell, concisely and connectedly, the facts about the Pageant and Masque, which have been told separately, a number of times, but some of which may have been overlooked, even by close readers.

The Pageant and Masque of St. Louis will be held in western Forest Park May 28, 29, 30 and 31. A great stage built over the lagoon at the foot of Art Hill will be the scene of the performance, in the different parts of which 7500 persons will appear. The spectators will sit on the slope of Art Hill, a natural amphitheater, accommodating 60,000 to 80,000 persons, and will look across a strip of water at the stage. The Pageant will begin about 5:30 p. m., and will last until dark. The Masque, after dark, will be performed by artificial light. The last two days of the performance will be holidays, May 30 being Decoration day and May 31 being Sunday.

The Purpose of the Pageant.

THERE! That answers the questions When and Where. Now for Why.

Why may mean for what occasion. It may also mean for what purpose. The Pageant (using that general term to denote the Pageant and Masque) has both an occasion and a purpose.

The occasion is the sesqui-centennial, or 150th anniversary, of the founding of St. Louis. The city was founded Feb. 14 or 15, 1764, by Pierre Laclede, though he did not come here at that time, but sent Auguste Chouteau to carry out the plans he had formed, and had outlined to Chouteau, on a survey in the fall of 1763. February is no month for an outdoor celebration of any kind, so the Pageant was set for May.

The purpose is two-fold. First, to show in striking form the history of St. Louis, and to typify the city's aspirations, its civic spirit and its relations to the other cities of the nation. The Pageant proper will show the record of the past, and the Masque will show the city's future hopes and aims.

Second, the purpose is to unite the participants, residents of all parts of the city, persons of varying occupations, interests and means, in the representation of the big spectacle, with the belief that by "playing" together they will learn to work together for the city's advancement, not only in material matters, but in civic spirit and in art expression and appreciation.

The question, Who, has been answered, as to the actors, in preceding paragraphs. To repeat, there will be 7500 participants, representing all sections of the city and all professions, trades and businesses. The organization will be democratic, and rich and poor will act side by side.

Who the Managers?

THE managers of the Pageant are St. Louis business and professional men. John H. Gundlach is chairman of the Executive Committee, and Luther Ely Smith secretary, and both are giving much time to Pageant affairs. William W. La Beaume is chairman of the Production Committee, and Charles A. Stix of the Finance Committee. Miss Charlotte Rumbold is executive secretary in charge of the Pageant offices in the Century Building.

The author of the Pageant is Thomas Wood Stevens, head of the School of Drama in the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Pittsburg. He is also Pageant Master. The author of the Masque is Percy MacKaye, distinguished poet and dramatist, who has been an adviser of the management from the outset. Joseph Lindon Smith of Philadelphia, is stage director of the Masque, and Frederick S. Converse of Boston, is composer of the music which will be an important part of the Masque.

So much for When, Where, Why and Who. There remain the important and inclusive question What, which is the one about which there has been most misapprehension, and the incidental question How.

The Pageant is not a parade. The Masque is not a mask ball. Dictionary definitions fail to help the reader to an intelligent understanding of these words, as they are used in denoting the St. Louis production.

Pageant Committee Appeals for Money Contributions From All St. Louisans.

THE Executive and Finance Committees of the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis have announced that money is needed at once, and that a large fund is to be raised by popular subscription.

Contributions of $1 to $5, or of less than $1 or more than $5, according to the ability of the contributors, are asked by the committees.

The reason given by the committees for asking the contributions is that St. Louis has undertaken the task of producing the Pageant and Masque, and must carry it to successful completion. They declare that the Pageant and Masque, carried out on the full scale planned, with 7500 volunteer performers, will unite the different parts of the city, will teach the inspiring history of St. Louis and will infuse civic spirit into young and old. While the primary object is not advertising, those in charge believe that the Pageant and Masque will give the city such advertising as could not be purchased for many times what the Pageant and Masque will cost—$125,000.

A large part of the expense of the Pageant and Masque is preliminary expense, and the committees point out that the money is needed now, for expenditures, through St. Louis workingmen and St. Louis business houses, for stage, seats, costumes and other immediate needs.

Contributions may be sent to Pageant headquarters, room 750 Century Building.

The Pageant is a play, produced on a stage. The theme is the history of St. Louis. The curved front of the stage on which it is produced will represent the St. Louis water front, and the spectators, sitting on Art Hill, will be looking, as it were, from the Illinois side of the Mississippi, across the river (represented by a part of the lagoon) upon early St. Louis.

The Pageant (not including the Masque) is divided into three periods, or movements. The first begins with the time of the Mound Builders, or prehistoric Indians. The arrival of buffalo, and the transformation of the agricultural Indians into a race of nomad hunters, is shown. Then the Indians of a later period appear, and later De Soto and his men, Joliet, Pere Marquette and La Salle.

The Spanish and French Periods.

THE second movement begins with the coming of Pierre Laclede and his stepson, Auguste Chouteau, the founders of St. Louis. The settlers follow, and the Spanish and French periods of the city's history are shown. The chief scene in this movement is the defense of the town by the Spaniards against the British and Indians in 1780, with the French school mistress, Mme. Rigouche, fighting beside the men. Another striking scene is the singing of French Revolutionary songs in the streets by the "Sans Culottes," local sympathizers of the French insurgents. The second movement ends with the "day of the three flags," when the Spanish and American flags, within a short period, floated over St. Louis, the American flag going up to stay as the Louisiana Purchase is proclaimed.

The third movement will be timed to begin as daylight is fading. In the twilight glow, the procession of pioneers will be seen passing westward—Lewis and Clark, Boone and his family, people, boats, wagons, horses and oxen. The General Pike, the first steamboat, steams up to the wharf. The visit of Gen. Lafayette, the dedication of the Old Cathedral, the return of Battery A from the Mexican War, and last, a torchlight procession in the bitter campaign of 1860, are represented. The period of war is represented by a musical passage depicting strife, and the Pageant closes with the news of peace.

Throughout the Pageant, the principal figures will be speaking the words written for them by Stevens. These words are in part blank verse, and in part dramatic prose. The utmost effort will be made to make all the audience hear all the words. If wind conditions are favorable, the management believes this can be done, for the Art Hill amphitheater is a natural sounding board. But if a part of the audience fails to hear the words, or all the audience fails to hear a part of them, the pantomime will be so vivid that, it is believed, everyone will understand it. Author Stevens says it will be easier to follow than the ordinary motion picture scenario.

Masque a Symbol of Ideals.

AT the conclusion of the Pageant, the audience will have received a clear idea of the history of St. Louis. The Masque, which will be produced by artificial light, will treat in symbolic and poetic fashion of the matters which the Pageant has treated in historic detail, and will go on to portray the spirit and tendencies of the present and the future.

It Is to Be Dignified and Memorable Presentation of the Great Facts in the City's History, and Not, as Some Seem to Think, a Mere Masquerade, With Prizes for the Most Eccentric Costumes.

In the Pageant, each actor represents some definite character. In the Masque, the chief actors represent tribes, peoples, spirits and forces of nature. The chief actor will be Saint Louis, clad in the armor of a crusader knight, and other principal figures will be Gold, the Mississippi River, Cahokia, representing the ancient Indian civilization, the Pioneers, the World Adventurers, the continents of the world and the cities of America, including Canada and Latin-American states. Music will have an important part in this symbolic interpretation.

The Masque begins with the figure of Cahokia, lamenting the downfall of the Mound Builders' civilization, dreaming of the future and awaiting the coming of better things. The wild nature forces defy him, and Heat and Cold threaten to destroy him. But in answer to his petition, the spirits of the stars and of the Milky Way bid him to hope. Then comes the Mississippi, bearing a star-child with a sword in his hand.

The wild nature forces seek to overcome the child, but are held back in wonder by his glittering sword. Then, as the approach of the discoverers is heard, the wild nature forces retreat, and the nations enter. The star-child is christened Saint Louis, and his mission of civilization is revealed.

The Coming of the Pioneers.

THE second part of the Masque opens with the coming of the Pioneers, who call on Saint Louis, now grown to manhood, to lead them against the earth forces, led by Gold. A pioneer, selected by Saint Louis as a champion, wrestles with Gold, and is first overcome, but when the star is fixed upon his brow, he overcomes Gold. Gold withdraws, threatening to return, and he does return after the arrival of the World Adventurers. With him he brings the War Demon, who engages in a mounted tournament, with lance and sword, with one of the World Adventurers. The demon is finally overcome, but Gold whirls him away.

The wail of Poverty is next heard, and the forms of Shame, Vice, Plague, Dumbness, Despair and Rebellion appear. A hooded figure is pointed out as their father, and Saint Louis unmasks this figure, showing him to be Gold. The despairing figures call on Saint Louis to save them, and he calls upon the cities of America to aid him. The cities, represented by their envoys, then appear and join Saint Louis. Imagination points the way to victory, which is to come through Love, represented by a child. Through the unifying influence of Love, Gold is conquered, and the League of American Cities is declared triumphant.

The Masque, as written by MacKaye, is wholly in blank verse. The music includes a number of original compositions, and the ancient hymn, "Veni, Creator," (Come, O Creator) is intoned by the cowled figures who appear in one part of the symbolism.

The figure of Cahokia, and the menacing figures of Heat and Cold, will be gigantic dummies, whose lines will be spoken by men behind or inside.

To Be Largest American Pageant.

PAGEANTS have been held by several cities in England. The Pageant of London and Drama of Empire, at Crystal Palace in the summer of 1910, was the only one ever given on as large a scale as the St. Louis production. The Philadelphia Pageant, in 1912, was the largest which any American city has given, but the St. Louis Pageant and Masque is planned on a much larger scale. Boston and Duluth are two of a number of cities which are planning Pageants, and are watching the St. Louis Pageant closely.

Seating and transportation arrangements are still to be made. The Pageant site is reached by the University, Union, Hamilton lines from the north, and by the Market line from the south. The stage is now under construction, and there is no better way to gain an idea of the Pageant's proportions than to stand by the Saint Louis statue on Art Hill and look toward the stage framework.

To gain an understanding of the historical and artistic meaning of the Pageant, a costume exhibit is being held in the Jefferson Memorial, open on Saturday and Sunday afternoons, and the Pageant costume shop, in the Kinloch Building, Tenth and Locust streets, is open to visitors.

This is not all there is to tell about the Pageant. If you wish to know anything that is not told here, write or telephone to the Pageant Headquarters, Century Building, Olive 470 and Central 1617.

"THERE ARE NO WOMAN PROBLEMS THAT LOVE AND MARRIAGE CANNOT SOLVE."

—MRS. CORRA HARRIS

Famous Southern Novelist Says Eugenics Is a Foolish Theory That Ignores Natural Law and That the Way for the Feminist Movement to Succeed Is the Way Which Woman Has Employed for Thousands of Years to Get Man's Wages.

MRS. CORRA HARRIS

Copyright by Doubleday, Page & Co

NEW YORK, March 28.

MRS CORRA HARRIS, gifted Southern novelist and character analyst, who has been in New York for a few weeks, arranging for the publication of more of her stories, admits she is shocked by what she has seen and heard. It is not so much the condition into which society, generally and humanly speaking, has fallen as the vagaries of those well-intentioned persons who have convinced themselves that the human race is hanging tremblingly over an abyss of so-called sex problems that must be solved before the world can make further progress.

Mrs. Harris, who wrote "A Circuit Rider's Wife," "In Search of a Husband" and other strong stories, lives in a little suburb of Nashville, Tenn., what time she isn't passing amid the delightful pastoral surroundings of her birthplace in Georgia, which she is fond of referring to as "the valley." To her, amid such surroundings, there is no sex problem and she believes that even to those whom it obsesses it is merely the figment of the imagination. The contemplation of a few good old-fashioned love marriages among dwellers in happy and contented homes she regards as an excellent antidote for that state of mind that sees the only hope of the human race in eugenics.

As a practical science for the physical improvement of the human race, eugenics does not impress Mrs. Harris favorably because it cannot be made to fit into the scheme of things. LOVE WON'T LET IT. In the course of an interview, discussing her observations on this phase of social evolution, she assailed the eugenists as foolish persons who build their house on the sand, she said:

"If a girl is taught that she must not marry a man if his chest is narrow, if his chin recedes too much, if his legs are bowed or if he is too tall or too short, or until he proves he is sane—which no lover can prove—nor if he has the diathesis of tuberculosis and not even if he escapes all these imperfections unless he has passed a physical examination in morals—I say, if she is brought up this way she will be ashamed to look even a perfect man in the face. Especially she will feel that he is also appraising her, not according to the poetry of love, but trying to make up his biological mind as to whether she can pass her marriage certificate in eugenics.

"And how is a man to ask for a certificate of health from the parents of the girl he admires? He must do it before he commits himself as a lover, you understand. It will be too late after he has won her affections and become engaged to her. If her grandmother died insane, if her mother is a neurasthenic, if she proves a trifle flighty and hysterical, according to this theory of eugenics he must abandon her.

"The whole thing is futile as set forth in the present theory. The only way to insure the next generation physically is not with laws requiring health certificates from prospective parents, but to get these advanced, newly virtuous women of the future intelligently interested in the bringing up of their children, so that the sons will be moral and the daughters healthy. Then they can meet and marry one another without upsetting the order of things and without destroying those dear illusions of love which are as necessary to every nation as any of its other virtues.

Marriage Is a Miracle.

"IT was to be expected in a place where sex has become a 'problem' that matrimony should be spoken of as a 'new profession.' It is not a profession. Marriage is a miracle, one o' those sublime manifestations of love in nature which makes one flesh of one man and one woman. That which is destroying the nature and sanctity of marriage is this introduction of the everlasting 'problem' mania, this commercializing of it as a merely domestic industry, this standardizing of it as a 'profession' based upon a social contract. It is the one relation in life which must be made through divine faith, the one in the other. So long as it remains so it is the solution of every problem. Neither poverty nor wealth, sickness, sorrow nor any mere misfortune can injure or destroy it. It is that inner sanctuary of a man's and a woman's life which must not be touched by the world. This dragging of it forth into the divorce court is monstrous, a crime against the past and the future. This effort to determine courtship by laws according to some scientific standard is all a part of the foolishness of imagining that men and women can be forced like stock to live according to arbitrary laws, not according to the one great Law."

Mrs. Harris finds that most of the "problems" of New York and other great American cities have to do with women. She says:

"Morally, spiritually, tenderly and viciously, women have long been known in the world, even from the beginning, whenever that was; but as an active factor in civilization woman is a recent discovery.

"The first we heard of her in this sphere of influence she was only the 'woman question.'

"Now, when anything or anybody gets into the interrogative form it is a sure sign that something is wrong with them. Corporations, trusts, interlocked directorates, municipal franchises, State and national policies, all must be changed when they become 'questions' in the public mind. It is a sign that our tariff laws were wrong, that our credit system was wrong, when they became questions. And the recent tariff and currency bills were the result.

"So, when the woman question arose, it was proof positive that something was wrong with the women. There is. They have failed, gone into bankruptcy by the decision of modern times. They are not the kind of wives men need now, nor the kind of mothers children need. They have to be divorced too often and they bear too few children because they cannot stand the racket. They have bad health, they are idle, or they are forced to work too hard. They are unhappy, and neither wealth nor education nor Browning circles seem to satisfy them.

What Is Really Wrong.

"THE question is this: What is the matter? How did they come to fail, and what is to be done about it? The world has been appointed receiver for this business. And the world is very slow, very conservative about making a report. As near as I can make out we have failed because conditions of life have changed so much that men have changed with them.

"They are no longer husbands and fathers so much as they are citizens, financiers, wage earners, persons who live outside the home and whose interests are too much on the outside. To be sure, as many of them as can afford it have satisfied their consciences and vanity by providing their women with good homes, luxuries and servants. But this has only added to the woman's discontent.

THE men are beginning to talk, they are beginning to tell on us a little. There is a short story in the December McClure's, entitled "Reincarnation: The Story of a Private Hell," which contains one of the most terrific arraignments I ever saw of the useless, virtuous, vicious wife. There are literally millions of women like her, whose husbands never expose them. But they will. Before this year is over some man who can write with his forked tongue will produce a novel in which the mean, little, whimpering, useless wife will play the star role instead of the commonplace serpentine, who merely tempts him. When women begin to fight men, they will get what is coming to them. And it will be a plenty. And much of it is as long overdue as suffrage for women.

—MRS. CORRA HARRIS.

"She does not want to stay in her home. Her companion has deserted her. Naturally, she wishes to follow him. That is the milk in the cocoanut, the reason why she stays upon the streets so much, why she passes the time dressing herself and just dancing or in agitating for her rights. She really wants to follow him the same as Ruth followed Moab. And she is right about it. His god should be her god, his people her people, where he goes she will go, and he cannot keep her from following. A woman who is left behind with the children and the baggage is bound to make too much fuss to be endured.

"This has resulted in the next phase, which is called the 'Feminist Movement.' It is no longer merely a question, but a 'movement.'

"To tell the honest truth, I do not see much motion yet in the movement. It is an immense caravan which appears at stated intervals, very noisy, terrifically importunate, ready for the journey across the intervening desert and wilderness to the promised land of equal suffrage, which flows with a new kind of milk and honey for women and their children. But it doesn't move. And it never will until the men fall in line.

"This is a fact those women should remember who are given to abusive methods in their suffrage pleading. Men do not respond to the lash of the mere tongue, if you have nothing else with which to enforce it. After all they are not donkeys, not even in England, where they do show some of the stolid endurance of that animal. They are the men who have defended and loved and cherished us, supported and humored us for some thousands of generations.

"The laws they have made, which are undoubtedly injurious to our interests and to the interests of our children, were not made with malice aforethought for that purpose. They are defective laws because they are men and did not know how to make them alone and unattended by use at the polls and in the Senate chambers. I doubt if we have been as faithful and considerate of their helplessness as they have been of ours if the situation had been reversed.

Men Peons of Their Females.

"THE thing to do is to use the same finesse and patience in winning the man over to the feminist movement that we have employed to get his wealth and his wages for these thousands of years.

"At bottom he is a generous creature, only a trifle set in his ways, which is natural, seeing how set his mother was in her ways. He will join the 'movement.' He will be obliged to do so in time. When the women get into the wagon, with all their things and their intentions the home is deserted, in spirit at least. He cannot stand that. He is obliged to have some place to 'rest.' He will get in, therefore, and trek to the land of her desire, if for nothing else but to have peace, from her everlasting importunities.

"There is much to be said on his side. It is astonishing how many men are the peons of their female families, which is just as bad as what is told of women who are slaves of theirs, though we hear much less from the peons than we do from the slaves.

"Still, they are beginning to talk, they are beginning to tell on us a little. There is a short story in the December McClure's entitled 'Reincarnation; the Story of a Private Hell,' which contains one of the most terrific arraignments I ever saw of the useless, virtuous, vicious wife. There are literally millions of women like her, whose husbands never expose them. But they will. Before this year is ended some man who can write with his forked tongue will produce a novel in which the mean, little, whimpering, useless wife will play the star role, instead of the commonplace serpentine, who merely tempts him.

"When women begin to fight men they will get what is coming to them. And it will be a-plenty. And much of it is about as long overdue as suffrage for women.

"I venture to return for a moment to the women of the valley at home. They do move. They rise before dawn, gentle souls who find peace in the labor of their hands and in their astonishing faith. They are

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Coming Events.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I have just received the following telegram:

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 31, 1932.—In the Supreme Court today Judge Fubbledy handed down a far-reaching opinion, which is expected to settle all our medical troubles soon. The case is that of the Board of Health vs. George Washington Phillips. It appears that Phillips, in apparent defiance of the law, recommended to a neighbor the eating of bran as a remedy for constipation. While it had been proved that the neighbor had been greatly benefited by the bran, the court ruled that the law clearly implies that the recommending of bran is practicing medicine. The verdict of 10 years in the penitentiary was affirmed.

In addition to the above I find in the International Journal of American Medical Science the statement that a Christian Science practitioner, found guilty of curing at least 20 persons, has escaped to Europe. The I. J. has also an able editorial urging a national law prohibiting advice of any kind that does not come from a paid M. D. It learns that several old women in Illinois have been arrested for recommending sulphur and molasses.

It is encouraging, is it not, to get an occasional glimpse of the future? MEDICUS.

Science and Spirits.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"It is to laugh." That Dutch scientists after 22 years experimenting have found that there is a spirit world is announced in the Sunday Post-Dispatch magazine. Why, hundreds of Americans, without a medium, and with but a Ouija board and alone, long ago discovered this scientific fact. What a bother, merely to convince a lot of bonehead skeptics.

SOCRATES MUNSON.

Consumption Should Equal Production.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Mr. Nagel says Federal control of interstate industry is the only way to eliminate business depression whenever it confronts capital. Mr. Nagel ought to know better. Does he not know that there are many contributory causes for these periodical depressions, but that they all take root in the one big cause of it all—capitalism?

The owners of the machinery of production can employ labor only so long as they can find a market for that part of labor's product over and above what goes back to labor as wages. The workers can only consume what their wages will pay for. The employer must look for foreign markets, and when these fail, and they are failing every day, he stops production. When this surplus has been consumed the machinery of production starts again and we have what is called "good times" until society's capacity to consume has again been reached.

Socialists demand that society's purchasing power shall equal its productive power and this can only be brought about by the collective ownership of the machinery of production and distribution. There is no other way.

CONSTANT READER.

The Subconscious Self.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

This was recently published:

"Now, the phenomena of automatic writing and crystal gazing had up to that time been regarded as absolutely inexplicable on other than a supernatural ground. The question at once arose in the minds of Gurney, Myers and other psychical researchers: Can it be that 'sensitives' who write trance messages or see crystal visions merely draw on forgotten reminiscences for the contents of their messages or visions? Investigations set on foot as soon as this question was raised, and continuing to the present day, have left no doubt that, to a large extent at any rate, it must be answered in the affirmative. They have, indeed, proved beyond contradiction that every human being carries within him memories that have totally faded from conscious recollection but may be recalled under certain conditions, and that such memories not infrequently relate to matters of which he never had conscious knowledge but which it can be demonstrated once proved part of his actual experience."

I don't know about trance automatic writing or crystal-gazing. What about automatic writing of an honest, unhypnotizable person, perfectly conscious? The subconscious theory may be correct in some cases. It is very interesting. But there are many to which it does not apply at all. Keep up the search for truth, and don't try to fit facts to easy theories.

Stead was certainly not in a trance when he obtained the writings for his "After Death," which has been six times reprinted since the first volume. OLD MAN.

SPEAKER CLARK'S BLUNDER.

Speaker Clark joined the forces of the opposition to President Wilson and the majority of the Democrats in the House on the tolls exemption repeal bill, just in time to go down to defeat.

The Speaker will share defeat on the repeal bill. His announced speech will serve only to expose his alliance with the interests which are fighting Democratic progress, for the purpose of striking a blow at President Wilson and gaining a little brief glorification by twisting the British lion's tail.

In this crisis Speaker Clark parallels his course at the Baltimore convention. He allies himself with Boss Murphy and the representatives of the great interests that are fighting desperately to destroy President Wilson's influence and to check the successful assault of the Democratic administration on privilege.

Mr. Underwood's speech left no room for doubt in the public mind or in the minds of any of the Democrats who are following him as to the real meaning of the tolls exemption laws and as to the backing of the men who are opposing repeal. Mr. Underwood frankly defined the tolls exemption as a discrimination in favor of the shipping interests, and therefore an indirect subsidy to the Shipping Trust. The wedge of privilege was clearly exposed in the speech.

On the vital point of our fidelity to treaty obligations, we may pass as ridiculous his assertion that we would surrender to British domination if we kept our treaty obligations to Great Britain in a matter involving all the nations. This charge is an insult to the intelligence of the country.

But with reference to the question of the actual violation of the treaty, the best evidence is the wording of the treaty. The clause referring to tolls and conditions is specifically connected with the Clayton-Bulwer treaty guaranteeing the neutralization of any canal, and contains the following pledge:

> The canal shall be free and open to the vessels of commerce and of war of all nations observing the rules, on terms of entire equality, so that there shall be no discrimination against any such nation, or its citizens or subjects, in respect of the conditions or charges of traffic, or otherwise. Such conditions and charges of traffic shall be just and equitable.

Whether the economic policy urged by Mr. Underwood and supported by Speaker Clark is right or wrong, Democratic or undemocratic, here is an agreement in the clearest terms that the canal shall be opened to vessels of all nations "ON TERMS OF ENTIRE EQUALITY, SO THAT THERE SHALL BE NO DISCRIMINATION AGAINST ANY SUCH NATION, OR ITS CITIZENS OR SUBJECTS, IN RESPECT TO THE CONDITIONS OR CHARGES OR TRAFFIC, OR OTHERWISE."

Speaker Clark, Mr. Underwood and their misguided followers are not only fundamentally wrong in their contentions, but they are taking a course which menaces the great democratic movement to revolutionize the Government in the interests of the public, and the fortunes of the Democratic party.

SUITABLE LEADERS.

Collier's Weekly scores with the suggestion that (if they finally force armed intervention in Mexico), W. R. Hearst and Senators Penrose of Pennsylvania, and Fall of New Mexico should be appointed to command the three invading army corps—from the firing line. If Gov. Colquitt of Texas can tear himself away from the spotlight for a few months, and can prove his ability to ride a horse without falling off, he might be given opportunity to lead a company of Texas Rangers on scout duty. Surely these men who are so hot for war do not recommend it for others without intending to take part themselves.

UNDERWOOD'S OFFENSE.

The Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser resents the Post-Dispatch's criticism of Mr. Underwood and rushes to his defense.

Mr. Underwood opposes repeal of the Coastwise Shipping Trust's Panama Canal rebate—an act strongly urged, on the highest ground of national honor and economic justice, by President Wilson.

The distinguished Alabaman has rendered valuable service to the country on other occasions, but in this issue he stands with the railroad-owned Shipping Trust against fair play and in violation of the nation's solemn treaty pledges.

As we remarked before, it seems too bad Alabama must choose between a fanatical advocate of nation-wide prohibition, like Mr. Hobson, and an advocate of indirect ship subsidy, like Mr. Underwood, in selecting a United States Senator. Of the two, Mr. Underwood is, of course, incomparably the abler and saner man.

THE OKLAHOMA, QUEEN OF THE NAVY.

Comparison of the battleship Oklahoma, christened last week by Miss Lorena Jane Cruce, daughter of Gov. Cruce, and the battleship Missouri, launched in 1900, gives a measure of progress in naval architecture in 14 years.

The former is 575 feet long on the water line, 95 feet beam, 27,500 tons displacement and carries 10 14-inch guns, besides 21 five-inch guns. The latter is 388 feet long, 72 feet wide, 12,500 tons displacement and carries four 12-inch guns besides 16 six-inch guns. The Missouri engines are less than 16,000 and the Oklahoma's 38,000 horsepower. The ship named after the younger State is twice as big and powerful a fighting machine as the one named after the older State.

Our dreadnaught class was started in 1906 and 1907 with ships of the Delaware, Michigan, North Dakota and South Carolina class, ranging from 16,000 to 20,000 tons. Lately we have been building superdreadnaughts of more than 26,000 tons. Now we have jumped to a super-superdreadnaught type. The Oklahoma and her sister ship, the Nevada, building at Quincy, Mass., will be queens of the navy for only a brief time. The Pennsylvania, which will be ready for launching in coming months, is of 31,400 tons, as much superior to the former dreadnaughts as the latter were to the former first-class battleships.

In building two battleships a year at present, we add as much to navy strength as the building of six battleships added 12 or 15 years ago. The cost of the annual investment naturally is also much greater.

Another illustration of hopelessly confused ideas at the city hall is the resolution professedly favoring the forfeiture of the Merchants' Bridge and making a vicious attack on the Post-Dispatch for advocating it.

AN ALL ST. LOUIS WORK.

The Pageant and Masque of St. Louis appeals to all St. Louisans of every section and calling to unite in celebrating the historical building and achievements of the city. This is the fine thing in the celebration. In this lies its fundamental value.

In arousing the community spirit of united and harmonious action for the common good the Pageant and Masque calls into action the force that has made St. Louis what it is and the only force that can accomplish what we desire.

The Pageant and Masque can be a success and do its perfect work only by the enthusiastic co-operation of all St. Louisans in word, deed and means.

Thousands will take part in the management and preparation of the event. Thousands will participate in the great spectacle at Art Hill. All can do something either by personal labor or contribution of money. The co-operation should be voluntary.

What a superb thing if the $125,000 needed for the splendid celebration should be contributed by 125,000 or more citizens. Surely there are 125,000 St. Louisans who can give a dollar and more who can give a half or a quarter. Any contribution would express the right spirit.

A VICTORY FOR DECENT GOVERNMENT.

No one who has followed the testimony presented during the three weeks' trial of ex-City Treasurer E. Fred Gerold of East St. Louis can doubt that the verdict of guilty returned by the jurymen after 18 hours of deliberation is a righteous finding.

The facts on which the conviction was obtained were substantially those brought out by the Post-Dispatch in its exhaustive exposure of deplorable conditions in East St. Louis' city affairs. The multiplied acts of thievery concealed in each instance by the same sort of deceptive entries on the books leave no doubt as to intent.

To balance the money appropriated to his own use, the ex-Treasurer credited himself with excessive sums on payments for street improvements, for the redemption of bonds and bond coupons and for other special items of municipal expenditure. His system was a clumsy one, which would have been detected and stopped in its inception by any adequate method of accounting and auditing. That it continued so long and involved as large a sum as it did is typical of the municipal methods that prevailed for years in East St. Louis.

The conviction is a victory for decency and honest government. It will strike dismay to the gang of offenders who have defiantly flouted the law and public sentiment. The outcome of the case strengthens the hands of the prosecution in continuing the pursuit of the many others under indictment for criminal responsibility in the reign of graft and malfeasance that has disgraced one of the most prosperous and advantageously situated communities in the Middle West.

FOOLING THE PEOPLE.

When Joseph W. Bailey was United States Senator from Texas he was the political almoner of the principal railroads and other great corporations doing business in that State. The people dispensed with his services, for cause, and congratulated themselves on having won a victory for popular government.

What they really won was, of course, only a skirmish. Witness:

The State-wide prohibition wing of the Texas Democracy has selected Thomas H. Ball of Houston, railroad attorney and Bailey partisan, as its candidate for the Democratic party's nomination for Governor.

The anti-pro wing has all but finally centered on Clarence Ousley of Fort Worth, journalist and Bailey partisan, as its candidate for the nomination.

Jointly controlling the paramount prohibition issue, the big corporate interests are calmly assured that one or the other of Bailey's satellites will succeed Colquitt as Governor of Texas.

The prohibition issue is thus perceived to serve Big Business admirably as a means of preventing a division of the people on economic lines, and of preventing the election of "radical demagogues" who persist in believing the people and not the chartered corporations ought to control the State government.

Incidentally, Mr. Bailey is now fairly entitled to claim at least a vicarious vindication has been given him by the State which recently, and with some harshness, discharged him out of its service.

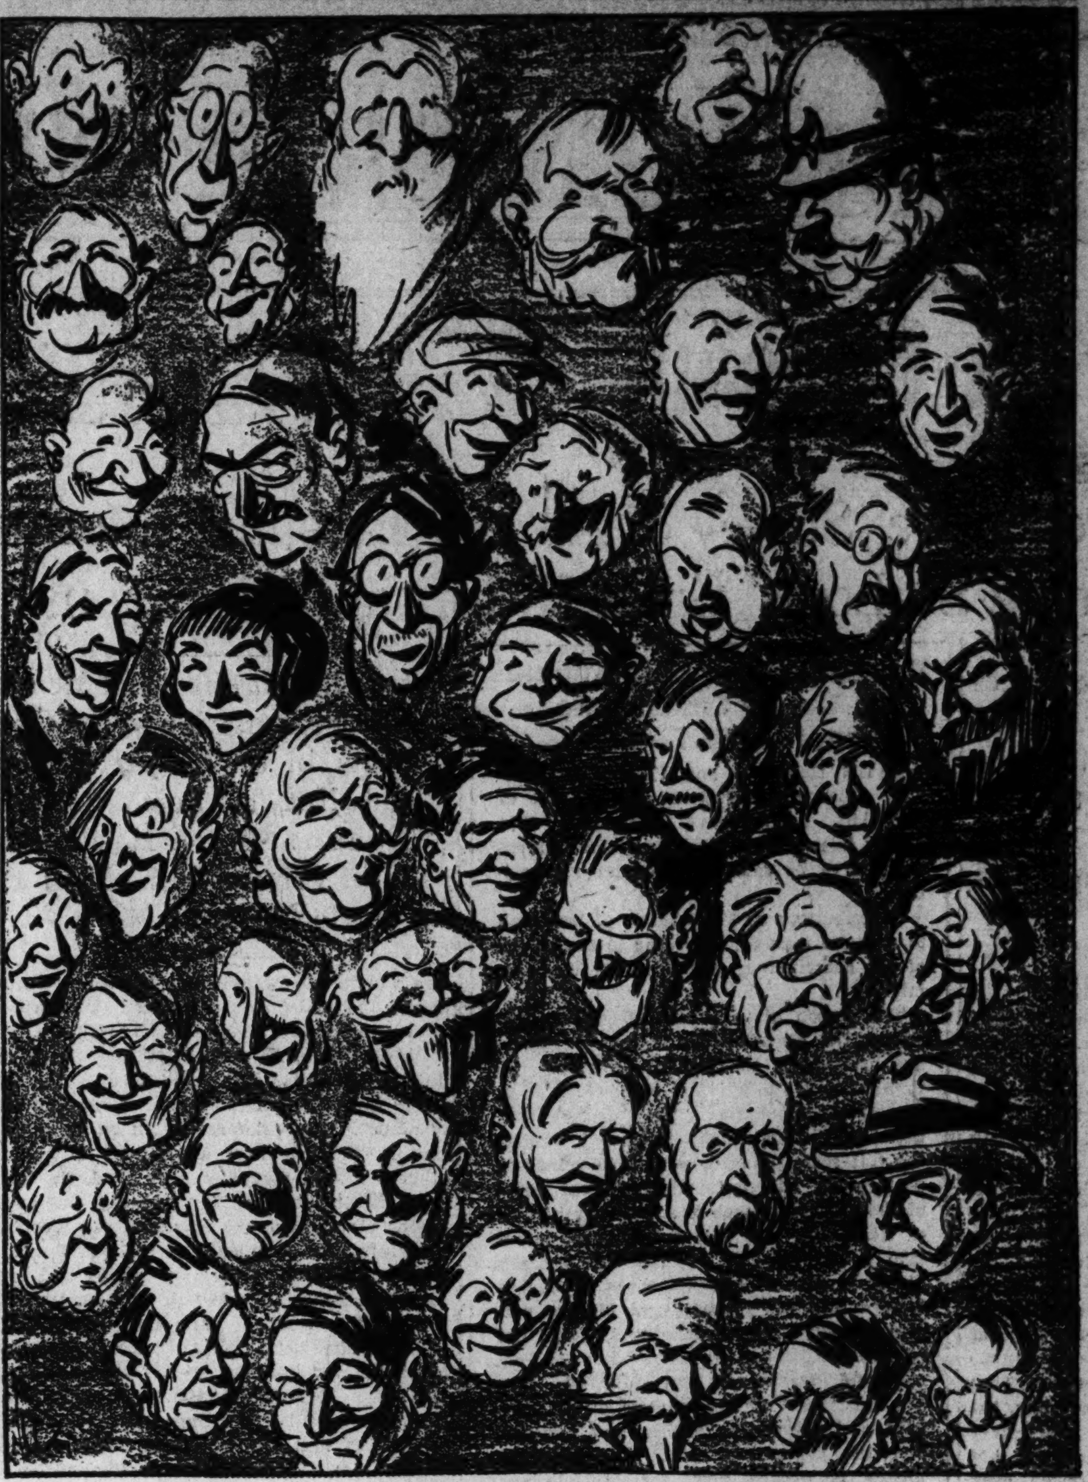
Will this Mr. Taft, who is getting quite "sassy" in magazine articles while the Colonel is away, dare to repeat some of those things after he gets back?



"WHAT'S THE SCORE?"

JUST A MINUTE.

SPRING SONG.

I AM away to the country—
There to rejoice in the Spring!
There to be one with the river,
And to hear the sweet meadowlark sing!
I shall be back on the morrow
The better for having a day
Followed my heart in its roving
Out for a season of play.

I SHALL be back on the morrow
Full of the warmth of the sun,
Sweetened by winds from the southland,
And the music of waters that run.
I am away to the country—
There to rejoice in the Spring!
There to be one with the river,
And to hear the sweet meadowlark sing!

Joseph Conrad says: "As to honor, it's a very fine medieval inheritance which women never got hold of. It wasn't theirs. Since it may be laid as a general principle that women always get what they want we must suppose they didn't want it." All Englishmen are disposed to speak of women as if there were not any present.

Sen. Culpeper's Tired-Man, Pevely Sadders, Tired of Being Abused.

By LEWIS B. ELY.

"I ain't so all-fired useless," whined Pevely Sadders yesterday afternoon when Artist Carlisle Martin and I drove out to give him a chance to reply to Senator Culpeper's accusations, and also to get his picture. Artist Martin and I didn't want the public to condemn him as an utterly worthless character without a hearing.

(The Martin portrait is the first ever attempted of Senator Culpeper's hired man. Mr. Martin was not feeling well when he did it. Still it is a fair likeness. The longer you look at the face the less you see in it. Look long enough and you'll see almost nothing in it except the suggestion of a quid of tobacco, which might be mistaken for a permanent dislocation if he did not shift it every 30 minutes or so.)

Pevely has not been reading the papers during Senator Culpeper's absence in Washington, so we had to acquaint him with the fact that the Senator has been publicly belittling his services and referring to him as "my worthless hired man," "no-account," "trifling," "ornery," "useless," etc. Which stirred Pevely to reply in his nasal drawl that resembles the bleat of a sheep:

"I reckon I ain't so all-fired useless as the Senator claims. He used me to test his new rope fire-escape from the loft winder. He used me to bite the tail offen that fox terrier pup that a lady give him and when it growed up it turned around and bit me—durn that dawg!

"He uses me to clean out the cistern and he lets me down head first in the well to fish up the bucket every time it draps off. Once he used me to stop a hole in the fence to keep the hawgs in till I got so tired of settin' thar waitin' for a carpenter that I got a boy to fetch me the tools and built a whole new section o' fence myse'f!

"He calls me his tired-man instead of his hired-man, but jest the same he uses me to play the fiddle or dance the buck-and-wing some nights when I'm so wore out I can hardly set up. And he uses me to try his speeches on. If I'm his tired-man I reckon I know who makes me tired.

"If I'm plumb everlastin' useless, why don't he git me a job in a public office?"

BEAUTY CULTURE.

GRACE.—One person finds a cure in sprinkling dry salt over the scalp and massaging. Another uses salt water with success, moistening the scalp two or three times a week. Another, disheartened by the salt trial, finds a panacea in cold tea, accompanied by rubbing the scalp with the tips of the fingers in rotary motion. A tea made of yellow dock root is sometimes efficacious. Perhaps the great majority of failures in the use of any one of these simple remedies is lack of persistence in their application. A popular prescription for the arrest of falling hair and bringing new hair in sight on thin and bald spots consists of one-half ounce oil of mace and one pint deodorized alcohol. Two more "excellent tonics": Mix enough sulphur and water together to form a thin mixture; add a few drops of your favorite perfume, and apply to scalp as often as convenient, massaging well into roots of hair with tips of fingers. Or mix together 1 ounce glycerin, 1 ounce bay rum, 1 pint strong sage tea, and apply every other night, rubbing well into scalp. Both tonics are fine for falling hair. Pure air and sunshine must not be forgotten.

HEALTH HINTS.

J. C. H.—To disinfect rooms after contagious diseases, spray formaldehyde thoroughly over interior of room, and close tightly all doors and windows for a few days. Even smallpox germs cannot withstand this drug.

TRYING.—"Knock-kneed" persons are treated (when young enough) with splints, in a majority of cases, all treatment depending upon conditions. Orthopedic surgeons treat such cases and they receive attention in hospitals. (Oatmeal and other starchy foods are fattening. Breathe pure air; exercise.)

ANXIOUS.—A soft-corn writer says: An immediate relief and a cure as well may be had for soft corns by powdering common chalk and putting it between the toes. Even when the corn has formed an abscess this is a remedy sure and swift. A second best cure is a thin layer of cotton. The corn has been formed by friction and perspiration and any remedy that is liquid only aggravates the trouble. A woman writes: My husband suffered untold misery from a soft corn between the toes until one day a friend told him to touch it with a few drops of turpentine night and morning and keep a little piece of absorbent cotton between the toes. He did so, and, after a few applications, the terrible tormentor was killed and removed, and he no longer has any fears of soft corns.

THANKS.—Physicians differ as to the new remedy. It is reported in the German newspapers that Prof. Ehrlich has decided to bring suit for criminal slander against a Berlin physician who recently made the assertion that the administration of salvarsan was so deadly that it might be prohibited in Germany by law, and that 275 deaths had occurred as a result of the use of Salvarsan, besides numerous cases of blindness, deafness, lameness, etc. Prof. Ehrlich replied that it was at present impossible to determine how many deaths had occurred from this cause, but that even 275 was an infinitesimal number when compared with the number of cases which had been treated. It is said that he will call upon the medical fraternities of Europe and of America to give evidence as to their experience in the use of the drug.

HOUSEHOLD HELPS.

J. E. H.—A housekeeper says: "I have read a good deal about blacking stoves. We have washed our stove clean and instead of blacking we use vaseline or olive oil. It is less trouble and keeps looking nice longer. Put it on with a woolen cloth.

FRANK.—"Not too warm a room and plenty of water," is the rule for palms. Leaves must be sprayed frequently. Set the pot in a pail of water. It is said that no reliable kind sells for less than $5. One woman writes: A neighbor whose healthy looking ferns and palms were the envy of her friends told me she watered them frequently with weak cold tea left from a meal, afterward working the wet tea leaves into the soil at the roots. Since, I have tried this treatment on ferns and other foliage plants with marked success.

ZEILER.—The most approved method of storing eggs at home is by the use of silicate of soda or water glass, allowing a quart of the glass to 10 quarts of cold water. Have ready a butter tub well scalded and rinsed, and in this pack the eggs, small end down. Cover with the water glass solution, put a cover on the tub and keep in a cold dark place until used. Inspect occasionally and add more water if necessary to replace that lost by evaporation. Eggs put up in this way will keep for months and "beat" almost equal to fresh eggs. The whites will be a little thinner than fresh eggs, but there is no disagreeable or unnatural taste to them. The eggs must be fresh when put into the preservative.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HAROLD.—Phone Board of Education.

T. S.—Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, 477 Madison av., New York.

B. H.—The islands in the Mississippi are under private ownership.

D. D. M.—See "salt beads" at this office. Readers are tired of it.

NO SIG.—As to surveyor for Government, get full free information at Civil Service office, 3d and Olive.

GEO.—You may tell which foot of a horse is lame if you observe that he puts down one foot more lightly than the other.

MRS. L. S.—Golden wedding anniversary invitation may be on gold paper or printed in gold letters. Invitation: Fiftieth anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. Blank at home Wednesday evening, April 8, 1914.

J. F. S.—Excellent preparation for retaining the crease in men's trousers: One ounce gum tragacanth, one ounce gum arabic. Reduce to fine powder and mix. Dissolve one tablespoon of this powder in half pint hot water. Shake until thoroughly dissolved. Turn the trousers wrong side out and moisten a strip one inch wide down the front of the leg. Turn to right side again and press as usual with hot iron. Another way: Turn trousers wrong side out and attach to edge of leg seams, just over the knee, a silk patch, 8 inches long and as wide as the width of the garment's leg. Sew this securely along the outer edge of the seams. Turn again to the right side and press the crease firmly from top to bottom of the leg. The silk aids in retaining the crease, permitting the heavy cloth to slide freely over the knees when sitting or stooping, thus avoiding the unsightly "bagging" at the knee.

C. C. S.—There is a difference of 13 days in the calendar used in Russia and that which obtains in the United States, in England and parts of Europe other than Russia. The calendar has had a long and curious history and in the last thousand years has been many times revised. Russia is one of the few countries that still adhere to the old Julian calendar, which was adopted by the order of Julius Caesar. It consisted of 365¼ days, which is slightly in excess of the true solar year, and consequently the calendar after a space of time did not correspond to the astronomical conditions. This error was corrected by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582 by dropping 10 days, moving the date forward to that place and devising a form of calendar in which the length of the year was held to be 365 days 5 hours 12 seconds. England did not follow in the adoption of the new calendar until 1752, when by act of Parliament she abolished the Julian and established the Gregorian. To correct the error in time it was arranged that the date following Sept. 2 of that date should be called Sept. 14. It had been necessary for Gregory to drop but 10 days, but a century year having intervened there was one more day's difference in time. Now there are two more days' difference, or 13 days in all.

ON THE SQUARE MR PRESIDENT YOU ARE THE HARDEST MAN FOR ME TO GET ACQUAINTED WITH I EVER BUMPED UP AGAINST, EVERYWHERE I GO YOU GO. DONT YOU SUPPOSE I EVER WANT A MINUTE TO MYSELF, ETC—
OH LOOK IT'S THE PRESIDENT
PLAIN WOODROW WILSON
PRESIDENT WILSON
FROM CHICAGO RECORD-HERALD

THE SAME, BUT DIFFERENT.

Farm to Table Post

REACHING BOTTOM.

Chicago Tribune: The parcel post is reaching bottom. A new order by Postmaster-General Burleson connects the postal service with the kitchen and pantry more closely than ever. Under this new ruling farmers will be able to send garden produce a distance of 150 miles "through the mails" in ordinary crates and boxes used in shipment by express.

It will be welcome to city folks and farmers alike.

LOOKS LIKE A MONOPOLY.

New York Globe: It is not probable that private express companies, whatever some of them now say, will long continue to compete with the public. If they can develop business that the Government does not handle they may survive, but not if the Government takes the whole of the express field.

SCOPE OF NEW PRIVILEGE.

Boston Globe: Hereafter butter, eggs, fruits, berries, vegetables, dressed poultry and other farm products, in lots weighing from 21 to 50 pounds and designed for shipment within the first and second zones—approximately 150 miles—can be packed in boxes and crates similar to those generally used when sending such articles by express.

GAIN AT BOTH ENDS.

Knoxville Sentinel: The Department of Agriculture has found that farm products selling at $3.24 on the farm are retailed for $5.55 in the average. If the farmer should accept $4.25, post paid, he would get a profit and the consumer would have $1.30 of his $5.55.

A FORECAST.

Minneapolis Journal: Probably the drift will be toward division of the business between patient and cheap service by the postoffice and exacting service willing to pay any reasonable price to the express companies.

MUST EDUCATE THE PEOPLE.

Indianapolis News: This is commendable, but if the experience of the Wells Fargo Express Co. counts for anything, the people will have to be educated into adopting the new order.

WORK FOR RETAIL TRADERS.

Quincy Journal: Retail merchants of course must realize that more work is going to be done by mail orders sent to stores near home. They must by advertising keep their goods before the outlying farmers of their territory, or their rival around the corner will get it.

PLEA FOR EXPRESS COMPANIES.

Atlanta Constitution: The effort in some quarters to engineer parcel post legislation with the single object in view of exterminating the express companies is both unjust and impolitic.

THE 100-LB. LIMIT URGED.

New York American: Mr. Burleson should develop the parcel post until not only 50-pound parcels, but 100-pound parcels can be carried.

CUTS RAILROADS BOTH WAYS.

Cincinnati Enquirer: It has added millions of tons annually to the mails carried by the railroads of the country, and, as noted in the withdrawal of the United States Express Co., it has reduced the receipts of these same railway companies through the decline in the express traffic.

PEOPLE WAKING UP TO IT.

Louisville Courier-Journal: The masses of the people are just beginning to realize the uses and advantages of the new service.

"Votes for Women"

SUFFRAGIST COMMANDMENTS.

Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin: The Women's Ten Commandments to the aldermanic candidates of Chicago are enumerated as follows:

Thou shalt not be the tool of any special interest.

Thou shalt not set thy party above the people.

Thou shalt hearken to the cry for clean milk.

Thou shalt not forget the death rate of babies in thy ward.

Neither shalt thou forget the morals of the young; nor shalt thou bend thine ear to small theaters that fight ordinances for ventilation and for clean pictures.

When special and powerful interests ask for favors, the public policy shall be near to thee.

Thou shalt not have an office connected with a saloon.

Thou shalt have a keen sense of smell to detect nuisances and garbage evils; garbage dumps shalt thou abolish.

Thou shalt help to keep amusement safe for the city's children.

Thou shalt not hearken to commercialized vice.

PROOF OF RAPID GAIN.

Topeka Capital: That an actual majority of the United States Senate, the vote being 35 to 34, should vote for a constitutional amendment removing all political disabilities from women, is a striking proof how this principle is gaining ground among intelligent people everywhere.

SHAFROTH'S PLAN USELESS.

Indianapolis News: There is no reason for wasting any time over Senator Shafroth's resolution in connection with the question of woman suffrage. For if one thing is certain it is that Congress has no right either to legislate for the states or to compel them to legislate in a certain way.

ONE STATE AT A TIME.

Chicago Journal: If suffragists will turn their batteries on wavering state legislatures they can take their sex out of the political infant class with a speed that will surprise themselves.

PROPER TO BE SUBMITTED.

Philadelphia Telegraph: It is one of those questions that the people may be fairly consulted about, and one entirely proper to be submitted to their consideration and determination through their legislatures in the form of a constitutional amendment.

THE GALLANT PROGRESSIVES.

Indianapolis Star: It is with the Progressives that their hope lie. The Progressive party has made the promotion of the women's cause a part of its program and has invited them into its councils.

THE TAFT FAMILY OPINION.

Cincinnati Commercial Tribune: The advocates of woman's suffrage are learning philosophy at least. They are optimistic enough to make a victory out of the fact that they didn't get beaten as badly as they expected to be in the Senate.

RACE PREJUDICE A BARRIER.

Mobile Register: The 12 Southern States alone would be sufficient to defeat an amendment that would, as Mr. Borah pertinently says, "add 2,000,000 to the list of those whom they must disfranchise;" but the Southern States do not stand alone. The five Pacific coast states are precisely in the same boat.

CHICAGO HAS MOST VOTERS.

Newark Star: On the basis of voting population Chicago is now the chief city of the Union. Its registration for next month's aldermanic election, now complete, is 693,624, composed of 474,981 men and 218,643 women, and exceeds that of New York by about 20,000.

WHY WOMEN SHOULD VOTE.

Atlanta Georgian: Voting by women will improve humanity, because it will compel men to seek and earn the approval of women.

HOW MEN GOT THE BALLOT.

New York World: Every white man in the United States who has the ballot received it from a state. Three generations had followed that which won independence before all American-born white men were given a vote. In less than one generation since the question was first impressively raised, white women in 10 states have gained the right to participate in presidential elections.

A COMMANDING ISSUE.

Houston Post: The woman's suffrage question is going to be a commanding issue in the United States. In fact, we think it has attained that degree of importance already.

BOUND TO COME.

Houston Chronicle: Woman suffrage is bound to come. Its universal acceptance throughout the republic is only a question of years—possibly a very few years.

Being a President

WILL WIN NEW FRIENDS.

New York Sun: We are mistaken if Mr. Wilson's unprepared little speech about himself as an ordinary human being temporarily President of the United States does not win for him new friendships in a great many quarters. The speech was charming in its spontaneous frankness, modesty and manliness.

READY TO "BE SHOWN."

Savannah News: It is apparent that he has no pride of opinion, that he is ready to be "shown" if something better than he suggests is offered by somebody else.

A SIGN OF OVERWORK.

Detroit Free Press: The remarkable address made by the President before the Press Club, Friday, must have aroused apprehensions in all minds except those that are open only to unthinking worship of Mr. Wilson. It was not the speech of a well man. The signs have not been wanting for some months that Mr. Wilson has been overworking.

A REAL MAN AT THE HELM.

Boston Post: This talk of President Wilson is an intimate and undoubtedly sincere revelation of personality. We have in the executive office at Washington not only a President but a real man.

A BURDEN BEARER.

Milwaukee Journal: Reading it, who will not feel a greater sympathy with the man we have chosen to bear this heavy and constant burden?

GIVING THE NATION HIS BEST.

Pittsburg Dispatch: He gives the impression that, whatever mistakes may be made, he is doing the best he can and giving the nation the best that is in him.

EASIER SLEDDING AHEAD.

New York Tribune: In due time, as the strain of the presidency relaxes, Mr. Wilson will be able to give freer rein to the goodfellowship and naturalness of feeling which he says are bubbling up within him. If his psychology is accurate the public will not long continue to think of him as lonely and cold.

SHIRT-SLEEVE DIPLOMACY.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: This speech is a human document, if ever there was one. It is shirt-sleeve diplomacy in the best sense: the average American prefers the rail-splitter to the hair-splitter every time.

ONLY ROAD TO PROGRESS.

Ohio State Journal: He does not dig a chasm between himself and other men; he rather seeks to bridge the one that is there. He does not argue much. He rather feels his way. He appeals to the soul of a man. And that is the only road to progress.

A TOUCH OF NATURE.

New York Evening Post: The whole is a touch of nature which will make his countrymen feel more kin with President Wilson.

WHAT IT REVEALS.

Chicago Inter-Ocean: There is the intimate picture of a man honestly trying to do his duty as he sees it, of an American and a gentleman not afflicted with cocksureness or overegoism.

HIS OPEN-MINDEDNESS.

Kansas City Star: All mankind loves that quality of open mindedness in a man. It gives men confidence in the one who possesses it.

Canal Tolls Fight

NATIONAL SAFETY AND HONOR.

New York Herald: Would President Wilson, of all men, have repudiated his own utterances and the pledge of his party's platform if he were not convinced that to follow the line of least resistance, to accept the easier way, would bring strain upon our national honor and danger to the vital interests of the country? The American people entertain no doubts of the President's intelligence, his veracity, his patriotism. They are bound to entertain serious doubts of the intelligence or patriotism, or both, of any man who refuses to support the President in his plea for national safety.

BENEFICIARIES OF TOLLS REPEAL.

New York Times: Before it can be contended that the exemption is justifiable economically it must be shown that the tolls which are to be waived shall go to the benefit of shippers, rather than to the overflowing coffers of the combine within the monopoly. There is no odious practice which the railways have been forced to abandon which is not practiced by the coastwise marine. Its rates are regulated neither by law nor by competition, but the railways are prevented from abating its extortions by prohibition of law. Favor to such an economic interest is a burden upon commerce. It is no more "American" than it is reasonable.

SPEAKER CLARK'S DEFECTION.

Indianapolis News: Speaker Clark, who was the Hearts candidate for the Democratic nomination, is opposed to repeal. It seems fair to assume that the organization that supported him at Baltimore, as far as it continues to exist, is also opposed. In other words, these men are not interested in any way in the success of the Wilson administration—rather they would prefer to see it fail, at least in part. They would possibly be glad to see it "make good, but not too good." Few of these men care anything about repeal one way or the other. Mr. Hearst fought hard against the nomination of Mr. Wilson. During the campaign that followed he gave the Democratic party practically no support. Everyone knows that Speaker Clark's soreness continues, for he has not been at the least pains to hide it—rather he has advertised it whenever opportunity offered.

THE SHIP-SUBSIDY LOBBY.

New York World: A lobby that can compel the United States to violate a treaty, thereby assuming an attitude of hostility to all the world; that can induce Congress to put a monopoly on the free list at Panama, and that can commit the Democratic party to subsidies, which it has always fought, will not fail to be heard from later on. The next demand will not be for a paltry million. It will be for a hundred millions.

BATTLE ROYAL IN THE SENATE.

Cincinnati Commercial Tribune: Of course, the battle royal will take place in the Senate. That body, always jealous of the encroachments of executive power, is less under the influence of the White House occupant than are the Representatives. In the upper chamber the question will be discussed more broadly, and all the conflicting phases of this vitally important international question will be thrashed out before action is taken.

In the final vote we believe Americanism, without regard to political affiliations, will prevail. Any foreign policy which makes necessary a downright surrender of American rights and prestige isn't going to be popular with the voters of the United States.

Pending Trust Bills

THE MEASURES PROPOSED.

Indianapolis News: Proposed anti-trust legislation, as first contemplated by the administration, embraced these five bills: (1) A measure further to define offenses under the Sherman anti-trust law. (2) The trades relations bill. (3) An interstate trade commission bill. (4) A bill for the control of interlocking directorates. (5) A bill to bring so-called "holding companies" within the purview of the law. The first of these bills has fortunately been abandoned.

WILL EVOLVE AND MARCH.

Chicago Record-Herald: Almost everybody in and out of Congress admits that a trade commission modeled on the Commerce Commission ought to be created. Once created, it will evolve and march, as the Commerce Commission has developed and marched.

NEEDED IN THE FUTURE.

Springfield Republican: The sure thing is that the Interstate Trade Commission will be needed in the future under any system of regulation, whether "regulated competition" or regulated monopoly.

AS WITH ALL INHIBITIONS.

Philadelphia Telegraph: It is an unfortunate thing for all legitimately conducted business that lawless operations in a few instances have afforded excuse for legislation that must affect all.

JAILS FOR RICH MALEFACTORS.

Quincy Journal: Rich malefactors must serve in jail. The courts must have no alternative about sending guilty trust magnates to the penitentiary. That is the particular tooth which the Sherman law needs.

GENERALLY FAVORED.

Buffalo Times: No measure of those now awaiting action by Congress has been received with more general favor throughout the country than the bill providing for an interstate trade board.

"MAD RUSH TO SOCIALISM."

Philadelphia Public Ledger: This Interstate Trade Commission, when safely launched, will, within the decade, be fixing prices, regulating output, contracting initiative and driving all business into molds. Government is being made a Juggernaut. There is a mad rush to Socialism.

PROGRESSIVE ADVICE.

Indianapolis Star: It is difficult to see what good purpose will be served by a Federal Trade Commission that amounts only to an enlarged Bureau of Corporations. It would be well for the Democratic majority to do for corporate business of the country "what the Government now does for the national banks and what is now done for the railroads by the Interstate Commerce Commission."

DEMANDS JAIL SENTENCES.

San Francisco Chronicle: Exactions which amount to unfair competition with the intent to drive competitors out of business are so inherently abominable that nothing short of jail sentence for those guilty of them will satisfy our sense of justice.

THE COMMISSION'S FUNCTIONS.

Minneapolis Journal: The Trade Commission will aid Congress in shaping legislation, the courts in getting evidence, the Department of Justice in giving effect to decrees.

SHACKLING THE PRESS.

The New York World, Philadelphia Telegraph, New York Herald and other papers object to that section of the bill which penalizes publication of any information obtained by the commission, without its authority. The World says:

"This bill in other respects appears to be wisely drawn, but it should not receive a vote in either house of Congress until its penalties for mischievous publicity are made to run against the officers who may be tempted to abuse their powers. When the newspapers of the United States are to be shackled, the job should be, and we think will be done in the open, with everybody's knowledge if not with everybody's assent."

LABOR AND FARM EXEMPTIONS.

Houston Chronicle: The anti-trust measure which has just come out of congressional committee, in defining combinations in restraint of trade, makes exceptions of labor unions and farmers' organizations. This is in keeping with the letter and spirit of the Baltimore platform.

"MIGHTY BLOW AT MONOPOLY."

The Richmond Times-Dispatch especially approves the proposition that victims of monopoly, suing for damages, shall be permitted to offer in evidence the testimony on which the Government has previously secured a conviction. The Times-Dispatch adds: "To us this little provision appears to be a mighty blow at monopoly and for legitimate competition."

Importing Food

WHY PRICES DON'T FALL.

Ohio State Journal: Millions of pounds of meat are imported from Argentina to this country and yet the prices do not decline. Why? Because, as the Agricultural Department bulletin says: "It is not assumed that the American-controlled companies in Argentina are using Argentine beef to beat down the prices of Chicago beef."

As soon as the tariff law was passed, the Chicago packers took possession of the Argentine beef trade. These houses have also pre-empted nearly all the refrigerating space in ocean steamers running between Argentina and New York.

INTERNATIONAL MONOPOLIES.

Butte Miner: Undoubtedly the intention of the Underwood bill was to give the consumers in this country cheaper meat, or at least to provide a safety valve which would prevent it from going any higher than it has been in the last two or three years.

That this intention will fail as long as the Chicago packers own the principal sources of supply, both in South America and in the United States, goes without saying.

It is probable that a similar condition will develop when sugar goes on the free list two years hence.

HELD ON ICE FOR A RISE.

Quincy Whig: Argentine beef has just been brought to Chicago and put into the coolers there, owing to a temporary glut in the beef market at New York, where trade has been slack and the market unable to take the importations of South American beef.

BLAMING THE RETAILER.

New Orleans Times-Democrat: New Yorkers have begun to wonder what becomes of the Argentine beef shipped into that port in steadily increasing volume. A New York newspaper reports that Argentine beef has been sold at wholesale "from 2 to 4 cents a pound below the price of the domestic product, but consumers have not felt the relief to which they are entitled because retail prices have been very generally kept up."

BUTTER FROM NEW ZEALAND.

Indianapolis News: The appearance of New Zealand butter on the retail markets of Indianapolis shows to what straits our dairy business has been brought. The reduction of tariffs has made it possible for the creameries of New Zealand, Siberia, Australia and Denmark to send butter to the United States, and for the slaughter houses of Australia and the Argentine to endeavor to make up the grave deficiency in the meat trade. The shipment of New Zealand butter was frozen in Auckland and came—a whole ship load—to the United States. It is sweet and rich to the taste. The butter will bring perhaps a few cents less a pound than the high-grade Indiana creamery, produced within fifty miles of Indianapolis.

OTHER MARKETS AFFECTED.

Charlotte (N. C.) Observer: The British Board of Trade has issued a gloomy memorandum pointing out that the effect of tax-free food importations into the United States has been to advance considerably the prices of foodstuffs in Great Britain and to cause actual distress in some quarters. Canadian supplies, including meats, dairy products and a miscellany of agricultural commodities, which formerly went to England, now go to the United States. Supplies from Argentina, Australia and other countries have likewise been diverted hither, reducing the amount available for England and enhancing the price. There is similar complaint in Canada that the cost of living has been very materially increased.

Princess Zita Becomes First Lady in Austria

Young Archduchess, Bride of Third in Line for Dual Throne, Takes the Exalted Position That Is Denied to the Wife of the Heir—Makes Debut at Ball Given by Emperor-King.

VIENNA, Austria, March 28.—For the first time young Archduchess Zita, who not quite two years ago married Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, took the place of "first lady of the land" at the ball recently given by Emperor-King Francis Joseph in Schoenbrunn Castle.

Between her husband and the throne there is only the 83-year-old Emperor and his heir, Archduke Francis Ferdinand, whose morganatic wife, Duchess of Hohenberg, has to content herself with a position very inferior. The thought of young Archduchess Zita having all the honors at the court ball must have been galling for the poor lady. Francis Ferdinand has valiantly endeavored to persuade the Emperor that his wife's place should be, at least, with the married Duchesses and that she should certainly have precedence of the unmarried ones.

Of the dual kingdom's 17 different languages and dialects Archduchess Zita has tried to learn only three, including Hungarian and Bohemian, and has mastered neither. She has been studying like a school girl, but has "struck" at taking a further trio when her present course is ended.

His Majesty probably knows better than any man alive that at his demise Hungary will make a stupenduous effort to throw off the Austrian yoke. He knows that sentiment alone holds the two kingdoms together today. It is his earnest wish therefore that both the young Archduke Charles, the heir presumptive, and Archduchess Zita shall be fully conversant with Hungarian life and customs. His Majesty has been heard to say that he has greater hopes of the Archduchess Zita than of her husband.

Early to Ball, Early to Bed.

The Emperor's extraordinary show of interest in the Archduchess has led to a story being put into circulation, according to which his will has a clause barring absolutely Francis Ferdinand's morganatic wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, or her children from ever mounting the throne. However, Francis Ferdinand may change all that when he becomes Emperor.

A ball that lasts one hour and forty-five minutes hardly seems worth attending, yet no invitation to a society function in Europe is more coveted than one to the annual court ball given by Emperor Francis Joseph in Schoenbrunn Castle. For the recent imperial entertainment the instructions issued warned the guests to be assembled by 6 p. m. in the big gallery of the palace. At that hour precisely, the court walked in, the aged Emperor, with the Duchess of Cumberland at the head of the procession. At 6:15 dancing began in the Marie Antoinette room, to which dancers only were admitted, mothers and chaperones remaining in the big gallery. At 8 o'clock dancing ceased and the whole party withdrew to the tea room, where supper was served at little tables.

Protracted conviviality at this meal is out of the question, for at 9 o'clock all lights go out and the castle resumes its habitual sombreness. Even this early discontinuing of festivity is dissipation for the venerable Emperor, keeping him out of bed a whole hour after his usual time of retiring. Ordinarily Francis Joseph is in bed at 8 o'clock, but he is invariably at work by 6 in the morning and often rises as early as 5.

For this brief entertainment the court ladies have to prepare elaborate costumes and are put to great expense. The invitations numbered 600 and were issued only to persons having the correct number of quarterings on their coats-of-arms and to members of the Diplomatic Corps and Cabinet Ministers.

Wives Must Have Long Pedigrees.

The wives of these officials are not invited unless they happen to be bearers of the necessary 16 quarterings.

The supper was not prepared in the castle, which cannot boast of anything but the simplest kitchen stuff, but was sent out from the Burg Palast in the city in heated carriages.

The rooms of the palace were decorated with the finest palms and other exotic trees from the imperial conservatories. Plants in full bloom, azaleas, camellias, hyacinths, daffodils and lilies of the valley formed the foreground of the decorations and from moss-covered tree trunks hung hundreds of orchids. This wealth of floral decoration had to be brought across the Schoenbrunn Park in a temperature which for several weeks has never been much above zero.

For the cotillion 600 bouquets were prepared and the court gardener-in-chief has had an anxious time watching his plants, for no flowers have been available from the Riviera.

CZAR, AS TEMPERANCE AID, WILL NOT TOAST SOLDIERS

ST. PETERSBURG, March 28.—The Czar has announced that the custom, centuries old, of the Czar's drinking to the health of the soldiers after reviewing the troops will be abandoned and that instead the officers will suggest that the soldiers give cheers for the Czar and the other members of the imperial family.

The imperial order is probably connected with the Czar's recent rescript pointing out the moral and physical havoc being wrought by vodka drinking

TURKISH GIRLS TAKE JOBS AS TELEPHONE OPERATORS

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 28.—The Anglo-French Telephone Co., which obtained a concession from the Turkish Government to install a telephone system in Constantinople, has completed the work of laying 28,000 miles of wire, including eight submarine cables, and opened the service with 4000 subscribers. The operators are all native girls, Greek, Armenian, Jewish and a few Turkish. This is the first time Turkish women have accepted work in a public place.

MUD-BESPATTERED WOMEN DEMAND GUARDS ON AUTO

LONDON, March 28.—A campaign is being waged in London to require all motor owners to equip their vehicles with mud guards, which will prevent the wheels from throwing mud on the people walking in the narrow streets, which are always muddy during winter. It is a common sight in London to see fashionably gowned women with their clothes spattered with mud from passing automobiles and busses.

NO PARISIAN FOUND FIT FOR MODEL FOR APHRODITE

PARIS, March 28.—Not being able to find a suitable model for his "Aphrodite," the face of which had to portray all the graces, Rodin, the famous sculptor, has found a novel way out of his dilemma by deciding to keep the head veiled. The statue is to figure in a new play at the Rennaisance Theater.

WOMAN SWALLOWS RADIUM, RECOVERED BY OPERATION

VIENNA, March 28.—A woman in a local hospital under radium treatment for cancer of the throat accidentally swallowed a tube containing $6250 worth of the valuable metal. Fearing the radium would be fatal to her, an operation was performed and the tube recovered.

D'ANNUNZIO'S RED PRINCESS ONLY SHOW GIRL

Italian Poet Angry at Ridicule Heaped on Him When His Mistake at Hall Is Discovered.

PARIS, March 28.—Gabriel d'Annunzio, the famous Italian poet and playwright, attended a brilliant masquerade ball given last Saturday in the studio of the popular young painter, Brunelleschi, and was so fascinated by a beautiful masked woman in Venetian red who, it was whispered, was a real Princess, that D'Annunzio neglected to pay the slightest attention to any of the other guests. He even concealed his own identity, remaining scrupulously unknown to practically all present, so that he might constantly pursue the Princess, who was intensely annoyed by his over-devoted attentions.

Eventually she complained to her hostess and her friends of the "horrid little Italian" who was tagging her about.

At supper, when everybody was commanded by the hostess to unmask, D'Annunzio refused to do so as did the Princess, because she didn't wish the "horrid little Italian" to know her identity. Finally the guests practically forced them to remove their masks.

D'Annunzio was astonished and disgusted to find that his Princess was none other than Maia Malapoloska, a popular music hall star, while she was deeply regretful at her treatment of the lion of all Paris.

D'Annunzio was so annoyed by the general laugh against him that when Edmund Russell, who tried to mollify him, reminded the poet that he knew him well in Rome some years ago and took long walks with him, D'Annunzio replied curtly:

"I don't come from Rome. I'm from Padua. You must be mistaken."

POINCAIRE WOULD GIVE THE PHILLIP II ARMOR TO SPAIN

PARIS, March 28.—The French Government, at the suggestion of President Poincare, has decided to offer to Spain the pieces of the armor of King Phillip II, which are in the Musee de l'Armee at the Invalides. The gift is said to have a commercial value of $400,000. On his recent visit to Paris, King Alfonso saw the armor and expressed a wish that it might be united with the other pieces of his ancestor's armor in Madrid. President Poincare has been bitterly criticised by his enemies for asking that the relics be restored to Spain.

ROYAL BOYS FIND HEALTH OUT OF DOORS

German Crown Prince's Sons Dig Sand on the Sea Shore in Summer and Play in the Snow in the Winter.

BERLIN, March 28.—Emperor William's grandsons are all sturdy little fellows, especially the eldest two of Crown Prince William's four boys, 7-year-old Prince William, who is second in line for the German throne; and 6-year-old Prince Louis Ferdinand. In summer they pass much of their time on the seashore, bathing and digging in the sand and in winter, at their inland home, they enjoy the hardy outdoors sports of the season. They took keen boyish delight recently in a snowstorm in which they were caught.

There is a good deal of guessing about the reason why their father and mother abandoned, this week, the trip they had planned to the German colonies in Africa. The plausible explanation is that there were official differences of opinion upon the subject of the Crown Prince's duties and pleasures.

Statements were made in the Reichstag indicating that arrangement for the four were far advanced a month ago, when there arose a discussion as to the financial arrangements. The Reichstag made it plain that it was not anxious to vote any money unless it could have some control over the trip, and at least some assurance that the Crown Prince would make his main object the serious study of the colonies rather than sport.

A Government statement was finally issued that the journey would not be undertaken this spring because it had been found impossible to make, in the time available, such preparations for it as appear desirable in view of its significance for the colonial policy and its informatory purpose. But this explanation did not carry conviction.

Fashionable Berlin has adopted an odd method of painting the face, introduced recently from St. Petersburg. For some time the favorite stuff for veils for women has been a thin material without spots but with delicately woven flowers, suitable to the season, made to come over the cheek. Now Berlin and the Russian capital have improved on this and at open-air events this spring women will appear with the flowers not on the veil, but actually painted on their cheeks. Berlin specialists declare that the effect is charming as seen under a veil and may become popular.

New Monarch of Albania Has to Invent a Uniform

First of His Line on Europe's Throne, William of Wied Finds Need of Striking Ideas in Royal Costume.

DURRAZZO, Albania, March 28.—Prince William of Wied now transformed into William I of Albania, with his consort, Princess Sophie, has settled down to his duties as ruler of the new State in his very modest capital, Durazzo.

When the new ruler (whose title may be King of Albania, but more likely merely Prince) was greeted on board the Taurus, escorted by an international fleet, by Essad Pasha, the most powerful man in Albania, that tactful statesman declared that Prince William would be a second Scander Bag, the national hero of the Albanians, who scourged the Turks for 25 years in the fifteenth century. Essad showed tact also in addressing Prince William as "M'Pret," which may be translated equally well as Emperor, King or Prince.

It being essential that the new sovereign should wear a fitting uniform on state occasions and having no suitable national costume to copy, William put his wits at work and designed one himself. It is of light gray cloth, cut in a style that combines the characteristics of the Turkish and Albanian uniforms. The Prince's height makes him a commandnig figure; indeed, he towers above all his subjects. Princess Sophie also is tall.

The task of ruling this turbulent principality is no easy one and William's crown, in spite of the backing of England, Germany, France, Italy and Russia, is likely to be far from comfortable. In fact, in responding to the welcoming speech of Essad Pasha, William did not hesitate to admit that he did not accept the throne with a light heart. Not only are the people unaccustomed to a reign of law and order, but in the south the people of Epirus resent bitterly being embraced in Albania.

On his visits to the capitals of the Powers, however, Prince William impressed his sponsors that he possessed so much courage and capacity that there is ground for confidence in his ability to win success.

GARDENER-ARTIST SHARES PROSPERITY WITH VILLAGE

BERLIN, March 28.—Herr Karl Hegemeister, the landscape artist, who spent most of his life as a gardener among cabbage and cauliflower patches and whose genius was not recognized until he was 65, has profited so greatly from recent picture sales that he has presented his home town, Werder-on-the-Havel, with $2500. The Prussian Royal Academy recently recommended to the Kaiser that he confer the title of "Professor," on the gardener-artist.

COMING POLITICAL STORMS EXCITE THE DEPUTIES' CAT

PARIS, March 28.—The French Chamber of Deputies has a mascot. It is a large black cat, and had been around the chamber for several years. It is friendly with all the deputies, showing that he has no political favorites, but it is said that he can foresee a heated political debate and always shows agitation before one is coming off. It has been agitated much lately, it is said.

GERMAN CROWN PRINCE ON RACE HORSE OWNERS' LIST

BERLIN, March 28.—The Crown Prince is interested in several race horses and has some steeplechasers in training in his own stables. He has entered "white with black belt and cap" as his colors, on the register of the German racing authorities. He has always entered his horses in his own name only in military races in the past, but it is supposed he will appear as owner at the public racetrack this season.

PRETTY GIRLS SCARCE IN LONDON, AMERICAN ASSERTS

LONDON, March 28.—London women are very indignant because an American theatrical manager who advertised for 20 pretty girls to take positions in his chorus, has announced that out of 300 London girls who applied only eight were pretty enough to be accepted.

LADY SCOTT SEES HUSBAND'S GRAVE IN FILM

LONDON, March 28.—Lady Scott, wife of Capt. Scott, who lost his life in the ill-fated South Polar expedition, went to Philharmonic Hall and saw the kinematograph pictures taken by H. G. Wells of Capt. Scott's expedition and of his grave.

It was only after many attempts that the explorers' widow steeled herself for the ordeal. Her emotion upon witnessing the pictures of her husband and his grave was apparent. She sobbed aloud when Ponting told of a remark Capt. Scott made while one of the pictures was being taken.

"Won't it be funny when we see ourselves on the films in London?" the Captain remarked.

Lady Scott was accompanied by Home Secretary and Mrs. McKenna and Harold Baker, a member of Parliament.

SOCIETY

Dogs Will This Week Divide Attention With Society but Both Will Be at the Armory, Where All Canine Fashions Will Be on Exhibition to Divide Honors With the Long Line of Patronesses.

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

WHEN the dog show opens tomorrow at the Armory, there will be on exhibition the greatest collection of dogs ever seen in St. Louis.

Dogs of all nations will be there barking defiance at one another in every tongue known to man and dog, because it has become the fashion in the last few years for dog fanciers to bring strange animals called dogs from all countries.

There will be all kinds of dogs, from Miss Ellanore Scott's police dog that is said to have done service with the gendarmerie of Paris and understands only French, to that most comical of dogs, the dachshund, a-dog-and-a-half long and a-half-a-dog high.

Entries have been made for chow dogs from China and disdainful spaniels from Japan. There will be terriers from England, Ireland and Scotland—terriers fox, airdale and black and tan, and those queer little creatures that look like long-haired caterpillars.

Near by will be field dogs, setters and pointers, that we all know and love.

The famous pack of Middlesex English foxhounds will be there, also, houn' dogs and toy dogs, dogs that hark back to their ancestor the wolf, and brindell, sprig-tailed Boston terriers, that are all kinds of a dog.

There will be Moutons—those funny French poodles with their hair done like a landscape garden.

It will be a wonderful sight as will be the people who go to view them because the list of patronesses reads like the social register and everybody will be there dressed up in their new spring togs.

FOR a while it was thought that roller skating would take the place of the dance craze, but it was all a mistake. The dancing goes on with as much zest as ever and to add novelty to it and combine the two crazes many dancers are learning to dance on roller skates.

Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, always one of the best skaters in town, is learning all kinds of fancy steps, then there is Mrs. Ephron Catlin Jr., known as one of the most charming exponents of new dancing, who may be seen out at the old rink as much at home on skates as she is in her dancing shoes.

Miss Ann Collins, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cummings Collins' daughter, is said to be a wonderful skater.

Mrs. Ellie Limberg, whose son is Eddie Limberg, skates well, but since she fell on the ice and broke her wrist she is a little careful about trying the new steps.

Miss Hilda Forster is another skater conspicuous in that throng of good ones; Miss Dorothy Murphy is another.

It is an interesting sight to watch—quite as interesting as the dancing.

A GROUP of society girls, gathered at the residence of Mrs. George C. Hitchcock, 5363 Waterman avenue, Monday morning, promised to devote the whole of the last week in Lent to a neighborhood campaign to gain new members for the St. Louis Children's Aid Society.

Among them were some of the buds of last winter and some who will make their debut next season.

The chairman of this auxiliary committee is Miss Ann Shepley Lionberger, who will be assisted by Misses Frances Gray, Helen Leroy Lane, Enid Simpkins, Elizabeth Crunden, Edith Whittemore, Elise Boeckeler, Hildegard Nagel, Catherine McCreery, Margaret McKittrick, Cordelia and Elleanor Wood, Elizabeth Hoke, Virginia Case and Katherine Guy.

The plan is modeled on one in Boston, where many of the best-known society girls went from house to house soliciting donations for the Visiting Nurses' Association. In St. Louis no money will be requested, but an earnest effort will be made to interest people in the work of the St. Louis Children's Aid Society and people will be asked to become members at $2, $5 or $25 a year.

In this neighborhood campaign the West End district will be divided into routes through which the girls will go in pairs, leaving a year book of the society which explains its work, and a postal card on which people are asked to sign their names and the amount they wish to pay in yearly dues. Later they will call to collect these postals.

If you want a chic silk suit see J. White, ladies' tailor, 1002 Olive street.

MISSES HAZEL and Myrtle Joerder, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Joerder of 5538 Cates avenue, will give a tea this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in honor of Mrs. Robert Fuller of Tulsa, Ok., who is visiting Miss Mildred Nulsen. Miss Marguerite Biebinger will serve and Miss Josephine Verdin will assist.

THE usual spring crop engagements is being reaped and last week was marked by the announcement of several of more than ordinary interest.

Wednesday Mrs. Edwin T. Stanard gave a luncheon to announce the engagement of her sister, Miss Elsa Nicolaus and Daniel C. McCluney, both of whom were attendants at Mrs. Stanard's wedding Oct. 30, which was one of the most brilliant nuptial events of the autumn.

Among the guests at the luncheon was Mrs. R. Newton McDowell, who was Miss Elizabeth Meyer and who has just returned from her wedding trip, Miss Irma Teichmann who will marry Mrs. McDowell's brother, Theodore F. Meyer Jr., April 15, Mrs. William Drosten, a bride of a few months, and Mrs. Louis J. Nicolaus, who was Mrs. Jane Adger Izard, and who only returned from her bridal trip to the Orient in January.

Other guests were Mrs. Eugene H. Angert, Misses Alice Judge, Hilda Forster and Gertrude McLeod.

Miss Nicolaus is the daughter of Henry Nicolaus of 2149 South Grand avenue and one of the most attractive girls in her set. She was graduated from Mary Institute and afterwards went to Miss Bennett's school in New York and to a finishing school in Paris. She has been around the world and has traveled much abroad.

After her return last autumn from a visit to her sister, Mrs. August Anheuser, it was rumored that Miss Nicolaus was betrothed to a German, but that was soon forgotten as she and Mr. McCluney were seen together everywhere during the winter and the announcement of the engagement was hardly a surprise.

The marriage, which probably will be in the early summer, will be quiet, as the McCluney family is in mourning.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES LEONARD, who have been spending the winter with Mrs. Leonard's father, Dr. Jules F. Valle of 4955 Maryland place, have returned to their home at Pittsfield, Ill.

Miss Marie Bollman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Bollmann of 3220 Russell avenue, have returned from Miss Bennett's School, near Millbrook, N. Y., for the Easter holidays.

James Green of 5045 Lindell boulevard, who has been at Coronado Beach all winter, will return about May 1, and with him will come his son, H. Rumsey Green and his bride, who have been spending their honeymoon in California, and will stop for a visit of two weeks while on their way to New York to make their home. They will be guests of Mrs. Walter Duke Thompson, Rumsey Green's sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles McLure Clark of 15 Hortense place have returned from abroad, where they went for the ice sports at St. Moritz in Switzerland.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene H. Angert have taken possesion of their new home on the Clayton and Kent roads, which they purchased from Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Wear. Mr. and Mrs. Wear will depart shortly for Philadelphia to live.

Mrs. Clarence E. Maloy of 4609 Berlin avenue and her daughters, Misses Alice and Helen Maloy, are expected home this evening from Santa Barbara, Cal., where they have been for the past month.

How of 6127 Kingsbury boulevard, prior to sailing for an indefinite stay with her sister, Mrs. Edward Freckleton Keatinge, in Dublin, Ireland. During Mrs. Barritt's visit here numerous social affairs have been given in her honor. A luncheon at the Jefferson and matinee party was given by Mrs. Horn Wednesday. Other guests were Mrs. Ed Schopp and Mrs. A. Boettler.

Miss Ellen Henry Barker of Nashville, Tenn., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Ben Phillips Williams of 5500 Cabanne avenue.

Misses Ida and Eva Bowles of 4923 Fountain place entertained at cards Thursday evening in honor of Miss Helen Lois Rothschild.

Mrs. George F. Breitenstein, formerly Miss Pauline Manley, of 5078A Page boulevard, has gone to Little Rock, Ark., her future home.

One of the pleasant affairs of the last week was the "guest day" program of the Book Club at Grace M. E. Church, Wednesday. It was attended by about 200 guests from the various women's clubs of the city. The opening number of the entertainment was a group of English songs, sung by Miss Nora Hughes Toensfeldt.

The president of the club, Mrs. Joseph Maserang Jr., then presented to the audience Hanford Crawford, who gave them an interesting address on the Pageant and Masque. The concluding number of the program was a group of Indian songs, given by Mrs. Toensfeldt, dressed in Indian costume.

Tea was served and a social hour fol-

THE COLLEGE SET IS ARRIVING FOR THE EASTER HOLIDAYS

LOTS OF BEAUTIFUL, GLOSSY HAIR, NO DANDRUFF—25 CENT "DANDERINE"

Hair coming out?—If dry, thin or your scalp itches, and is full of dandruff—Use "Danderine"—No disappointment.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or a loose or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you will actually see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine will immediately double the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove to yourself tonight—now—that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.—ADV.

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of Those Ugly Spots.

Do you know how easy it is to remove those ugly spots so that no one will call you freckle-face.

Simply get an ounce of othine, double strength, from your druggist, and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of freckles and get a beautiful complexion. The sun and winds of February and March have a strong tendency to bring out freckles, and as a result more othine is sold in these months. Be sure to ask for the double strength othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove the freckles.—ADV.

Hair Tinting Made Easy

Many thousands of women have put up with streaked and gray hair because they knew of no absolutely safe way to overcome this robber of youth and attractiveness.

After all, one of the chief pleasures in life is that of appearing in as attractive a manner as possible.

"Brownatone" Hair Stain will help you in just this emergency. With it you can touch up the gray spots instantly—or you can in a few moments' time give to your hair that rich, soft brown, so much to be admired. Or, you can make it a glossy black if you prefer. No previous experience whatever is necessary when you use "Brownatone." Just brush or comb it into the hair.

A sample and a booklet will be sent you upon receipt of 10 cents.

All of the leading drug stores sell "Brownatone." Two sizes, 25c and $1.00. Two shades—one for golden or medium brown, and the other for dark brown or black.

Steinberg's

Olive at Tenth

Are Showing Most Recent Arrivals in

Women's Fashionable Apparel

A truly remarkable assemblage that emphasizes the Steinberg pre-eminence in the realm of women's outergarments.

Paquin exhibited in New York ten days ago eighty new models in Tailleur Suits, and we are fortunate in being able to present faithful adaptations taken from this exhibit.

The style ideas are distinctive and exclusive—the new peplum back coats and long coats with waist length fronts that are now in great vogue in Paris, promise to find great favor here. The skirts, too, are very clever—the tunic overskirts, Godet and flounce effects are among the more prominent new features.

The materials, too, are unusual—the silk Cascadieux, silk radiants and rose moires are very rich and lend themselves gracefully to the prevailing styles. There is an excellent variety of the new Spring shades—many different tones of blue, green and tan.

The price range is very broad—there are clever little models priced as low as $39.50, made up of splendid silks, and the prices graduate upward to $145.90.

In the Cloth Suits, the light weight serges are much in vogue, as well as new wool crepes, gaberdines and foreign novelties.

We are showing forty-six distinct models ranging from $25 to $45, and a number of exclusive models (only one suit of a kind) at $55, $59, $65, $75 and upward.

The new Dresses are alluring in the extreme—the most charming styles that have been brought to St. Louis, and all exclusive. Prices range from $55 to $175.

Afternoon Dresses at $25 to $49.50

Deserving of Special Emphasis.

We have made an unusual effort to provide exceptional values in Afternoon Dresses at the above prices, and our collection comprises styles that are bound to appeal to the women of discriminating taste. There is a broad range of high-grade materials.

Every section of the Steinberg establishment is better prepared to serve the fashionable woman and miss than it has been in its entire history. The stocks are unusually complete and attractive and the values exceptional.

The most captivating styles in Blouses, Skirts, Wraps and Misses' Garments are here and we urge your immediate selection.

BIRD STOPS A CLOCK AT COST OF ITS LIFE

Flitter's Nest Had Been Built Between the Gong and Hammer of Tower Timepiece.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 28.—The clock in the tower of the Technical High School building, which ceased striking some weeks ago, is again tolling off the hours. An examination showed that a bird had built its nest between the hammer and the gong, thus preventing the clock from striking. A bird, thought to be a flickes, was found dead in the clock, its tiny body shriveled and dried.

It is supposed that the bird, while in its nest, was struck by the hammer and killed. For more than 30 years the clock has been the timekeeper for the neighborhood, sharing the honor with the cannon that used to belch forth the sunrise and sunset hours every day the year round. When the cannon's service ceased, with the abandonment by the Government of the arsenal grounds, there was no little regret among residents of Woodruff who had long been accustomed to the shaking of windows and the tremors caused by the discharge of the gun. The clock was then left alone to announce the time of day, and its return to strike duty is welcomed.

HARVARD PAPER BARS ALL BASEBALL SLANG

Stories to Be Printed in the Coming Season Ordered Written in Approved English.

BOSTON, March 28.—The editors of the Harvard Crimson, the undergraduates' daily paper, have announced that in the coming season all baseball stories printed in that paper must be written in approved English. No synonyms or slang will be tolerated.

The announcement says the accounts of the games must be so clear that the special students in archaeology and Indic philology will be able to read them with a clear understanding.

In the Crimson, Harvard will have a "university baseball team," not a "varsity combination." The men will steal bases instead of "purloining," "pilfering" or "swiping" them. The batters will hit the ball to the outfield instead of "slugging the pill to the gardens." In short, the Harvard Crimson will tell its readers just what happened.

The undergraduate reporters of the paper will be taught to write the games as they write their English themes for the university courses.

MYSTERIOUS MUSICIAN DIES, SECRET WITH HIM

Professor, Who Lived 27 Years in Kansas, Believed to Have Been of Aristocratic Family.

PITTSBURG, Kan., March 28.—Prof. Henry Rozensky, who for 27 years had resided in Pittsburg, is dead without having revealed the mystery of his life. It was generally believed that he came of an aristocratic family, but he always refused to discuss the matter, nor did he leave among his papers any inkling of his past. He earned enough money to supply his wants by teaching music, although it was said he occasionally received money from a mysterious source.

That he had a son was learned by some of his friends, but he rarely referred to him, and then without revealing his whereabouts. Nor did any one ever learn whether von Rozensky was German, Australian or Russian.

Charles Hunter, with whom the old musician lived for many years, never solved the mystery with which the old musician surrounded himself.

BURGLAR HAS BIGHEAD

EVANSVILLE, Ind., March 28.—An abnormally large head may lead to the arrest of a burglar who broke into the grocery store of H. J. Crittenden.

The burglar left his hat, the size being 7⅝. The police have the hat and are looking for a man in Evensville who has a head big enough for it.

CITY TO VOTE ON $75,000 BOND ISSUE FOR RAILWAY

MERRILL, Wis., March 28.—Whether this city shall invest $75,000 in stock of the Minneapolis, Merrill & Marinette Railroad will be decided at an election to be held this spring. The railroad has asked the city to subscribe for 750 shares of preferred stock at par to be paid for with bonds at 5 per cent.

The railroad as now proposed is 40 miles long and connects with the Soo line at Athens and the Chicago & Northwestern at Antigo. The object in building it was to remove the monopoly on freight traffic held by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the only line that reaches this city.

Merrill residents believe that this city, with wonderful water power, has an industrial future, but that the Milwaukee road is not encouraging development.

Girl Is Best Speller.

ABILENE, Kan., March 28.—An all-day spelling match in which 100 district pupils of the county took part, was won by Ruth Chamberlain of Talmage. Stanley Engle of Ride Township won first prize for declamation.

Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer
Will Restore the Original Color to Gray and Faded Hair

-And We DO Prove It!

For years we have displayed in drug store windows a woman with gray hair on one side of her head, the other half of her hair being restored to the original color by Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer. Those who have seen this display have seen with their own eyes the truly wonderful powers of Mary T. Goldman's Hair Restorer to restore the original color to gray and faded hair.

The Original Preparation

All good things are copied. Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer is the original preparation, so beware of imitations with names that look and sound like the original. There are now many imitations being sold. They have copied labels, boxes and style of bottle as nearly as they dare. But it's what's inside the bottle that counts. Poor imitations made to sell at a low wholesale price are found at dealers' who want to make 50 to 75 per cent more than they can make by selling the original Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer. Some dealers buy these poor imitations so cheap that they can and do pay their clerks 10c commission on every bottle they sell. And you pay the commission and get a worthless article besides. Think it over. Then insist on the genuine

Further Proof at My Expense—$1 Bottle FREE!

Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer is as clean and pure as water and contains no thick, heavy Lead and Sulphur that must be shaken up. It does not give the hair a "dyed" appearance because it is so mild.

The hair will be restored to its original color in from four to eight days. Where the hair is just beginning to turn gray, the grayness will simply disappear with one or two applications.

It is absolutely harmless and over 100,000 satisfied users have proved it.

This offer is only for those who have not used Mary T. Goldman's Gray Hair Restorer and this offer is good for 10 days only, so write today. Remember, we send the full-size bottle that is regularly sold for $1.00. Every bottle is sent prepaid.

Health and Beauty Answers

BY MRS. MAE MARTYN

Mary: I have found that face powder clogs the pores and causes that rough, scaly condition of your skin. Make up and use this inexpensive lotion and you will be delighted with the results: Dissolve 4 ounces spurmax (which you get at the druggist's) in ½ pint hot water or witch hazel. After cleansing and drying the skin, apply the spurmax lotion, rubbing lightly, until it vanishes. This lotion imparts a clearness and velvety softness to the skin and restores the rose tint of healthy maidenhood. The spurmax lotion is especially nice for sallow, "muddy," oily skins and is superior to powder, as it is invisible when on and will not rub off in patches.

Annie L.: Powdered delatone is the most effective thing of which I know for removing stubborn hairy growths. Get an original package and mix enough powder with water to cover the hairs not wanted. Apply and in 2 or 3 minutes remove, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a quick, harmless method and seldom needs repeating. Be sure it is delatone you get.

Belle S.: Your pain in the small of the back, constant headaches and loss of weight is the result of poison-laden blood. Here is my formula for an old-fashioned system-tonic which, if taken regularly for awhile, will restore you to perfect health: To ½ pint alcohol (never use whisky) add 1 ounce kardene (get from your druggist), then ½ cupful sugar and hot water to make a full quart. The dose is a tablespoonful three times a day. This is gentle in action, cleanses the blood of all impurities and is unsurpassed for clearing the skin of discolorations and restoring the healthy glow of youth to the complexion.

Mrs. B.: Quite right! Your brittle, falling hair is evidently caused by washing with an alkali preparation. Here is my way of cleansing scalp and hair so both are kept in perfect health: Dissolve a teaspoonful canthrox in a cup hot water and pour a little at a time on the head while rubbing briskly. This works up into a thick, creamy lather that stops irritation and dissolves every particle of dandruff and excess oil. After rinsing the hair dries rapidly with a soft fluff and beautiful gloss. Canthrox shampoos stimulate a healthy condition in the scalp and induce the hair to grow thick and long.

Mrs. Al.: Your excess fat will soon vanish after a short course of the parnotis treatment, made by getting 4 ounces parnotis from your druggist and dissolving in 1½ pints hot water. The dose is a tablespoonful before meals. This gradually dissolves the fat, and when your weight is sufficiently reduced your skin will be firm and free from wrinkles. No diet or exercise is necessary, as it cannot possibly do any injury.

Mrs. S. T.: To make your eyes sparkle, I would suggest using simply crystos tonic, which is inexpensive and easily prepared. Just dissolve 1 ounce crystos in a pint cold water and it is ready. Putting a few drops in each eye frequently soon relieves the smart and ache and will give to them a sparkle and expressiveness truly charming. This is excellent for weak eyes.

X. O.: Your dull, streaky hair indicates an impoverished condition of the scalp and hair roots. I am giving you a simple recipe, which if you make up and use, will banish your scalp troubles and make your hair grow thick, silky and fluffy. Get from your druggist 1 ounce quinzoin, pour into ½ pint alcohol, then add ½ pint water. Massage the scalp once or twice a week. This stops the irritation and overcomes dandruff and puts your scalp and hair roots in a healthy, vigorous condition.

Dora M.: For banishing your wrinkles you will find a plain almozoin jelly cream quick and certain in its action and also splendid for clearing the skin. It is made as follows: Stir 1 ounce almozoin into ½ pint water, add 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine and let stand over night. Apply a thick coating of the jelly-cream on retiring and massage well into the skin. Allow to remain on until morning, then wash off and rub some more on. This is unfailing and dispels freckles, blotches, pimples and other beauty defects. It is also excellent for chaps or tender skin.

Explains To Thin Ladies

A Simple but Sure Method of Developing a Well-Rounded Bust and Figure.

(From the New York Journal.)

It is a simple but sure method of developing the bust, arms, neck, hips and shoulders of women, who through some defect of nutrition and circulation are forever being humiliated by their more fortunate sisters. First, it must be understood that the human skin is an enormous gland, richly endowed with nerves, secreting and excreting organs, and a network of minute blood vessels which contains at one time over one-third of all the blood in the body—that is, if nature is perfect.

The relation of the skin to the vital organs through the nervous system in controlling the blood supply is such as to put them as a team working together.

Thus, by applications daily of this rare combination of secret oils, known to druggists as medicated veneseal, the figure is readily transformed from thinness and flatness to one of plumpness and graceful rounding curves.

The preparation is sold in sealed tubes with directions for home use. By regular use 'tis said to work marvelous changes in the figure, by expert beauty doctors who have used it for some years past.—ADVERTISEMENT.

U. S. BUILDS OWN LABORATORY; SOON TO MAKE RADIUM

Huge Vats Installed in Denver and Reduction Process Is Tried Secretly.

CHEAP METHOD PROMISED

Hopes Held Out by Experts Stimulate Search for Carnotite and Pitchblende.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DENVER, Colo., March 28.—"Uncle Sam will be making his own radium by April 10," is the promise of the experts from the United States Bureau of Mines, who will have charge of the new radium laboratory which has been built in Denver for the treatment of carnotite and pitchblende from the radium fields of Colorado.

The utmost secrecy has been maintained in installing machinery in the new radium laboratory which the Government will run, in connection with the National Radium Institute. The most famous American radium experts have contributed their knowledge to the processes which will be used in extracting radium from Colorado's radio-active ores.

In order that no one may get the slightest knowledge of these processes in advance, Government guards have been stationed in the building day and night to keep out the curiously inclined. No one has been allowed to set foot inside the doorway except the workmen engaged in installing the huge vats and machinery. These workmen have all been sworn to secrecy, and it would go ill with any of them caught with a camera in his possession.

Many Big Vats Installed.

The Government's radium building has been under construction since last January. It is an unpretentious, one-story structure, sheathed with corrugated iron. Many huge vats are installed in the building. These were filled with carnotite ores several weeks ago, and the steady dripping from the vats would indicate that the process which is to be used for treating these radio-active ores is not a dry method.

It is claimed that, when the practicability of the new processes has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of those in charge of the work, the general method will be made public.

Since the discovery of enormous deposits of carnotite in Western Colorado, the Bureau of Mines has been conducting laboratory investigations in an office building in Denver. The new process of extracting radium which has been discovered required the building of a separate laboratory, equipped with heavy machinery, vats and devices which could not be installed in an office building. This laboratory is the only building of its kind in the world. It is located in South Denver, adjoining the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad tracks. The Denver & Rio Grande is the railroad nearest the carnotite fields of Western Colorado and Eastern Utah, where this rare mineral was discovered. Thus the Paradox Valley carnotite can be shipped directly to the laboratory of the Government at Denver. In fact, large shipments have been made, and have been stored in vaults, awaiting the completion of the building where the ore is to be treated.

U. S. to Have First Chance.

It has been necessary for the Government to construct its own laboratory for the reason that congressional restrictions are about to be put on the mining of radio-active ores. These restrictions make it necessary for the prospector to give the Government the first chance to buy any radio-active ore that is discovered. If Uncle Sam is to be an ore buyer, it will be necessary for him to have a building for the reduction and general treatment of his ore purchases.

Mining men are interested in the announcement that not only will the Government experts treat carnotite by a new process, but that they will be able to extract radium easily and cheaply from pitchblende. Colorado also has the only pitchblende deposits of any magnitude in this country. They are in Gilpin County, the oldest mining section of the State. Pitchblende was discovered several years ago in some of the oldest gold mines in Gilpin County. These mines have been purchased by the Du Pont interests, and have been closed, awaiting further development and the discovery of a cheaper process of extracting radium.

Few Sacks Worth Thousands.

Recently a shipment of several sacks of pitchblende was made from these Gilpin County mines. Pitchblende, which is the ore in which Mme. Curie first found radium, is a dark, greasy-looking substance, which comes in very slender streaks, but it intensely radio-active. A shipment of a few sacks represents thousands of dollars.

Prospectors have been invading the carnotite fields of Western Colorado since the first of the year, intending to get ahead of any congressional withdrawal of the lands from entry. Snow is still on the ground, however, and prospecting will not begin in earnest for another week or two. Active search for pitchblende deposits has also been stimulated, and the announcement of a cheap process for treating both these radio-active ores, such as the Government experts promise, will mean a great prospecting stimulus throughout the entire mineral-producing West.

MAN'S BURIED FOOT DUG UP TO EASE PAIN IN LEG

HUTCHINSON, Kan., March 28.—Will Schulte of Deepwater, Mo., who lost his right leg under a passenger train, had a notion that the pain in the stump of his leg was caused by the toe of the foot being buried in a cramped position, so his father had the foot dug up from the grave, in East Side Cemetery.

Schulte was shown that the toe was not cramped, and then the pain in the stump left him and he sleeps as well as ever. When the foot was reburied, his father took pains to see that it was perfectly straight in the box.

How to Look Years Less Than Your Age

The most aged face will look years younger after the use of ordinary mercolized wax for from ten days to two weeks. This remarkable substance, because of its peculiar absorptive power, actually removes the thin veil of faded or withered outer cuticle, a little at a time. Gradually the fresher, more youthful skin underneath is revealed. This absorption process being a purely hygienic one, an entirely natural complexion is acquired—quite different from the artificial complexion, which appears anything but girlish, though often bearing painful evidence of childishness. An ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is sufficient to rejuvenate any complexion. It is put on like cold cream at bedtime, and removed mornings with warm water.

To eradicate such age marks as wrinkles and furrows, make a wash lotion by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel. This has wonderful astringent and tonic properties. It quickly effaces all kinds of wrinkles, no matter how caused, making the skin firm, smooth and young looking.—ADV.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply to any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Despondent" writes: "I am 42 years old, and until two years ago I was very strong and vigorous. Gradually I began to fail, and now I am trembling, nervous, weak, timid, despondent, and life has lost its brightness and pleasures for me. I think I need medicine for my nerves."

Answer: At your age many are afflicted as you are, and the very best treatment for such conditions is 3-grain cadomene tablets, packed in sealed tubes, with full directions. It is a tonic restorative treatment of very great effectiveness in overcoming the depleted, worn-out nervous system.

"Mr. B. D." asks: "Is it safe to reduce one's weight? I weigh 240 pounds and would like to reduce at least 40 pounds. What is a safe, harmless remedy?"

Answer: Obtain of any well-stocked druggist a tube of 5-grain arbolone tablets and take as per directions accompanying. These tablets are very easy to take and quite reliable for obesity or goitre.

"Miss K." writes: "Could you publish a remedy for liver and kidney trouble and the usual diseases that arise from that source? I am troubled with dizzy spells, dark spots before my eyes, and also with rheumatism."

Answer: If you will get 3-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur tablets), and take according to directions, you will not only be relieved, but if you continue the use of these tablets you will be gradually relieved of all the troubles you mention. They will purify the blood and also overcome your rheumatism.

"Worried"—Your child can be easily corrected by using tincture cubebs, 1 dram; tincture rhus-aromatic, 3 drams, and comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz. Give him 10 to 15 drops in water before each meal. This is equally good for older people.

"Mrs. L. C." writes: "Our family of five all are afflicted with catarrh. A friend told me that your prescription cured her and her child. Please tell me what to use."

Answer: I have found in my long experience that there is nothing superior to antiseptic vilane powder when used according to directions which are to be found in each 2 or 3 ounce box. Try it and you will be delighted.

"Hannah" writes: "I would like to get something that would make my hair soft and fluffy. My hair is greasy and I can do nothing to keep the oil out of it."

Answer: To take the surplus oil out of the hair and keep it soft and fluffy, get a 4-oz. jar of plain yellow minyol and use it regularly. This will stop itching scalp and dandruff and make the hair grow, and you will not be bothered with stringy, straggling locks.

"Louise" writes: "I do not weigh enough for my height. I am dull and lifeless and have frequent headaches. Please advise what will help me."

Answer: Your condition is due to lack of red blood corpuscles. I can p scribe nothing better than 3-grain hy nuclane tablets, which can be purcha at any up-to-date drug store in seal cartons with full directions. These ta lets will cause the body to assimilate fatty elements of food and thus g you strength and added color to skin. Your weight will increase a you will not be troubled with headache. These are recommended by physicians and if taken according to directions y will surely gain flesh.

"Troubled Miss G." writes: "Eve winter I am troubled with severe a tacks of rheumatism which sometim keeps me in bed for weeks. Please a vise something for me."

Answer: My favorite prescription f rheumatism, and one that I know h relieved thousands of people, is made mixing iodide of potassium, 2 dram sodium salicylate, 4 drams; wine of col chicum, ½ oz.; comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz.; comp. fluid balmwort, 1 oz.; syr sarsaparilla, 5 ozs. Take one teaspo ful at meal time and at bed time a you will soon be well.

"Annette" writes: "I have been gre ly anoyed lately by coughing and a tic ling sensation in the throat and hoar ness after singing. My bronchial tu are affected also."

EUROPE'S SOCIAL RURAL PROBLEMS ARE UNLIKE OURS

Oklahoma Woman Says Contentment of Peasants With Conditions Is Chief Point.

SHE VISITED IN HOMES

Began Work With U. S. Commission and Remained After Others Had Returned.

RINGLING, Ok., March 28.—"The European and American agricultural problems are not the same and cannot be treated the same; all we can do is to study their methods and try to get new ideas."

After spending six months in European countries, traveling as a member of the American commission to study agricultural problems abroad, this is the opinion of Mrs. Charles E. Lahman of Vinita, Ok. She was a member of the commission, authorized by the United States Congress, which visited Europe last summer. She was appointed by Gov. Lee Cruce of Oklahoma. Several members of Congress accompanied the commission, which spent 60 days in an official investigation. Mrs. Lahman, however, remained abroad, doing some investigating on her own account and studying the social rural problem in particular.

Until this time Mrs. Lahman has made no report as to her special investigations excepting a verbal statement to Gov. Cruce immediately following her return. The work of the American commission consisted of four lines of investigation—co-operative agricultural finance, production, distribution and rural life. The latter was supposed to supply the test of the efficiency of the systems which were investigated. It was this phase of the investigation that especially interested Mrs. Lahman.

Difficult to Reach Details.

"Rural life was the most difficult to investigate," says Mrs. Lahman, "partly from lack of time and partly from the obvious impossibility of strangers and foreigners getting at the intimate details of the life of a people whose language they could not speak. It was this phase to which I gave particular study and to which I devoted the extra months' time."

Mrs. Lahman found her special investigations extremely interesting. She visited government farms, estates of noblemen, peasant holdings and dwellings, agricultural schools and experiment stations in Italy, Hungary, Austria, Germany, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, France, England, Wales and Ireland. In the homes of the peasants, visiting and eating with them, she was able to obtain the real human interest in their lives and learn first hand the rural conditions as they actually exist.

"Generally speaking, the Government and the aristocracy give aid to agricultural institutions, though the rural banks in some of these countries, Germany particularly, have been started by some worker for public welfare and are maintained by the members themselves," says Mrs. Lahman.

Soldiers Taught Farming.

"In Italy the King has donated large sums of money to the agricultural institute and has put into action many laws favorable to small farmers," continues Mrs. Lahman. "For instance, young men serving the compulsory term as soldiers are, in that three years' time, given a practical agricultural education and they return home at the end of their military service capable of making a better living from the land than were their fathers.

"The Government has large model estates in Hungary, where pure bred horses and cattle are raised and sent over the kingdom to improve the strain of farm animals. In Germany there are all kinds of experiment stations and agricultural schools.

"Taxes are regulated by the prosperity of the harvest in Switzerland, where as a rule, each farmer owns his own little farm. Taxes are less in poorer years and more when the harvest is abundant. In Ireland the Government is building small, sanitary, stone cottages on small holdings and giving to the farmers of the Emerald Isle a chance to buy these and pay for them on easy terms. Of course, all these things are made possible abroad by the peasant's respect for authority, for the upper classes and by his low standard of living.

All Live Within Meager Means.

"The average peasant in any country lives in a stone hut or aggregation of houses of stone that cannot burn down. The family uses and needs but little furniture and what they have is frequently an heirloom. He has farm carts that were built by his grandfather and he and his family have clothing made for warmth and wear, with no attempt whatever toward following style. His food is coarse and cheap, usually coffee, black bread, cheese, potatoes and such vegetables as he cannot sell.

"Among the European peasantry there is no aping of the gentility in the matter of clothes, food or amusements—no struggle whatever to live beyond class means. The women and the cows work in the fields and the cheapness of labor permits of the utilization of every wayside blade of grass in which there is economy, where time and human flesh have a money value.

"In every country there are very modern country schools, but only poor children attend them, as children of the rich always go to private schools to prevent their garments from brushing the common herd.

"Drunkenness is rife from Hungary to Ireland, being particularly bad in Ireland. Foodstuffs are higher than with us. White bread is never baked in private kitchens, always in bakeries, and in the parks one sees children playing and eating white bread, rolls of it in their hands, where American children would have cake or candy."

The suffrage movement was interesting to Mrs. Lahman. Despite the wide publicity, the peasantry has not yet become interested, according to Mrs. Lahman, who says:

"The movement is being agitated by peasant women."

Frequently, while the members of the commission were in Europe, the difference between American and European social customs was well defined. While in Rome, a banker member was compelled to borrow a coat from a hotel waiter in order that he might be in "regulation" dress at a reception given by the King.

"We were instructed before hand," says Mrs. Lahman, "that the ladies should wear calling costumes and the men evening coats. This caused consternation, for very few of the men with our party had other than business suits. This banker hired a frock coat from a waiter and wore it with the blue vest and trousers of his business suit, plus a pair of tan shoes and a soft gray felt hat. But they let him in. We were introduced one after another and shook hands with the King and then the Queen, to the great gratification of our democratic souls."

This spring many persons will move—into homes of their own found through the Post-Dispatch real estate columns.

Drainage Work Is Started.

SELMER, Tenn., March 28.—Work on the White Oak Creek drainage canal was started this week. Specifications call for a ditch 10.9 miles long, with a width at the bottom of 18 feet and at the top of 25 feet, and a depth of 6 feet. The canal will reclaim hundreds of acres of valuable farming land, which is now almost worthless.

Marriage Fees Buy Him Auto.

WACO, Tex., March 28.—At a cost of $1000, which was accumulated from marriage fees paid to him during his incumbency as pastor of the First Street Methodist Church here, the Rev. A. C. Chappel has purchased an automobile. The largest fee paid him was $25 and the smallest 50 cents, he says.

Advice on Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

THE HAIR BEAUTIFUL—LUXURIANT. Care and Treatment Necessary.

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

Several girls ask: Will you please tell us in your beauty columns all about taking care of the hair?"

Answer: Every head of hair should be shampooed at least once a month and in many cases when the scalp and hair are diseased, once in two weeks is not too often. But beware of strong alkali soaps, etc. I always use glorioI shampoo, which is saponified vegetable oils with no free alkali. It is the purest and best cleansing agent to be obtained; besides, it is antiseptic and germ destroying.

If the scalp is affected with dandruff, if it itches constantly and the hair lacks luster and combs out wastefully, then I advise the application of plain yellow minyol at least once in two weeks (full directions with each four-ounce jar). This stops dandruff and itching, destroys microbes and diseases of the hair and scalp.

For those who are not blessed with fluffy, waving locks, I recommend glorioI wavolene, which I use regularly. It keeps the hair in curl or wave for days at a time, even in damp weather, while it enables one to dispense with the terribly injurious curling iron. Wavolene is invisible, easily applied as per directions, and gives universal satisfaction to my friends.

The best hair tonic—free from harmful alcohol—is made at home by dissolving one-half ounce concentrated hairwand powder in a pint of water. This applied to the hair and scalp twice daily increases the rapid growth and luster and prevents dandruff and itching.

By using a pint of sage tea, filtered through absorbent cotton, instead of a pint of water, one can make an excellent color restorer for fading and gray hair. Begin now to treat your hair and scalp and your reward will quickly follow.

Mrs. C. C. B. asks: "Please tell me of a good, reliable face powder to use. Also tell me how to improve my complexion."

Answer: I recommend glorioI face powder, because it is refined, harmless and daintily perfumed of lilacs. It adheres to the skin smoothly, evenly, and does not require repeated applications every hour or two. It comes in pink, white and brunette. Send two stamps for my booklet "Beauty Truths," which gives valuable information to all beauty seekers.

Miss Anna C. asks: "My cheeks are hollow and my skin is dry, sallow and drawn looking. What treatment is best?"

Answer: Your skin needs a good, pure emollient flesh builder, and for this purpose nothing on the market is so good as glorioI emollient, sold in sealed jars. Apply it freely and pat the skin rather severely with the fingers and follow by a gentle circular rubbing until much of it is absorbed. Use it morning and night, and soon the flesh will improve in tone and skin will become white and pink. This emollient puts new life and color in the face, while it fills hollows and removes other complexion blemishes.

Nell B. asks: "Will you tell me what vanishing cream is best to use to protect my complexion from the weather?"

Answer: A vanishing cream should be in the nature of a balm, but free from grease or sticky substance. Most of them—the impure—leave an oily skin or make the skin harsh or sticky to the touch. I use and advise glorioI balm, and all my readers who have tried it are delighted. It makes the skin smooth and clean.

Mrs. O. A. B. asks: "Can you advise how to increase one's weight. I should like to increase about 20 pounds."

Answer: In recent years it has been conclusively shown that the regular use of three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets will add flesh very rapidly. Directions for taking and improving the nutrition are contained on circular with each sealed package.

Mrs. B. D. asks: "I want to know if it is possible for a young woman to develop her bust? I am perfectly flat-chested. If you know what to do, please tell me."

Answer: Obtain of any well-stocked druggist or toilet counter a tube of medicated venosol, and use as per directions which accompany it. Also begin taking 3-grain hypo-nuclane tablets and continue this treatment until the desired results are obtained. Increase of bust measurement begins in from three to four weeks, and as much as 6 to 8 inches are added ultimately.

Miss T. E. B. asks: "When one has a sallow, leathery, pimply skin on face and hands, what can be done?"

Answer: First, you should improve the blood by taking as per directions accompanying, one-grain tablets quinoxide, sold in sealed tubes. These will improve the quality of the blood and whiten the skin, but to obtain a beautiful complexion and preserve it, you should follow my advice to Miss Anna C. given above.

Mrs. V. G. asks: "I want to reduce my weight, but am afraid to try medicine I know nothing about. Can you recommend something?"

Answer: Physicians of my acquaintance say there is only one reliable flesh reducer of a harmless character and I advise you to obtain and use same. Ask a well-stocked pharmacy for five-grain phythyrin tablets. Three weeks' treatment in each sealed tube soon enables one to reduce to normal. No evil effects have been traced to the use of this dependable treatment. Both men and women use it.

LELAND STANFORD HAS $24,000,000 ENDOWMENT

University's Income From Property Last Year Was $1,400,000—Charges No Tuition.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 28.—The trustees of Stanford University have issued a statement of the revenue-bearing property of that school, which shows an endowment of $24,000,000, making the school second only to Harvard in this regard.

This is the first statement of the kind ever issued by the school, and includes all general and special funds, but not an accounting of the school plant, which brings no revenue. Harvard's wealth is estimated at $27,441,000. Chicago is third, with $18,145,000.

Stanford's income last year was $1,400,000. The biggest item of expense was professors' salaries, the total being $425,000. As to income, the school ranks below several others, because no tuition is charged except a fee of $30 a year to students nonresident in California. Several state universities exceed the Stanford revenue, but of similar schools Cornell has $2,487,000 a year; Pennsylvania, $1,905,000; Columbia, $1,753,000; Yale, $1,658,000.

REPORT OF GOLD STRIKE STARTS A RUSH TO ARKANSAS

Yell County Prospectors Say Ore Runs as High as $90 a Ton.

MANY CLAIMS ARE TAKEN

State Geologist, However, Declares Formations Do Not Indicate It's Workable Field.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LITTLE ROCK, March 28.—There may not be gold in Arkansas, but it would be difficult to make the old-time prospectors who have been working many months in the southern portion of Yell County believe it. They say they have assays running as high as $90 a ton, and many declare the quartz and stone upon the surface of the mountains will assay high.

Though the natives for the last 30 years have believed there is gold in the mountains, there has been no rush in that section heretofore, but now all sorts of vehicles have been recruited to carry the prospectors into the "gold region."

State Geologist John T. Fuller made a special trip to the fields, and, after walking over them for two days, declares "the formation is not indicative of gold deposits." He says the mountains are not of volcanic origin, the quartz ledges being forced up by the hot springs near by.

But to make certain that he is correct the State official is having specimens assayed.

Gold miners, who have come from the West to prospect in Yell County, do not agree with Geologist Fuller and continue their search.

"Discovered" 30 Years Ago.

Thirty years ago "Joe" Ballew took a homestead in Yell County. He liked what he called the "glisten" in the rock and began prospecting. His methods were crude, but he selected 600 pounds of the ore and crushed it. He obtained gold for which he received $17 at the Government mint in New Orleans. Ballew traded his claim for another on which there is believed to be copper and is working it at odd times.

Recently John W. Scott, a former Rock Island Railroad engineer, took up a claim near Bluffton, and has done much prospecting. He helped Sadoc Hilburn open a shallow shaft and took from it specimens he says assayed $90.30 a ton.

Scott has located on Railroad Claim, a mountain knob, declares it is as rich as any California district in the placer days. The Arkansas "gold-bearing" section is 30 miles from a railroad and its nearest postoffice is Bluffton.

Most of the land is in the Government forest reserve and can be taken up. Many are taking claims in the district.

Lots of Ore in Sight.

Prospectors estimate there are 30,000 tons of ore running from $6 to $8 per ton on the Scott claim, and as it could be mined with dynamite from the surface, those who have looked it over assert it can be worked for at least $5 a ton.

One of the large lumber roads has already sent prospectors into the fields and if good reports are received, then electric roads will be built to the scene by the lumber company.

MUNICHERS REBEL AT 3 A. M. CAFE CLOSING

They Want to Be in Big City Class and Drink Until 7 Like Berliners Do.

MUNICH, March 28.—Residents of this city, at least a generous portion of them, are in a rebellious mood toward the police because the guardians of peace and morals have decreed that Munichers must go home at 3 a. m. This, so Munich folk think, puts this town out of the class of big cities.

The order really was issued about a year ago, and while most of the cafes observed it the "oppressedness" did not become unbearable because the railway station restaurant was permitted to open at 3:30 and any one provided with a railway ticket could find refreshments there. Then after 4 a. m. many cafes began to open for the day and the "bummler," as the night nomad who goes about drinking beer or wine here and there is known, could find many places for his entertainment until he cared to go home. Munichers have repeatedly called attention to the police to the fact that some Berlin cafes do not begin their busy period until 4 a. m. and that some of them are crowded at 7 a. m.

But the police here are stubborn and recently to enforce their order of early closing they visited the railway restaurant and ordered all diners there to board the first train to the station to which they had bought tickets. Many went on unexpected journeys that morning. Herr Rossler, author of "The Five Frankfurters," the most popular Germany comedy of the recent years, declined to take a train, declaring that his coffee was so hot he could not drink it. He had a physical row with two policemen and was fined $4.50 in Police Court.

Herpicide Co

The Ladies of St. Louis Enhance their Personal Charm By the Use of Newbro's Herpicide

It is a significant fact that St. Louis people use more Newbro's Herpicide than any equal number of people elsewhere.

Desiring always to appear at their best the ladies of St. Louis have been quick to recognize the great excellence of Newbro's Herpicide as they know that its intelligent use will add more to the beauty of their hair than anything else. They are justly proud of the radiance and luster of their tresses made possible by having hair that is clean and healthy and a scalp free from dandruff. It is by saving and beautifying the hair growing on their own heads that the St. Louis ladies add so much to their personal appearance.

Fifteen years ago Newbro's Herpicide was the only germ remedy for dandruff in America. At that time, both the remedy and the theory were ridiculed. But since then Herpicide has achieved an almost marvelous success and the story of its astonishing merit has penetrated to every corner of the Globe.

Now the Herpicide claims and Herpicide advertising have been freely copied by the manufacturers of other scalp remedies. Bear in mind, too, that during this change of front the remedies themselves have not been changed, simply the claims for them. Here is the point. Why should you experiment with something, claimed to be as good as Herpicide when genuine Herpicide, the Original Germ Remedy, may be purchased in every drug and department store in St. Louis.

The "just as good" kind is good for the substitutors' cash register but is not good for your scalp.

Applications of real Herpicide can be obtained at any good barber shop.

Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. Sold and guaranteed at all drug stores.

ROBBERS TIE MERCHANT WITH BOLT OF OWN GOOD

CHICAGO, March 28.—Three robbers bound and gagged the proprietor of a small dry goods store here today and after breaking open his cash register and searching his pockets strolled out of the store, leaving the man lying behind a counter gagged and rolled up in a bolt of his own cotton goods.

David Rutenberg, victim of the robbers, was alone in his store when the three men entered. After completing their work they strolled out, attracting no attention.

The robbers obtained Rutenberg's watch and about $100.

RIVAL EX-CONVICT SWEARS JENNINGS' FOES HIRED HIM

Former Train Robber Reads at Meeting Affidavit Accusing Judge R. L. Williams.

RIDICULE WAS THE MOTIVE

Crump Declares That He Was Promised Pay, but Got Only Few Dollars.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., March 28.—The "campaign of ex-convicts" for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Oklahoma took an unexpected turn here this week when Al J. Jennings, former train robber, outlaw and convict, who is conceded to be one of the two leaders in the race for the governorship as it now stands—the other being Judge R. L. Williams, who recently resigned from the Supreme bench to promote his campaign—made his first campaign speech in his home city.

In the course of his speech Jennings displayed and read to his audience an affidavit from George Crump Jr., another former convict, whose entry into the race for Governor attracted so much attention by reason of that fact, declaring that he had been induced to enter the race wholly to cast ridicule on Jennings' candidacy and that the politicians who had caused him to announce his candidacy had promised to "take care of him," but had failed to do so.

Political Leaders Named.

Among the men named in Crump's affidavit as having advised his candidacy were Judge Williams, Fred Parkinson, State Examiner and Inspector and one of Williams' managers; Don Lawhead, Deputy Game Warden, in whose office many political coup de'etat have had their origin; C. C. Hammonds, State Fire Marshal; Ben W. Riley, Secretary of the State Election Board; A. D. Humbarger, formerly a clerk in the State Auditor's office, and J. L. Bolen of Ada, former Democratic Committeeman from Pontotoc County, all Williams men in the present campaign.

The description of his interview with Judge Williams, with which Crump's affidavit opened, was heard with especial interest; in view of the fact that Williams has been ordained as a minister of the Methodist Church, South, and made what was virtually the opening speech of his campaign from the pulpit of that church in Durant, of which he was formerly pastor.

'On or about the 20th day of January, 1914," says Crump, "Jim Bolen, a politician from Pontotoc County, and myself were in a room at the Kingkade Hotel. Bolen telephoned to the Lee-Huckins Hotel and asked to have Bob Williams paged and connected with the telephone. The conversation, as I remember it, was this:

"Bolen said: 'Bob, I am up at the Kingkade. Come up. Important.'

Williams Came to His Room.

"What Williams said I cannot repeat. Anyway, he got there quicker than a live bellboy. Bolen introduced me to Williams. We talked—that is, Williams talked—and Williams asked me to give out an interview announcing my candidacy for Governor against Al Jennings. I said I was broke and would like a chance to live until I could find something to do and besides, I wished to talk to a few of my friends.

"Later I went and talked with Fred Parkinson at Don Lawhead's office. Lawhead told me Williams would take care of me, and that he wanted me to announce for Governor against Al Jennings so he would not have to answer Al. And he said—Fred Parkinson, State Examiner, said—he would get me money from Williams—that he was the only man who had any.

"I told them I would like to get on the Capitol Commission, and Parkinson said I was with the wrong bunch for that, but that Bob Williams would take care of me. C. C. Hammonds, Fred Parkinson and Don Lawhead were present during the conversation, and they said: 'George, we will see that you are taken care of, and Bob Williams will give up a little money.'

"I arrived in Oklahoma City, Jan. 17, 1914, went from there to Ada, Ok., for a day, and then returned to Oklahoma City again and have been here ever since. I received promises from Parkinson, from Hammonds, from Lawhead and from Ben Riley and several other politicians, that I would be taken care of.

Paid in $1 Installments.

"I have received $1 at a time from Fred Parkinson, which I repaid. I have received $1 from C. C. Hammonds, which I have not repaid. I have received $3 or $4, $1 each time, from John Lawhead, which I have not repaid. I have received about 100 cigarettes from Ben Riley, which I have not repaid.

"I am not for Al Jennings. I am not for any man. I am just making myself public. I have been mistreated and I have been wronged, and I expect to be mistreated worse after this."

When pardoned by Lieutenant-Governor McAlester in Gov. Cruce's absence, and against the Governor's expressed wishes, Crump was serving a sentence for forgery of deeds to Indian allotments. In his announcement for Governor he laid especial emphasis upon that fact that he had been arrested seven times, all of them for irregularities in connection with Indian land deals.

Judge Williams, when asked if Crump's charge was true, declined to comment on the affidavit, saying that he did not propose to become entangled with either George Crump or Al Jennings.

SAYS HE EVOLVED GROWN HENS OF TINY CHICK SIZE

BERKELEY, Cal., March 28.—Science has evolved the regulation of human stature, at least within certain limits, if the claim made here by Prof. S. A. [illegible] of the University of California, Department of Physiology, proves [illegible] experimentation to be correct.

The undeveloped human form, he said yesterday, may be made to grow tall or short at the will of an operator who is permitted to treat the brain functions, which, in his opinion, control growth. The theory has been tested by means of experiments on chickens. It is asserted by Prof. Maxwell that he has actually produced full-grown hens of tiny chick size.

"Height as well as breadth of frame, and to a great extent strength, depend on the bone growth," said Prof. Maxwell. "This may be excited or retarded at will by treatment of a cerebral gland which controls the bone functions."

St. Louis Playbills — Lesson of "The Lure" — Opera Season

"The Lure" Answers the Panicky Query-- "What's Wrong With the American Stage?"

Unclean and Indecent Plays Have Alienated the Great Playgoing Public and Caused the Most Disastrous Season Known in American Theatrical History—Thousands Remain Away From the Theater in Protest Against Offensive Productions—A Study of the Existing Situation.

ROBERT HILLIARD and STELLA ARCHER in "THE ARGYLE CASE" OLYMPIC.

Star and Leading Woman of Up-to-Date Detective Drama, Illustrating Modern Police Methods, Now to Be Seen at a St. Louis Playhouse.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

IN the spectacle of such a play as "The Lure" being presented at a reputable playhouse before a decent audience, more than a few members of which, perhaps, are in ignorance of the play's character until its offensiveness is revealed by the performance itself, is found the answer to that vital question of today—"What's the matter with American theatrical conditions?"—which has been provoked by the most disastrous season yet recorded in the dramatic history of this country.

I am fully aware that the first retort to this statement will be that "The Lure" and other plays of its kind are known to make a profitable appeal to a large class of playgoers. My reply to such a rejoinder is that this is not now unvaryingly true, and that, even at its best, a following thus established is the most calamitous that can be possessed by any theater, and that not even the lowest burlesque houses dare "go the limit" in this direction. To gain such a following a theater must not only alienate a decent public infinitely greater in point of numbers, but it must needs dig deeper and deeper in filth if it hopes permanently to hold the unsavory clientele thus invited to its support. And, inevitably, it arrives at that phase of its enterprise where this no longer may be done without incurring certain penalties of the law whose enforcement means the closing of the offending playhouse as a menace to public morals. A managerial policy more suicidal than this has never been instituted in the conduct of American theaters.

The lesson to this effect is being learned by New York's big producers of plays. Aside from one or two cases of individual stubbornness such as is illustrated in the persistent cramming of "The Lure" down the public's throat, the leading American theatrical magnates now are engaged in a panic-stricken endeavor to regain the favor of the millions of clean-minded playgoers who have been antagonized and driven from the theater by "smut-plays" of "The Lure's" foul class.

Until this lost following of decency-preferring playgoers is regained there will be "hard times" in the American theatrical world. This is due to the fact that, in this country, what is known as the "family" patronage of playhouses, comprising the great bulk of the American public, is the very foundation structure of permanent playhouse prosperity. This truth provokes much ironical jibing on the part of the "sophisticated" few who relish the "hot seasoning" of drama more than they do the wholesome meat itself, but it stands as the four-square truth nevertheless.

And it is a truth that happened to be undeniably in evidence at the time of my latest play-reviewing visit to New York City last fall. The early weeks of the then new season had been prolific of unclean dramas. "The Lure," "The Fight," "Any Night" and other plays of similar offensiveness came in swift succession. It seemed to be the managerial conviction, openly confessed and put into practice, that no dramatic offering could hope for success unless it staged a scene in a disorderly resort as its big feature. New York play reviewers finally began to protest against what they tersely and truthfully christened the "brothel play." The epidemic of tenderloin obscenity got on New York's nerves. Then, unexpectedly and significantly, the "brothel plays" developed a withering death-rate. In swift succession they failed, some on their very first night, others after two or three performances, others again at the close of their birth-week, one or two alone living long enough to claim the prestige of a metropolitan "run." Even in such case there was no genuine success. "The Lure" hung on longer than any of its malodorous fellows—but on that November night when I witnessed a New York performance of "The Lure" at the Maxine Elliott Theater the house was not one-third full.

Such of these plays, repudiated even in "wicked" New York, as were thought to have any vitality still remaining were sent on tour. Their producers were not sufficiently wise to profit by an intelligent reading of New York's ominous handwriting on the wall. They must needs splash their filth into the faces of the entire American playgoing public.

No more foolish course could have been followed. It came at the psychological moment of American revolt against the unclean drama. This spirit of revolt had been gaining in intensity for several years. It had begun to organize itself for effective action. The early season's epidemic of "brothel plays" in New York, followed by the booking of the most flagrantly offensive of these plays in other American cities, gave the signal for open rebellion.

I firmly believe that hundreds of thousands of American playgoers have "boycotted" the theater entirely, in protest against this season's dramatic obscenities in New York and elsewhere. The financial losses of American playhouses all over the country justify this belief. Many good plays have suffered because of this resentment of evil plays. Uncertain, and properly apprehensive as to what they might encounter at the playhouses, great hosts of once constant playgoers have remained away from the playhouses altogether. There has been a tremendous drift toward the moving pictures for entertainment. Play after play has failed on the road. There has never been a season of such widespread wreckage. One or two of the richest and most powerful play-producers began to predict all sorts of managerial smashups. It was agreed that the year's showing of theatrical calamity would be without a parallel. And this showing, now so near completion, already is unparalleled. The play-magnates themselves confess the truth. "What is the matter with the American stage?" they ask—almost incredibly blind to the facts in the case.

"The Lure" gives them their answer.

Immediately following the close of the second act of "The Lure" at the Shubert Theater in St. Louis last Sunday night—the act then presenting a scene in "Madame Lockwood's" disorderly resort—a St. Louis playgoer who himself is not in the least squeamish stopped and spoke to me in passing out.

"This is the most offensive scene I have ever witnessed in the theater," he said. "It crosses the dead line of decency. If I had a daughter and she happened to attend this play and saw such a picture of life as is shown in this act, I should feel like taking the law into my own hands. There is no excuse for the staging of such a scene."

I mention this incident because it helps to explain why so many American playhouses now are appealing in vain for that favor of the play-going public which once they so profitably possessed. They themselves, through the medium of such plays as "The Lure," have alienated this public. In this country it is folly to contend that the drama is for "sophisticated" persons alone, that it properly may descend into any or all of Life's cesspools in its quest of themes for the public's entertainment. American theaters are supported by women—the mothers, sisters, wives, daughters and sweethearts of the men who pay for the theater seats of their once so steady occupancy. American women are not "sophisticated" to the point of relishing the presentation of such uncleanly phases of life as are encountered in "The Lure's" story. And American men manfully resent the stage's attempt to soil the clean minds of their women folk with the tenderloin smut of such stories. The presentation of such a play as "The Lure" at a reputable playhouse is an amazingly folly-stricken blunder, directly challenging the hostility of the decent millions of "family" playgoers without whose support the theaters of this country may not exist. This is absolutely true. It is true even of New York City, as I told you last fall, quoting the very words of a man who himself is prominent in metropolitan play-producing circles. "It is the family habit of going to the theater that supports our New York playhouses," this man said. "If we had to depend upon the 'smart set's' patronage or upon transient visitors, or upon the appeal of daringly bold and startling plays, we would be bankrupt. The husband and wife who habitually seek one evening's entertainment each week at the theater—the young man who takes his sweetheart to the play—the little family parties—the thousands of women who attend matinee performances—these constitute the public to which the American theater must look for its support. If this following is antagonized, the theater itself is marked for calamity."

There was a time—and not so far distant in the past—when little heed would have been paid to such an utterance. Now, however, public sentiment demands that the popular protest against unclean and indecent plays shall be heeded. Playgoers are remaining away from the theaters until decency is restored to the drama. This is the one Great Cause of the disastrous season now so near its close.

During the week just ended Prosecuting Attorney Sidener, urged to action by the Committee on Morals of the American Federation of Catholic Societies, compelled the withdrawal of "The Lure" from the Shubert Theater, cutting short its St. Louis engagement.

The Post-Dispatch performed its duty of public service when it called attention to the objectionable nature of this play. In this performance of its duty there was no animus of prejudice. Neither the Scarborough play nor its producers, the Shuberts, have been unfairly treated. When I was in New York City last November I saw two plays of George Scarborough's writing, "The Lure" and "At Bay," both produced under the Shubert management. "The Lure" I condemned unreservedly as an unclean and indecent play, the presentation of which in a reputable playhouse was unpardonable and not to be condoned—and I again condemned it when, in even a more offensive form, it first was presented in St. Louis last Sunday night. The other Scarborough work, "At Bay," I commended unreservedly as the strongest, most skilfully constructed and most interesting melodrama then on the New York stage. "When a melodrama happily chances to be a good melodrama," I wrote, "it is well worth while as worthy entertainment, because a strong story of human passion and the stormier vicissitudes of life is the very backbone of effective playmaking. 'At Bay' is a good melodrama, the best example of its class now on the metropolitan stage. Its plot is shrewdly conceived. Its construction is admirable. The natural sequence of its blood-quickening events is so shaped that one is genuinely absorbed in the progress of the play's swift action. Its surprises are keenly relished. Its big climax is smashingly accomplished. Its denouement is delightfully unexpected and satisfying."

It is a pleasure to be able now to add that the success of "At Bay" has been a hundred-fold greater than that of "The Lure." It drew crowded houses at every performance during its long New York run. It was similarly prosperous on tour. It bids fair to live profitably for several seasons. I call the attention of the play's author and producing managers to this significant contrast.

DON'T SCOLD A CROSS, SICK CHILD BUT GIVE DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS."

Look at the tongue, mother. If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, has stomach ache, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in just a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little stomach and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless fruit laxative; they love its delicious taste and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages, and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—ADV.

ROBERT HILLIARD IN 'ARGYLE CASE' NOW AT OLYMPIC

"Life of Our Savior," Photoplay, at Shubert; "The Divorce Question" at American.

ROBERT HILLIARD in "The Argyle Case." Olympic. An up-to-date detective drama, illustrating the most modern methods employed in bringing criminals to justice, written by Harriot Ford and Harvey J. O'Higgins, assisted by Detective William J. Burns.

Mr. Hilliard appears in the role of Asche Kayton, the new type of detective, a man of brains, breeding and forcefulness. Kayton is engaged in the solution of two crime mysteries, a murder and a big counterfeiting plot. He employs all the latest aids of his calling—the dictograph, registering the spoken word; the Roneophone, that catches the voice of a "suspect" over the dictograph wire and reproduces it phonographically; the finger-print system of identification of criminals; the new devices that reveal the tricks of money bleaching and color photography. A double-stage setting that shows the counterfeiters at work and the dictograph operators listening to their incriminating conversation is a scenic feature of the production. Mr. Hilliard has scored a great success as Asche Kayton. The play ran for seven months in New York last season.

The original New York company selected by Klaw & Erlanger for the star's support includes among its 30 members Gustav von Seyffertitz, Edwin Holland, W. T. Clark, Harvey Clark, Bert Walter, Edwin Redding, J. J. Pierson, Robert Newcombs, Ralph Theodore, Olive Oliver, Stella Archer, Agnes Everett, Dorothey Tureak and Elizabeth Eyre.

Next week, San Carlo Grand Opera Company in repertoire.

"LIFE OF OUR SAVIOR." Shubert. A great photoplay production by Pathe Freres. Scenes posed in the Holy Land by a large company of competent players under skillful direction. Striking pictures show the birth of Christ, the slaying of the male children by Pilate's orders, the flight into Egypt, the boy Christ in the temple, his baptism in the River Jordan, his miracles, the Last Supper, the betrayal, the crucifixion the descent from the cross, the burial, resurrection and ascension.

"THE DIVORCE QUESTION. American. A play by William Anthony McGuire, emphasizing the firmness of the Catholic Church's stand against divorce and showing the cruel injustice to children wrought by the divorce evil. The story told by the play is said to be uncommonly strong and direct in its teaching, also possessing delightful touches of comedy. It concerns two young sweethearts, a kindly priest who rescues them from certain pitfalls and snares of their encountering, a humorous caretaker in the priest's employ and other characters incidental to such a story. The cast includes William Brummell, Fred Douglas, Douglas Lawrence, Charles C. Burnham, Barbara Douglas and others.

VAUDEVILLE. Columbia. Bill headed by Cecil Lean, assisted by Cleo Mayfield, in songs and travesties, and Bickel and Watson in German dialect comedy.

VAUDEVILLE. Hippodrome. Bill headed by the Mullen Sisters and company in "The United States Military Maids," a big musical singing production.

VAUDEVILLE. Grand. Bill headed by the Six Diving Models, presenting aquatic feats in a glass tank holding 18,000 gallons of water.

ROSEY-POSEY GIRLS. Standard Will present two burlesques entitled "The Mayor's Election," and "The Dashing Widow," also bright vaudeville. Special feature, the Barbary Coast dance known as the Tangoetta. Thursday night, amateurs. Friday night, wrestling.

"GIRLS FROM MAXIM'S." Gayety. A musical comedy in two acts, with vaudeville interspersed. Special feature, Bob Fitzsimmons, former heavyweight champion, and his son, Bob Fitzsimmons Jr., in three-round boxing bouts, the senior Fitzsimmons also giving a monologue.

PHOTOPLAY. New Grand Central. "Clothes," the society drama in which Grace George scored such a big success, now shown in moving pictures with Charlotte Ives and House Peters in the leading roles. Musical program includes organ solo and vocal numbers between the reels.

PHOTOPLAY. Garrick. "The Rise and Fall of Napoleon," a stupendous eight-reel military-historic production.

The Lambs, New York's famous theatrical organization, begin their annual All-Star Lambs' Gambol tour at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York City, on Friday evening, May 22, and will be seen at the Olympic Theater in St. Louis on Wednesday afternoon and evening, May 27. They will present a brilliant program of minstrel, comedy, musical and other features, among the principal performers being DeWolf Hopper, Digby Bell, Raymond Hitchcock, William Collier, William H. Crane, Douglas Fairbanks, Frank McIntyre, Andrew Mack, Charles E. Evans and Frank Daniels.

BALCONY SOLD OUT FOR "PARSIFAL" AND "RIGOLETTO"

But Parquet and Box Seats for All Operas of April Season Still Are Obtainable.

There are no more balcony seats for "Parsifal" and "Rigoletto," but a few may still be had for "Tosca" and "Aida," and there are choice parquet and box seats still to be had for all the operas to be given by the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company at the Odeon, April 16, 17 and 18.

So great is the interest manifested in these operatic performances that plans are now being matured for the building of a new fireproof opera house, really adequate to the production of grand opera and affording enough seats at moderate prices to accommodate that large class of music lovers whose dollars must be counted with care to make both ends meet.

The following telegram referring to "Parsifal" was received from Signor Campanini and it indicates plainly how the performances of "Parsifal" under his able direction are being received.

Grand Opera Committee, St. Louis: "Parsifal" performance great success tonight. Audience packed to the doors. Putting on another "Parsifal" performance next Thursday. All artists scored heavily. Four of original Bayreuth singers in the cast, Saltsman, Stevens, Whitehill, Hinckley and Morak. Next week closes season here. All performances will practically sell out.

CLEOFONTE CAMPANINI.

It is reported that several of the guarantors are arranging box parties with a view of having present Harold F. McCormick, Charles G. Dawes, John C. Shaffer, Max Pam, Julius Rosenwald and other officers of the Chicago-Philadelphia company and possibly Otto H. Kahn, who is the head of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York.

"Pilate's Daughter," a miracle-play by Rev. Francis L. Kensel of the Order of Redemptorists, soon is to be produced at a New York theater under the management of George H. Brennan. Throughout every Lenten period for 11 years past it has been presented in the theater connected with the Mission Church of Roxbury, near Boston, and always to crowded houses. The play's scenes are laid in Jerusalem and Rome in the time of Christ. There is but one female character—the title role—in the play.

"Grumpy," in which Cyril Maude, the English actor, has been playing to crowded houses in New York since last November, recently scored boxoffice receipts of $15,666.50 in one week. During that same week five other Liebler successes," "Joseph and His Brethren," "The Garden of Allah," "Disraeli," May Irwin and "The Speckled Band," brought the total Liebler receipts for the week up to $66,000, an average of $11,000 for each offering.

Humperdinck's new opera, "Die Marketenderin," deals with a historical incident of 100 years ago when, on New Year's eve, the entire Germany army under Blucher made the march across the Rhine. Its title role figure is that of a German peasant girl who is at first arrested as a spy, but afterwards splendidly serves her country by guiding the German army to a point where the fording of the Rhine is easly possible.

Leo Ditrichstein, now recovered from the illness that terminated the run of "The Temperamental Journey" in New York City, hereafter is to be a full-fledged Belasco star. Following his return from a convalescing holiday abroad he will be presented in a new play of his own writing.

Walker Whiteside has scored a big success in "The Melting Pot" in London. The Times, the Telegraph, the Standard and the Post are unanimous in pronouncing him an actor of unusual power and passion, reserved, intense and at all times sincere.

New York theatrical managers now complain that the craze for dancing the tango is keeping people away from the theaters.

GENIAL "POTASH AND PERLMUTTER" GOES TO LONDON

New American Company Will Begin English Engagement at Queen's Theater April 11.

The American company engaged to play "Potash and Perlmutter," at the Queen's Theater in London, sailed last week, and this greatly successful American comedy will receive its English premiere production on April 11, following a few "finishing-touch" rehearsals.

There is much curious speculation as to the reception of "Potash and Perlmutter" by the London playgoing public, but it is felt that the odds are in the play's favor, because of its irresistible humor. Even though the scenes of its story are laid in New York City, its character-types are as well known in London as on this side, and the likelihood that it will score a big English hit is thought to be strong.

Gus Yorke, of the Hebrew dialect team of Yorke and Adams, is to play the role of "Abe" Potash, and Robert Leonard, less known, that of "Mawruss" Perlmutter. Mathilde Cottrelly, who achieved such a great individual triumph as Frau Gudula in "The Five Frankfurters" last season, will appear as Mrs. Potash. Others in the company are Charles Dickson, cast as Pasinsky, the lawyer; Edgar E. Elwanger, Ernest Milton, [illegible] Mathews, Franklyn Hanna, Guy Warfield, Madeleine Seymour and Julia Bruns.

The enterprise is under the direction of Edwin Laurillard, a London theatrical man. Montague Glass, author of the "Potash and Perlmutter" stories will attend the play's London premiere performance.

The chorus of "Ziegfeld's Follies" went on strike at the Princess Theater in Montreal, Canada, recently because Jose Collins, the prima donna, waved a British flag at a certain moment in the play's story when the Stars and Stripes should have been unfurled. The strike was settled by Ziegfeld himself issuing an order that Miss Collins should use the American flag alone in future.

FROHMAN PLAYS TO BE PRESENTED IN "MOVIES"

Charles Frohman has allied himself with the photoplay interests by entering into an agreement with the Famous Players Film Co., of which Daniel Frohman is managing director, for the motion-picture reproduction of all plays controlled by him.

The first Frohman play to be presented in the films will be "The Lost Paradise," one of the biggest Frohman successes some years ago, and H. B. Warner, the English actor, has been engaged for the leading role in the photoplay presentation. The playing of the play into the films begins at the Famous Players studio this week. All the Frohman reproductions will be made under the direction of a special subsidiary corporation.

The company also will establish studios in London, with Hugh Ford to direct the Frohman photoplay productions there and on the Continent.

BIBLICAL STORY IN BALLET.

During Sir Joseph Beecham's season at Drury Lane, London, in May the Russian dancers will present the new—and first—ballet of Richard Strauss' composing, entitled "The Legend of Joseph," and based on the Biblical story of Joseph and Potiphar's wife. The role of Joseph will be taken by Leonid Miassin, a remarkable lad of 17, who has had nine years' training in the Russian Imperial ballet school and is said to be a consummate dancer and a singularly talented actor. Richard Strauss himself will conduct the performance.

"ALONE AT LAST," NEW LEHAR OPERA, A VIENNA SUCCESS

Romantic poetic music is said to characterize Franz Lehar's new opera, "Endlich Allein" ("Alone at Last"), which recently received its premiere production in Vienna, telling a love story which is characterized as being "largely a musical duet" in its dominant aspect.

With but two important figures in its cast, the novelty of the new work is encountered in the second act, which is given over exclusively to these two, nevertheless the production is said to be of grand opera proportions and values. In refinement and nobility its score is pronounced far superior to anything Lehar has ever written until now.

At the same time it is conceded to possess some notably attractive popular strains. A slow B-sharp waltz, "The World Is Beautiful," forms the leading motif and is declared to be superb in its effect. A typical Lehar waltz in G-sharp, "Only Those Who Have Loved," also scored a big hit, as did a charming gavotte.

The new opera demands no chorus and there are no large dance numbers. Negotiations are under way for its American presentation next season.

"There's Nothing to Compare"

Exclaimed a professor of music when asked how the New Edison compared with other makes. "Why the Edison combines all the other makes, therefore there is nothing to compare.'

Edison's New Diamond-Disc Phonograph

(IT'S A DIAMOND—SEE THE POINT)

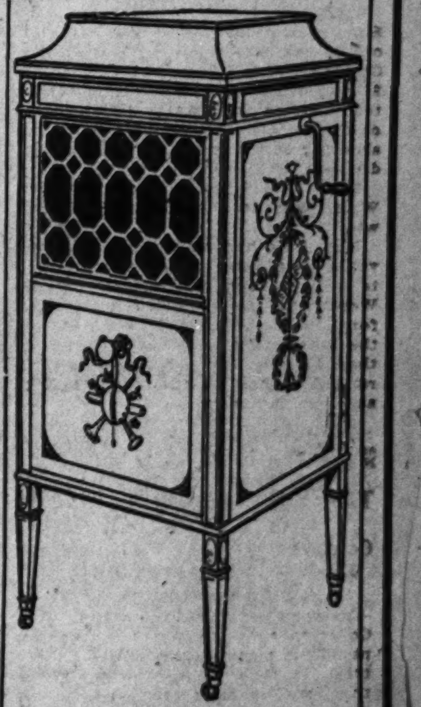
NOW ON DISPLAY AT THE SILVERSTONE MUSIC CO.'S PARLORS

IS THE ONLY sound-reproducing instrument equipped with an oval sound chamber.

Sound waves are engraved on the record, magnified by the reproducer or sound box, and amplified by a sound chamber; this sound chamber should not be square or have square corners.

The science of acoustics teaches us that sound waves travel in curves or ovals, therefore an oval sound chamber is the only correct principle for conveying and amplifying sound. The violin is a series of curves, not a straight line in it.

The Edison plays all makes of records, and you can use the following combination on this instrument.



The New Edison Diamond-Disc.

1. Victor record with Victor sound box; result, improved Victor tone, due to the New Edison's oval sound chamber.

2. Columbia record with Columbia sound box; result, improved Columbia tone, due to the New Edison's oval sound chamber.

3. Edison record with Edison Diamond reproducer, and Edison's oval sound chamber, an ideal combination; result, a perfect reproduction of the fundamental tone, with all the overtones or tone colors. This is new to the art of sound-reproduction.

No other machine can play Edison records, because no other machine has a mechanical feed.

The tremendous sales made in St. Louis is absolute proof of a genuine interest in Edison's New Diamond-Disc.

St. Louis Playbills — Lesson of "The Lure" — Opera Season

"The Lure" Answers the Panicky Query—"What's Wrong With the American Stage?"

Unclean and Indecent Plays Have Alienated the Great Playgoing Public and Caused the Most Disastrous Season Known in American Theatrical History—Thousands Remain Away From the Theater in Protest Against Offensive Productions—A Study of the Existing Situation.

ROBERT HILLIARD and STELLA ARCHER in "THE ARGYLE CASE" OLYMPIC.

Star and Leading Woman of Up-to-Date Detective Drama, Illustrating Modern Police Methods, Now to Be Seen at a St. Louis Playhouse.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

IN the spectacle of such a play as "The Lure" being presented at a reputable playhouse before a decent audience, more than a few members of which, perhaps, are in ignorance of the play's character until its offensiveness is revealed by the performance itself, is found the answer to that vital question of today—"What's the matter with American theatrical conditions?"—which has been provoked by the most disastrous season yet recorded in the dramatic history of this country.

I am fully aware that the first retort to this statement will be that "The Lure" and other plays of its kind are known to make a profitable appeal to a large class of playgoers. My reply to such a rejoinder is that this is not now unvaryingly true, and that, even at its best, a following thus established is the most calamitous that can be possessed by any theater, and that not even the lowest burlesque houses dare "go the limit" in this direction. To gain such a following a theater must not only alienate a decent public infinitely greater in point of numbers, but it must needs dig deeper and deeper in filth if it hopes permanently to hold the unsavory clientele thus invited to its support. And, inevitably, it arrives at that phase of its enterprise where this no longer may be done without incurring certain penalties of the law whose enforcement means the closing of the offending playhouse as a menace to public morals. A managerial policy more suicidal than this has never been instituted in the conduct of American theaters.

The lesson to this effect is being learned by New York's big producers of plays. Aside from one or two cases of individual stubbornness such as is illustrated in the persistent cramming of "The Lure" down the public's throat, the leading American theatrical magnates now are engaged in a panic-stricken endeavor to regain the favor of the millions of clean-minded playgoers who have been antagonized and driven from the theater by "smut-plays" of "The Lure's" foul class.

Until this lost following of decency-preferring playgoers is regained there will be "hard times" in the American theatrical world. This is due to the fact that, in this country, what is known as the "family" patronage of playhouses, comprising the great bulk of the American public, is the very foundation structure of permanent playhouse prosperity. This truth provokes much ironical jibing on the part of the "sophisticated" few who relish the "hot seasoning" of drama more than they do the wholesome meat itself, but it stands as the four-square truth nevertheless.

And it is a truth that happened to be undeniably in evidence at the time of my latest play-reviewing visit to New York City last fall. The early weeks of the then new season had been prolific of unclean dramas. "The Lure," "The Fight," "Any Night" and other plays of similar offensiveness came in swift succession. It seemed to be the managerial conviction, openly confessed and put into practice, that no dramatic offering could hope for success unless it staged a scene in a disorderly resort as its big feature. New York play reviewers finally began to protest against what they tersely and truthfully christened the "brothel play." The epidemic of tenderloin obscenity got on New York's nerves. Then, unexpectedly and significantly, the "brothel plays" developed a withering death-rate. In swift succession they failed, some on their very first night, others after two or three performances, others again at the close of their birth-week, one or two alone living long enough to claim the prestige of a metropolitan "run." Even in such case there was no genuine success. "The Lure" hung on longer than any of its malodorous fellows—but on that November night when I witnessed a New York performance of "The Lure" at the Maxine Elliott Theater the house was not one-third full.

Such of these plays, repudiated even in "wicked" New York, as were thought to have any vitality still remaining, were sent on tour. Their producers were not sufficiently wise to profit by an intelligent reading of New York's ominous handwriting on the wall. They must needs splash their filth into the faces of the entire American playgoing public.

No more foolish course could have been followed. It came at the psychological moment of American revolt against the unclean drama. This spirit of revolt had been gaining in intensity for several years. It had begun to organize itself for effective action. The early season's epidemic of "brothel plays" in New York, followed by the booking of the most flagrantly offensive of these plays in other American cities, gave the signal for open rebellion.

I firmly believe that hundreds of thousands of American playgoers have "boycotted" the theater entirely, in protest against this season's dramatic obscenities in New York and elsewhere. The financial losses of American playhouses all over the country justify this belief. Many good plays have suffered because of this resentment of evil plays. Uncertain, and properly apprehensive as to what they might encounter at the playhouses, great hosts of once constant playgoers have remained away from the playhouses altogether. There has been a tremendous drift toward the moving pictures for entertainment. Play after play has failed on the road. There has never been a season of such widespread wreckage. One or two of the richest and most powerful play-producers began to predict all sorts of managerial smashups. It was agreed that the year's showing of theatrical calamity would be without a parallel. And this showing, now so near completion, already is unparalleled. The play-magnates themselves confess the truth. "What is the matter with the American stage?" they ask—almost incredibly blind to the facts in the case.

"The Lure" gives them their answer.

Immediately following the close of the second act of "The Lure" at the Shubert Theater in St. Louis last Sunday night—the act then presenting a scene in "Madame Lockwood's" disorderly resort—a St. Louis playgoer who himself is not in the least squeamish stopped and spoke to me in passing out.

"This is the most offensive scene I have ever witnessed in the theater," he said. "It crosses the dead line of decency. If I had a daughter and she happened to attend this play and saw such a picture of life as is shown in this act, I should feel like taking the law into my own hands. There is no excuse for the staging of such a scene."

I mention this incident because it helps to explain why so many American playhouses now are appealing in vain for that favor of the play-going public which once they so profitably possessed. They themselves, through the medium of such plays as "The Lure," have alienated this public. In this country it is folly to contend that the drama is for "sophisticated" persons alone, that it properly may descend into any or all of Life's cesspools in its quest of themes for the public's entertainment. American theaters are supported by women—the mothers, sisters, wives, daughters and sweethearts of the men who pay for the theater seats of their once so steady occupancy. American women are not "sophisticated" to the point of relishing the presentation of such uncleanly phases of life as are encountered in "The Lure's" story. And American men manfully resent the stage's attempt to soil the clean minds of their women folk with the tenderloin smut of such stories. The presentation of such a play as "The Lure" at a reputable playhouse is an amazingly folly-stricken blunder, directly challenging the hostility of the decent millions of "family" playgoers without whose support the theaters of this country may not exist. This is absolutely true. It is true even of New York City, as I told you last fall, quoting the very words of a man who himself is prominent in metropolitan play-producing circles. "It is the family habit of going to the theater that supports our New York playhouses," this man said. "If we had to depend upon the 'smart set's' patronage or upon transient visitors, or upon the appeal of daringly bold and startling plays, we would be bankrupt. The husband and wife who habitually seek one evening's entertainment each week at the theater—the young man who takes his sweetheart to the play—the little family parties—the thousands of women who attend matinee performances—these constitute the public to which the American theater must look for its support. If this following is antagonized, the theater itself is marked for calamity."

There was a time—and not so far distant in the past—when little heed would have been paid to such an utterance. Now, however, public sentiment demands that the popular protest against unclean and indecent plays shall be heeded. Playgoers are remaining away from the theaters until decency is restored to the drama. This is the one Great Cause of the disastrous season now so near its close.

During the week just ended Prosecuting Attorney Sidener, urged to action by the Committee on Morals of the American Federation of Catholic Societies, compelled the withdrawal of "The Lure" from the Shubert Theater, cutting short its St. Louis engagement.

The Post-Dispatch performed its duty of public service when it called attention to the objectionable nature of this play. In this performance of its duty there was no animus of prejudice. Neither the Scarborough play nor its producers, the Shuberts, have been unfairly treated. When I was in New York City last November I saw two plays of George Scarborough's writing, "The Lure" and "At Bay," both produced under the Shubert management. "The Lure" I condemned unreservedly as an unclean and indecent play, the presentation of which in a reputable playhouse was unpardonable and not to be condoned—and I again condemned it when, in even a more offensive form, it first was presented in St. Louis last Sunday night. The other Scarborough work, "At Bay," I commended unreservedly as the strongest, most skilfully constructed and most interesting melodrama then on the New York stage. "When a melodrama happily chances to be a good melodrama," I wrote, "it is well worth while as worthy entertainment, because a strong story of human passion and the stormier vicissitudes of life is the very backbone of effective playmaking. 'At Bay' is a good melodrama, the best example of its class now on the metropolitan stage. Its plot is shrewdly conceived. Its construction is admirable. The natural sequence of its blood-quickening events is so shaped that one is genuinely absorbed in the progress of the play's swift action. Its surprises are keenly relished. Its big climax is smashingly accomplished. Its denouement is delightfully unexpected and satisfying."

It is a pleasure to be able now to add that the success of "At Bay" has been a hundred-fold greater than that of "The Lure." It drew crowded houses at every performance during its long New York run. It was similarly prosperous on tour. It bids fair to live profitably for several seasons. I call the attention of the play's author and producing managers to this significant contrast.

The Lambs, New York's famous theatrical organization, begin their annual All-Star Lambs' Gambol tour at the Metropolitan Opera House, New York City, on Friday evening, May 22, and will be seen at the Olympic Theater in St. Louis on Wednesday afternoon and evening, May 27. They will present a brilliant program of minstrel, comedy, musical and other features, among the principal performers being DeWolf Hopper, Digby Bell, Raymond Hitchcock, William Collier, William H. Crane, Douglas Fairbanks, Frank McIntyre, Andrew Mack, Charles E. Evans and Frank Daniels.

BALCONY SOLD OUT FOR "PARSIFAL" AND "RIGOLETTO"

But Parquet and Box Seats for All Operas of April Season Still Are Obtainable.

There are no more balcony seats for "Parsifal" and "Rigoletto," but a few may still be had for "Tosca" and "Aida," and there are choice parquet and box seats still to be had for all the operas to be given by the Chicago-Philadelphia Opera Company at the Odeon, April 16, 17 and 18.

So great is the interest manifested in these operatic performances that plans are now being matured for the building of a new fireproof opera house, really adequate to the production of grand opera and affording enough seats at moderate prices to accommodate that large class of music lovers whose dollars must be counted with care to make both ends meet.

The following telegram referring to "Parsifal" was received from Signor Campanini and it indicates plainly how the performances of "Parsifal" under his able direction are being received.

Grand Opera Committee, St. Louis: "Parsifal" performance great success tonight. Audience packed to the doors. Putting on another "Parsifal" performance next Thursday. All artists scored heavily. Four of original Bayreuth singers in the cast, Saltsman, Stevens, Whitehill, Hinckley and Morak. Next week closes season here. All performances will practically sell out.

CLEOFONTE CAMPANINI.

It is reported that several of the guarantors are arranging box parties with a view of having present Harold F. McCormick, Charles G. Dawes, John C. Shaffer, Max Pam, Julius Rosenwald and other officers of the Chicago-Philadelphia company and possibly Otto H. Kahn, who is the head of the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York.

"Pilate's Daughter," a miracle-play by Rev. Francis L. Kensel of the Order of Redemptorists, soon is to be produced at a New York theater under the management of George H. Brennan. Throughout every Lenten period for 11 years past it has been presented in the theater connected with the Mission Church of Roxbury, near Boston, and always to crowded houses. The play's scenes are laid in Jerusalem and Rome in the time of Christ. There is but one female character—the title role—in the play.

"Grumpy," in which Cyril Maude, the English actor, has been playing to crowded houses in New York since last November, recently scored boxoffice receipts of $15,666.50 in one week. During that same week five other Liebler successes," "Joseph and His Brethren," "The Garden of Allah," "Disraeli," May Irwin and "The Speckled Band," brought the total Liebler receipts for the week up to $66,000, an average of $11,000 for each offering.

Humperdinck's new opera, "Die Marketenderin," deals with a historical incident of 100 years ago when, on New Year's eve, the entire Germany army under Blucher made the march across the Rhine. Its title role figure is that of a German peasant girl who is at first arrested as a spy, but afterwards splendidly serves her country by guiding the German army to a point where the fording of the Rhine is easily possible.

Leo Ditrichstein, now recovered from the illness that terminated the run of "The Temperamental Journey" in New York City, hereafter is to be a full-fledged Belasco star. Following his return from a convalescing holiday abroad he will be presented in a new play of his own writing.

Walker Whiteside has scored a big success in "The Melting Pot" in London. The Times, the Telegraph, the Standard and the Post are unanimous in pronouncing him an actor of unusual power and passion, reserved, intense and at all times sincere.

New York theatrical managers now complain that the craze for dancing the tango is keeping people away from the theaters.

GENIAL "POTASH AND PERLMUTTER" GOES TO LONDON

New American Company Will Begin English Engagement at Queen's Theater April 11.

The American company engaged to play "Potash and Perlmutter," at the Queen's Theater in London, sailed last week, and this greatly successful American comedy will receive its English premiere production on April 11, following a few "finishing-touch" rehearsals.

There is much curious speculation as to the reception of "Potash and Perlmutter" by the London playgoing public, but it is felt that the odds are in the play's favor, because of its irresistible humor. Even though the scenes of its story are laid in New York City, its character-types are as well known in London as on this side, and the likelihood that it will score a big English hit is thought to be strong.

Gus Yorke, of the Hebrew dialect team of Yorke and Adams, is to play the role of "Abe" Potash, and Robert Leonard, less known, that of "Mawruss" Perlmutter. Mathilde Cottrelly, who achieved such a great individual triumph as Frau Gudula in "The Five Frankfurters" last season, will appear as Mrs. Potash. Others in the company are Charles Dickson, cast as Pasinsky, the lawyer; Edgar E. Elwanger, Ernest Milton, Ezra Mathews, Franklyn Hanna, Guy Warfield, Madeleine Seymour and Julia Bruns.

The enterprise is under the direction of Edwin Laurillard, a London theatrical man. Montague Glass, author of the "Potash and Perlmutter" stories will attend the play's London premiere performance.

The chorus of "Ziegfeld's Follies" went on strike at the Princess Theater in Montreal, Canada, recently because Jose Collins, the prima donna, waved a British flag at a certain moment in the play's story when the Stars and Stripes should have been unfurled. The strike was settled by Ziegfeld himself issuing an order that Miss Collins should use the American flag alone in future.

FROHMAN PLAYS TO BE PRESENTED IN "MOVIES"

Charles Frohman has allied himself with the photoplay interests by entering into an agreement with the Famous Players Film Co., of which Daniel Frohman is managing director, for the motion-picture reproduction of all plays controlled by him.

The first Frohman play to be presented in the films will be "The Lost Paradise," one of the biggest Frohman successes some years ago, and H. B. Warner, the English actor, has been engaged for the leading role in the photoplay presentation. The playing of the play into the films begins at the Famous Players studio this week. All the Frohman reproductions will be made under the direction of a special subsidiary corporation.

The company also will establish studios in London, with Hugh Ford to direct the Frohman photoplay productions there and on the Continent.

BIBLICAL STORY IN BALLET.

During Sir Joseph Beecham's season at Drury Lane, London, in May the Russian dancers will present the new—and first—ballet of Richard Strauss' composing, entitled "The Legend of Joseph," and based on the Biblical story of Joseph and Potiphar's wife. The role of Joseph will be taken by Leonid Miassin, a remarkable lad of 17, who has had nine years' training in the Russian imperial ballet school and is said to be a consummate dancer and a singularly talented actor. Richard Strauss himself will conduct the performance.

"ALONE AT LAST," NEW LEHAR OPERA, A VIENNA SUCCESS

Romantic poetic music is said to characterize Franz Lehar's new opera, "Endlich Allein" ("Alone at Last"), which recently received its premiere production in Vienna, telling a love story which is characterized as being "largely a musical duet" in its dominant aspect.

With but two important figures in its cast, the novelty of the new work is encountered in the second act, which is given over exclusively to these two, nevertheless the production is said to be of grand opera proportions and values. In refinement and nobility its score is pronounced far superior to anything Lehar has ever written until now.

At the same time it is conceded to possess some notably attractive popular strains. A slow B-sharp waltz, "The World Is Beautiful," forms the leading motif and is declared to be superb in its effect. A typical Lehar waltz in G-sharp, "Only Those Who Have Loved," also scored a big hit, as did a charming gavotte.

The new opera demands no chorus and there are no large dance numbers. Negotiations are under way for its American presentation next season.

STOMACH SICK, SOUR, UPSET AND FULL OF GAS?—TRY PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered, you get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear. Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. Diapepsin is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Put an end to stomach trouble by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.—ADV.

DON'T SCOLD A CROSS, SICK CHILD BUT GIVE DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS."

Look at the tongue, mother. If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad, has stomach ache, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in just a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little stomach and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless fruit laxative; they love its delicious taste and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages, and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—ADV.

ELY'S CREAM BALM OPENS CLOGGED NOSTRILS AND HEAD—CATARRH GOES

Get a small bottle anyway, just to try it—apply a little in the nostrils and instantly your clogged nose and stopped-up air passages of the head will open; you will breathe freely; dullness and headache disappear. By morning! the catarrh, cold-in-head or catarrhal sore throat will be gone.

End such misery now! Get the small bottle of "Ely's Cream Balm" at any drug store. This sweet, fragrant balm dissolves by the heat of the nostrils; penetrates and heals the inflamed, swollen membrane which lines the nose, head and throat; clears the air passages; stops nasty discharges and a feeling of cleansing, soothing relief comes immediately.

Don't lie awake tonight struggling for breath, with head stuffed; nostrils closed, hawking and blowing. Catarrh or a cold, with its running nose, foul mucous dropping into the throat, and raw dryness is distressing, but truly needless.

Put your faith—just once—in "Ely's Cream Balm" and your cold or catarrh will surely disappear.—ADV.

"There's Nothing to Compare"

Exclaimed a professor of music when asked how the New Edison compared with other makes. "Why the Edison combines all the other makes, therefore there is nothing to compare.'

Edison's New Diamond-Disc Phonograph

(IT'S A DIAMOND—SEE THE POINT)

NOW ON DISPLAY AT THE SILVERsTONE MUSIC CO.'S PARLORS

IS THE ONLY sound-reproducing instrument equipped with an oval sound chamber.

Sound waves are engraved on the record, magnified by the reproducer or sound box, and amplified by a sound chamber; this sound chamber should not be square or have square corners.

The science of acoustics teaches us that sound waves travel in curves or ovals, therefore an oval sound chamber is the only correct principle for conveying and amplifying sound. The violin is a series of curves, not a straight line in it.

The Edison plays all makes of records, and you can use the following combination on this instrument.

1. Victor record with Victor sound box; result, improved Victor tone, due to the New Edison's oval sound chamber.

2. Columbia record with Columbia sound box; result, improved Columbia tone, due to the New Edison's oval sound chamber.

3. Edison record with Edison Diamond reproducer, and Edison's oval sound chamber, an ideal combination; result, a perfect reproduction of the fundamental tone, with all the overtones or tone colors. This is new to the art of sound-reproduction.

No other machine can play Edison records, because no other machine has a mechanical feed.

The tremendous sales made in St. Louis is absolute proof of a genuine interest in Edison's New Diamond-Disc.

"MARRIAGE IS AN ANTIDOTE FOR ALL WOMAN PROBLEMS"

Corra Harris Says So-Called Sex Menace Is Figment of Imagination.

the silent companions of their husbands.

"People do not talk much in the valley, because there is not much to say. They know the weather, a few psalms, a few golden texts and a few hymns by heart. They also know each other the same way, which is a good deal more than husbands and wives can always claim in this place.

"I do not know a single lazy woman in the valley nor one who is unhappily married. They worry some over the bees when they swarm inopportunely and over the chickens when they take the roup, and over the children when they have a bad cold or do not learn their Sunday school lessons, but they do not worry over their husbands. They are not angry with mankind. As near as I can make out they want better schools and they long for a closer walk with God. But I never knew one to want a limousine or a servant to do her work or a nurse for her baby.

"And you could not put one of these fashionable split corkscrew skirts upon any of them. Call it what you please, evil-mindedness or modesty, but they are as far removed from the fashionable clothes one sees upon women here as these women would appear to them removed from decency and thrift. I do not know how long such a state of sweetness and homely goodness will last there. The feet of youth take hold upon the ways of the world. When I return this spring I may see some girl at the singing school on Sunday afternoon wearing a tight skirt. But I am thankful I have seen what I have of the simple, direct living of these men and women in the valley, whose only problem is to perform the day's work well, to love one another and to believe in God and His mercies."

COMMANDER EVANS WILL TELL OF POLE TRIP

Last Living Man to Talk With Capt. Scott Will Speak at the Odeon April 13.

Commander Evans, who succeeded Capt. Scott in charge of the Expedition to the South Pole, will give his lecture "Captain Scott's Discovery of the South Pole" at the Odeon Easter Monday night, April 13. He will show the wonderful still and moving pictures taken during the Expedition by H. G. Ponting and Dr. E. A. Wilson of the lost English party.

He tells an appealing and impressive story of the hardships and adventures of the expedition; of the finding of the frozen body of Scott and his two companions, of Scott's faithfully kept diary and of the gallant Capt. Oates, who went out to die alone because he knew that his crippled condition was delaying his comrades.

Commander Evans was the trailbreaker for the party and went as far south as 87 degrees south latitude, only three degrees from the Pole. His was the last party to leave Scott and he was the last man, now living, who talked to Scott.

POLICEWOMAN SCORES 92, WINS REVOLVER MATCH

Member of Chicago Force Gets Medal in Woman's Competition of Sportsmen's Club.

CHICAGO, March 28.—Mrs. Lulu B. Burt, policewoman, qualified today as one of the best revolver shots on the Chicago police force. With a score of 92 out of 100 she won the gold medal today at the women's revolver match of the Sportsmen's Club of America, shooting at the regulation target and distance of 75 yards.

Miss Clara B. Olson and Mrs. Agnes Walsh tied for second and third with 89.

Mrs. Burt had never handled a revolver previous to her appointment to the Chicago police force. Lieut. Westbrook, pistol instructor of the force, said that not 35 per cent of the men police could shoot better than 50, and that Mrs. Burt must be ranked at least as one of the 10 best shots on the force.

TAX ON PASTOR'S INCOME

Conference Plans Levy on All Who Get Over $1000 Annually.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., March 28.—Members of the New York East Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church were almost unanimous today in favoring a recommendation that pastors receiving salaries of more than $1000 a year contribute 1 per cent of their income to a general fund which will be used to help pastors who receive salaries of less than $1000.

The question will be voted on before the conclusion of the conference.

Barber's Good Luck Costs $250.

VIENNA, March 28.—A barber here was shaving a customer when his wife rushed into the shop to tell him that they had won $5000 in a lottery. In his agitation the barber cut the customer severely, but for a consideration of $250 the latter agreed to say no more about it.

ST. LOUIS SINGER TO TOUR EUROPE

Popular Johnny Adams to Make His Last St. Louis Appearance at the Grand.

Will Sing Season's Big Hits

"LADDIE" and "I HAD A WONDERFUL GIRL"

Johnny Adams, the sweet-voiced baritone, has long been a favorite of St. Louis audiences. But Johnny is to leave us very shortly. He has been booked for a concert tour of Europe, and will sail for England within several weeks.

Adams has only a single engagement before leaving the country. He has been booked for a whole week, during the first part of April, at the Grand Opera House.

The two songs that he will sing at the Grand are the same two, that he will sing at every performance of the Continental concert tour.

They are "Laddie" and "I Had a Wonderful Girl." These two songs, Mr. Adams says, are the sweetest, most melodious songs of the year's offering.

"Laddie," the famous true-blue song, is a fantastic fairy tale in song. It's bewitching, tuneful melody, the critics say, will make it take rank with the folk-lore songs that never grow old.

"I Had a Wonderful Girl" was written specially for Mr. Adams. There's no use in trying to describe this song. But if you hear it only once you will understand why it was selected by Mr. Adams. It is truly a wonderful song about a wonderful girl.

Adams says he picked these two songs for his tour not alone because of their popularity, but because they were truly musical gems and would make good across the water, where the audiences are very critical judges of music.

Both "Laddie" and "I Had a Wonderful Girl" may be had at the leading musical departments.

Johnny Adams is singing these two songs by special permission of the publishers, Buck & Lowney, Holland Bldg., St. Louis.

SURGEONS ARE NEW AIDS TO JUDGE OF JUVENILE COURT

Judge Establishes Psychopathic Department Where Children May Be Treated.

SPECIALISTS ON STAFF

Two Physicians Will Serve Gratis and Co-Operation of One More Is Expected.

Circuit Judge Thomas C. Hennings, in the three months he has acted as Judge of the Juvenile Court has found that 75 per cent of youthful offenders in St. Louis are repeaters, and has become convinced that a number of irritable, nervous and abnormal afflictions in youth can be eliminated by simple surgical operations. To this end yesterday he established a psychopathic department for the treatment of such in rooms 115 and 116 municipal courts building, where he expects the reformation of many children can be obtained by minor surgical operations.

In the time that he has presided over the Juvenile Court Judge Hennings has become convinced that the removing of adenoids, treatment of the eyes, ears and the giving of medical attention to other ailments of Young America may have a beneficial effect upon their conduct.

With the addition of this service to the city's offenders, the Judge thinks that the Juvenile Court will be taking a step forward in the care of its boys and girls in their tender ages.

After Judge Henning had requested hospital authorities to equip rooms for the children's treatment, no city physician at the time was available to take charge of the work, so Dr. Lister Tuholske, 465 North Taylor avenue, and Dr. H. J. Scherck, 4561 McPherson avenue, offered their services gratis. They hope to secure the co-operation of an eye, ear, nose and throat specialist.

Judge Hennings got his idea of establishing a psycopathic department here from Dr. Lilburn Merrill, who directs this work in Seattle. According to Henning, Seattle, Chicago and St. Louis are the only cities known to carry on such work in connection with the Juvenile Court.

TRIES TO PROVE SATURN'S MOONS GO EAST TO WEST

Astronomer at Pittsburg Is Studying Planet and Satellites in 13-Inch Telescope.

PITTSBURG, Pa., March 28.—In an effort to verify the claims of J. H. Wayman, a local astronomer, that the moons surrounding the planet Saturn move from east to west instead of from west to east as is popularly supposed, Director Frank Schlesinger of the Allegheny Observatory here is making observations of Saturn and its moons.

Wayman claims that with a five-inch telescope and an erecting eyepiece he has found that Titan, one of Saturn's moons, travels with a retrograde motion. He says the other moons revolve similarly on their orbits.

Director Schlesinger was so impressed with Mayman's claims that he is making thorough observations with the 13-inch telescope in the Allegheny Observatory. He will announce his finding in a few days.

SLAYER PARDONED SO HE CAN BE ELECTROCUTED

Arkansas Life Term Man Put to Death a Few Minutes Later.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 28.—A few minutes after receiving a pardon from Gov. Hays, which released him from a 115-years sentence, Fred Pelton, a negro, was electrocuted today at the State Penitentiary here for the killing of Melvina Hatton, negress, whom he murdered to get 50 cents.

There was a question whether it would be legal to electrocute Pelton with the serving of his 115-year sentence incomplete and for this reason the pardon was granted.

HELD AS WIFE DESERTER

Russian Admits He Has Family in New York.

Morris Bergman, 40 years old, a Russian, was arrested yesterday at his home and express office, 1445 O'Fallon street. He is held for the New York police on a charge of wife desertion.

Bergman, who came to St. Louis from New York six years ago and took the name of Mike Berringer, told the police he has two children in New York, who are with his wife, and two children in St. Louis by a common law wife, with whom he has been living since coming here. His wife is Lena Bergman and his daughters by this marriage are Annie, 14, and Fanny, 12, who live at 58 Montgomery street, New York City.

Bergman told the police he left home because his wife nagged him. He says he has sent her $7 every week.

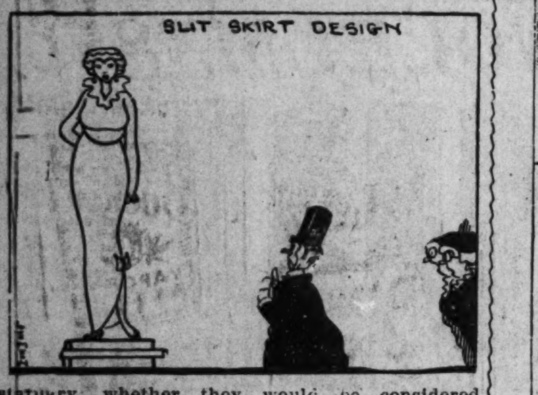
What Is Shocking?

BY CLARK M'ADAMS

THERE has been a great uproar this week over Miss Coonsman's design for the Kincaid Fountain, though it is likely that two nude little girls enveloped in spray would constitute a comparatively modest exhibit today upon one of the downtown streets. Water performs no such kindly office for the slit skirt. There are no Puritanical frogs spouting charity over the different closefitting and diaphanous gowns. All these things, which probably are shocking, go about continually without arousing protests from any organized source.

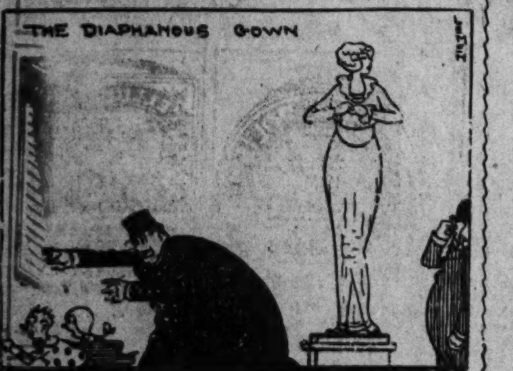
It is an amusing speculation to consider how some of our present-day fashions would look in statuary, whether they would be considered modest in bronze or marble, and if the community would tolerate them in that form. Yet these things are proper enough in fabrics and flesh, and we are coming to know a great many ladies as much by their lines as by their likenesses. If even thin sheets of water sometimes fell over them, softening the effects and somewhat obscuring the view, it would be an undoubted comfort to those of us who are constrained by modesty from looking about too much on the streets for fear of seeing too much of some lady we know.



SLIT SKIRT DESIGN

Indoor fashions would probably be even less susceptible to public acclaim in sculpture. The covering is disposed to be decidedly scant, and the dress goods is thinner. A tango costume such as one can see at any tango tea would probably be suppressed by the police if it were to be offered as the drapery upon some sculptural design for popular view. There are respects in which draped figures are even more than nude. All artists are conscious of this. Dressmakers apparently are not. What constitutes modesty in art is as far removed from the one sphere as what is considered proper in fashions is remote from the other. The artist seeks beauty, and the fashion monger seeks sensation. Between them there is a great chasm of misunderstanding, and it is into this chasm that Miss Coonsman's pretty design for the Kincaid Fountain has apparently fallen. The one side thinks the other has gone what may be termed "the rest of the way," whereas the artists are seeking to restore modesty in beauty.

BOSTON gives more attention to these things than any other big city in America. Extremely Puritanical and within the shadow of Plymouth Rock, Boston has generally been regarded by art as a walled city in which what is beautiful is always pretty well tailored. Nudes are even now looked upon with disfavor, and are usually run out of town. They have, however, found the other American cities fairly charitable. St. Louis is just beginning to face the question. Hitherto our sculpture has run the heroic statuary dressed, as a rule, in the trappings of war and the ministerial habiliments of the forum. The Blair statue, of which no visiting critic ever says anything kind, is a typical piece of local sculpture. The spectacle of this warrior-statesman continuing to harangue generations which do not recall what he was talking about is not pleasing to those who look about the city to see what we have in art, nor is it altogether quieting to some of us who cannot pass that point on a pleasant Sunday afternoon without having the sensation of being harangued. The Jahn statue, also in Forest Park, is modest enough, goodness knows, but if a cascade of water admitted no more than an occasional and not very certain peep at it there would be great rejoicing among people who have always questioned whether the invention of turper schools or whatever it was he invented is a satisfactory subject for public monuments.



THE DIAPHANOUS GOWN

It has been said that in the feminine perspective all things are either moral or immoral. That Miss Coonsman's design is immoral first occurred to women. Probably no man would have thought of it, or, if he did, would have felt sufficiently sure of it to have said anything. The women, however, make up their minds about things in a hurry, and they can resolve almost any issue into a moral issue much quicker than even a facile-tongued person can say Jack Robinson. This accounts for what happened in the city last week. There was a time, soon after the Mayflower brought to this country those ideas of the proprieties which were for so long to rule us, when the men were as alert in this respect as the women. As the ruling sex men learned in the course of time to appreciate those differences of opinion which make it impossible for one set of morals to rule very long over another, and there have been so many mutual concessions by this time that almost no issue is beclouded with the moral equation any more, so far as men are concerned. What is political, or what is ethical, is getting a hearing. Thus, while probably most women regard the prohibition question as a moral issue, many men refuse so to regard it, and to that discrimination we probably owe whatever is left of personal liberty in that respect among us. It is undeniable that the disposition of womankind to consider that all issues are moral has much to do with the reluctance of men to let them vote. There is a widespread fear, in this country, at least, that it the women shared equal political rights with the men it would not be long until we had, for instance, such laws as that nude figures cannot occur in public statuary. One can philosophically regret that the women did not begin voting when the men did. Had they done so they would no doubt be as tolerant by this time as men are, and could look out upon the stage of life from more points of view than are indicated by the stated objection to Miss Coonsman's design—that is that it would not be well for children to overhear the remarks of men about such a fountain.

WHAT is shocking chiefly depends upon the times and the morals. Thus, the humor of Aristophanes, which was evidently proper enough at the time it was written, is not proper now. It was proper in early Colonial days to get drunk, whereas it is very bad form now. Many differences of opinion as to the proprieties have only been settled by recourse to arms. In so unfair an arbitrament, no doubt, what was really proper oftentimes lost. Experience serves better than anything else to determine these things, and as we grow older and more experienced we find it possible to agree pretty well without shooting each other. Public opinion always decides, and if we are to have nude figures or draped figures in public statuary here it will be public opinion which decides that point, and not the radicals in either camp. We have no finer heritage in our country than an alert public opinion. Col. Watterson, who visited Spain soon after the Spanish War, accounted for the inefficiency of Spain in that war by the absence of public opinion in that country. The Spanish people had not at that time any means of exerting pressure by what they all thought, nor had the Government any means of ascertaining what they thought. It probably did what they thought it ought not to have done, had they been with any means of expression. That is impossible in our country. It was said of Col. Roosevelt that his real genius consisted in knowing what the people would think. His sense of public opinion was so acute that he could anticipate it. The difference between his genius and that displayed by Mr. Wilson, I would say, is that the one knew what we would think and the other knows what we should think. Between these psychological peaks fell Mr. Taft, who didn't care what we thought. Public opinion requires no initiative, nor any referendum. It moves in mysterious ways its wonders to perform, and given a good free press and a letter column, it gets something done about every day.

Congressman Kent Buys Third Overcoat in His Long Career

WASHINGTON, March 28.

CONGRESSMAN BILLY KENT of California went into a store to buy an overcoat recently. He picked out a rather expensive coat and the clerk remarked that it should last him two or three years.

"Well," replied Kent, "if it does as well as the other coats I have had it will last 20 years. This will be the third overcoat I have had during my lifetime."

He was telling the truth. When he was a Chicago Alderman he wore an old yellow overcoat till it became a jest for the newspapers. Then Kent declared that he would not lay it aside for any course. He kept his word, wearing it for 25 years.

15,600 BLOOMS IN SHAW'S GARDEN NEXT SUNDAY

First Bulb Exhibit of the Season to Include 10,000 Flowering Tulips.

TO BE OPEN EACH WEEK

Series of Shows Planned to Teach Landscape Gardening to Laymen.

St. Louisans now have an exceptional opportunity of seeing continuous flower shows of marvelous beauty and magnitude at the Missouri Botanical Garden, more popularly known as Shaw's Garden. The spring season will open next Sunday with a wonderful display of flowering bulbs—the first flowers of spring. In this display there will be 10,000 tulips, including 100 varieties; 5000 hyacinths, including 50 varieties, and 600 lilies, including 20 varieties, all in bloom.

Shaw's Garden is open every Sunday afternoon between the hours of 2 to 6 o'clock, from April 1 to Dec. 1, and on every week day from sunrise to sunset.

One of Greatest Gardens.

"It was the wish of the late Henry Shaw, who gave this garden to the people of St. Louis, that they should enjoy it," said Dr. George T. Moore, director of the garden. "We want the people of St. Louis to show their appreciation of his generosity by visiting the garden.

"It is one of the greatest gardens in the world. It is difficult to compare the great botanical gardens, but we are willing to stand comparison, and we excel in many respects. We have students and scientists from all over the world come to our garden and laboratory for research work and study."

The tulip, hyacinth and lily display will be given in the new greenhouse. This will also include 40 new varieties of narcissus, which were shown for the first time in St. Louis last spring. The collection has been greatly increased. Another interesting and attractive collection of bulb plants will be amaryllis, lily-like blossoms of rare beauty and fragrance.

Exhibits to Be Educational.

The cineraria show is now on in the main greenhouse. These gorgeous hothouse beauties, with their immense pinnicles of magnificent brilliant-colored flowers, are flanked with immense quantities of old-fashioned, 10-week's stocks, of grandmother's day, sweetly fragrant and quaintly beautiful.

The management plans to make the exhibit educational. During the spring and summer the common garden flowers will be massed and used in such a way that the layman and amateur gardener can learn landscape gardening. The guides and attendants in Shaw's Garden will answer any question of visitors relative to the care and growing of plants or about the plants and shrubs in the greenhouses or garden proper.

FRENCH BIRD FRIENDS HONOR W. T. HORNADAY

Medal for American Who Drafted Plumage Law Is Handed to Ambassador Herrick.

PARIS, March 28.—Myron T. Herrick, the United States Ambassador to France, today received a deputation of members of the French Acclimatization Society and of the French Natural History Association. They handed to him the gold medal conferred on William T. Hornaday, Director of the New York Zoological Park. The honor was conferred on Hornaday for his international service in the protection of wild life. He was unable to be present as he was detained by his work at Yale University.

Hornaday drafted the paragraph dealing with plumage in the new American tariff bill. The French Government intimated that it would be unwise to make a public presentation to Hornaday because it might offend the people engaged in the French feather trade and this was thought undesirable just before the general parliamentary elections.

Ambassador Herrick said it seemed to him that the French, in bestowing the medal upon one of the foremost champions of distressed wild life, had given an answer to the insistent demands of fashion and added:

"The people of America who have witnessed the wanton destruction of herds of buffalo and deer and of wild birds will appreciate the high courage you have displayed in taking this broad and unselfish standpoint.

Sure Indications of Lung Trouble

Among the indications of threatened Lung Trouble are a continued cough, fever and night sweats. A change of climate often helps, but it seems that something more is needed to stop the cough and sweats and arrest the progress of disease. Eckman's Alterative, after many years of use, is known to be most beneficial in bringing about relief, in many cases complete recoveries. Investigate this case: Shell City, Mo.

"Gentlemen: I had a terrible cough, night sweats and pleurisy in my lungs. A man who heard me coughing advised me to take your Alterative. I paid no attention to him then. I got so bad the doctor said I should go to Wyoming. I did, and when I got there I steadily grew worse. Then I remembered what had been told me about your medicine. I began taking it, with no faith whatever, but before I had taken three bottles, I could eat anything. Fever and night sweats stopped, and for over a year I have been well and in better health than I ever was."

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most efficacious for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in upbuilding the system. Contains no narcotics, poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by Raboteau Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co. and leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for booklet telling of recoveries and additional evidence.

DRIVER CONFESSES ROBBING TOBACCO COMPANY OF $1200

Destroyed C. O. D. Duplicates of Peter Hauptmann Co. and Collected Money.

CAUGHT BY ACCIDENT

Customer Telephones Additional Order After He Had Stolen Bill for Goods.

A telephone instruction Friday to add a 93-cent item to a $96 order placed two days before with the Peter Hauptmann Tobacco Co., 507 North Third street, led to the undoing of Harrison Linnenborn, 38 years old, of 4264 Kossuth avenue, a driver and collector for the company. He confessed yesterday to detectives that he had systematically robbed his employers of about $1200 during the two years he had worked for them.

By extracting from the files in the office duplicate bills of C. O. D. orders, leaving no other record of such accounts, Linnenborn said, he managed to carry on his series of thefts without detection. Once the duplicate in the office was destroyed he delivered the C. O. D. order and pocketed the money. He lifted the bills from the office files at times when the clerks were not looking.

Frank Annis, a customer of the firm in East Madison, Ill., telephoned the office Friday to add to an order sent Wednesday an item of 93 cents. Search for the duplicate bill that should have been on file was futile. Herbert Albrecht, 17 years old, of 2306 Palm street, who helped Linnenborn on the wagon, was called and he said that he had often noticed they delivered C. O. D. orders which he had not seen entered on the books. He supposed it was all right.

Investigation of C. O. D. orders delivered since Jan. 1, according to the detectives, showed that Linnenborn had taken, without accounting to the company, $96 from C. L. Cayton of Madison; $60 from N. Lasco of Madison, $48 from Tony Chicek of North Venice and $24 from Andrew Seyke of Madison.

Linnenborn, who is married and has two children, when arrested told the police that he had used the stolen money to meet living expenses, insisting that he did not gamble and did not live extravagantly.

U. S. PROTESTS AGAINST GERMAN OIL TRUST BILL

Asks Eradication of Injustices in Measure for Governmental Monopolization of Industry.

BERLIN, March 28.—Formal action was taken today by the United States Government against the petroleum monopoly bill recently introduced in the German Imperial Parliament.

The first step taken was a written memorandum presented by James W. Gerard, United States Ambassador, to Gottlieb von Jagow, the German Foreign Minister. This memorandum expresses the confident expectation of the United States Government that certain injustices toward American investors contained in the monopoly bill in its present form will disappear before enactment.

The United States, it points out, has no wish either to intervene against Germany's establishment of an oil monopoly nor to interfere with any price arrangement between the Standard Oil Co. and the German Government, should such be under consideration.

The German Foreign Minister did not reply to the American memorandum and he may be relieved from doing so by the death of the bill.

WOMAN SOLDIER, WHO WAS IN GRANT'S ARMY, INSANE

Fighter Was Thought to Be a Man Until Admitted to Soldiers' Home.

QUINCY, Ill., March 28.—Little "Albert" Cashier, the woman soldier, today was taken to the State Asylum for the Insane at Watertown, Ill.

She was born in Ireland, 73 years ago and came to America as a stowaway in boy's clothes. She enlisted in Company G, Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry, and was assigned to Gen. Grant's army, participating in some of the bloodiest battles of the Civil War.

She later came to the Soldiers' Home here and her sex was discovered by a surgeon at that institution, although a nurse knew her secret.

Frederick W. Weyerhaeuser Recovering.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 28.—Frederick W. Weyerhauser, the aged millionaire lumberman, who is ill of a severe cold at his Oak Knoll home, Pasadena, was reported improving today.

Chance to Be Insured for $1 a Year.

The North American Accident Insurance Co., of which Ben Larabee is the manager, with offices in the Chemical Building, has put at the disposal of everyone in St. Louis an entirely new policy covering death or the maiming of limbs, for $1 a year. For this premium of $1 a year the insured has a choice of one of two policies, one covering burning in a building and the other while traveling, or, if desired, a person may take out both policies for the nominal sum of $1 each. For this price the sum to be paid is from $2500 for loss of life down to $500 for the loss of a hand or a foot. This new policy was originated by Ben Larabee.

BOY RISKS LIFE TO ESCAPE FROM COURT

Climbs Around Window Ledge Nine Stories Up, but Is Frightened Back.

CHICAGO, March 28.—A futile attempt to escape by way of a window ledge nine stories from the ground was made today by a boy awaiting a hearing in the newly-organized boys' court.

Jeremiah O'Shea, the venturesome youth, was frightened back to the detention room by Municipal Judge Martin, who saw the lad as he passed the courtroom window. Seeing that he had been detected, O'Shea quickly retraced the narrow ledge, stepped safely around a pillar and re-entered the detention room just as a bailiff, warned by Judge Martin, entered the room.

With two boy companions, O'Shea was later held to the grand jury on a charge of robbing a restaurant.

DUKE'S CREDITORS LOSE

LEIPSIC, Germany, March 28.—The Supreme Court today upheld the action of the Duke de Talleyrand, husband of Anna Gould, who in 1910 renounced his rights to the crown Fief of Sagan in Silesia in favor of his son, Prince Jason Howard of Sagan.

The Duke de Talleyrand's German creditors attacked the validity of the transfer, by which they were rendered unable to attach the revenues of the Fief.

MAN SHOT BY ROBBERS IN CRITICAL CONDITION

East St. Louis Saloon Keeper Wounded Three Times When He Resists Hold-Up Men.

Edward E. Saint, a saloon keeper at 711 Trendley avenue, East St. Louis, was in a critical condition last night at St. Mary's Hospital, as a result of bullet wounds inflicted by two robbers Friday night. He was shot in the right hand, the right lung and in the back.

Saint had often declared to friends that he would not throw up his hands for a robber. When two masked men entered the saloon at 10:45 o'clock, he ran towards the rear bar to get a revolver. Both men opened fire, and while Saint clung to the bar for support, took $20 and his watch from his pockets and $5 from the cash register. Then they fled. Saint staggered to his sleeping quartrs in the rear and dropped upon a bed.

Walter Lansing, who was playing pool with Saint escaped up a stairway to the second floor and got two revolvers. The robbers were gone when he returned, and he fired five shots from the front door to notify the police.

PHYSICAL TRAINING TEACHERS TO MEET HERE WEDNESDAY

Mayor Kiel to Welcome Delegates at Reception at the Liederkranz Club.

EXHIBITIONS AT COLISEUM

4000 School Pupils to Take Part in Demonstration on Thursday.

The annual convention of the American Physical Education Association, will open in St. Louis Wednesday. The association headquarters will be at the Planters Hotel. The literary sections will be held in the Soldan High School, Harris' Teachers' College and the Young Women's Christian Association. The meetings of the Therapeutic Section will be held in the auditorium of the St. Louis Medical Society. The three large physical demonstrations—showing the practical training—will be given in the Coliseum.

Delegates will spend Wednesday visiting the public schools and other institutions where equipment for physical education can be studied. In the evening there will be a reception to delegates at the Liederkranz Club, Grand and Magnolia avenues. Mayor Kiel will welcome the delegates and Dr. R. Tait McKenzie, president of the American Physical Education Association, and physical director of the University of Pennsylvania, will respond to the welcome.

The general session of the convention will open at 9 a. m. Thursday, in the Soldan High School auditorium. W. P. Bowen, Professor of Physical Education of the Michigan State Normal, will read a paper on "What the Normal Schools of Physical Education Are Now Doing." This paper will be discussed by Dr. Dudley Allen Sargent of Harvard, Emil Rath of Indianapolis, Dr. C. Ward Crampton of New York, and Dr. E. A. Peterson of Cleveland.

The public school section, under the direction of Prof. A. E. Kindervater, Supervisor of Physical Education of the St. Louis schools, will meet Thursday afternoon at Central High School. The general topic will be, "How does physical training aid the schools in training pupils for efficient citizenship?" The therapeutic section will meet that afternoon in the auditorium of the St. Louis Medical Society.

There will be a monster demonstration at 4 p. m. Thursday of the physical training in the St. Louis public schools by more than 4000 pupils from the first to the eighth grades of the grammar schools of St. Louis and East St. Louis. This will be under the direction of Prof. Kindervater and will be given without special preparation, illustrating the regular daily program as carried on in the public schools of the city.

The general session Friday morning will be at the Harris Teachers' College, under the direction of Dr. James Naismith of the University of Kansas. In the afternoon the woman's section will meet in the auditorium of the Young Women's Christian Association, under the direction of Miss Gertrude Dudley of Chicago.

Baroness Rose Posse of Boston will address the members of the Y. W. C. A. at a noonday luncheon.

On Friday, between 4 and 6 p. m., there will be a physical demonstration at the Coliseum by 5000 pupils from the St. Louis high schools, under the direction of Prof. Kindervater. That night there will be a monster gymnastic exhibition at the Coliseum under the direction of Karl Heckrich. The performers will include the most skilled athletes from the United Turnverein societies, the Young Men's Christian Association, the Young Women's Christian Association, the Playgrounds Association and the Missouri School of the Blind and the Boy Scouts. The entire arena will be covered with performers going through the most difficult gymnasium work and performing difficult athletic feats.

REPORTS 90 PER CENT OF WOMEN AGAINST SALOONS

Poll Shows Big Majority With Drys in Granite City Fight, Worker Says.

At a meeting tomorrow afternoon in Fleishmann-McNarry Hall, Granite City, in the interest of the movement to make Granite City and Venice "dry," at the township elections, April 7, Mrs. H. P. Butler will report that 90 per cent of the women voters in the Third Ward of Granite City will vote "dry." This was shown, she says, by a canvass of the ward, which she recently made.

Active efforts are being made by the "wets" to interest the women, and at a recent meeting of the Personal Liberty League in Granite City, 2000 feet of fashion films were displayed, showing the latest Paris gowns and hats.

The Personal Liberty League has sent a letter to Mayor Kirkpatrick and the Granite City Council, asking that they investigate the conduct of August Horstmeyer, a saloon keeper, who was arrested with nine other men, on bribery charges in connection with the election of a Judge and Clerk of the City Court last Tuesday. The letter declares that if Horstmeyer is guilty, his license should be revoked, and if not guilty he should be exonerated.

C. W. BRYAN WILL RUN FOR GOVERNOR —'IF NECESSARY'

Secretary's Brother Says Nebraska Democratic Candidate Must Be Progressive.

OMAHA, Neb., March 28.—"Is Charles W. Bryan, brother of William J. Bryan, preparing to become a candidate for Governor in Nebraska?" is a question that is worrying Nebraska Democracy.

Brother Charles is demanding that a 'progressive" Democrat be named as the candidate. He has stated to close friends that so anxious is he to see a progressive candidate that in order to insure having one of that class he himself will enter the ring "if necessary." And on top of this, it is said, he has encouraged every progressive candidate who has offered himself. G. W. Berge was the first Democrat to announce his candidacy for the office. Berge for years has been a Bryan man and in a former campaign he received the support of both William J. and Charles W. Bryan because of his progressive principles. Now, however, he "won't do" at all.

Thompson Supported Bryan.

William Thompson, who has always stood very close to the Bryans, has supported William J. in every campaign, and has received the support of the Bryans in more than one fight, is unable to secure the support of C. W. Bryan now that he wants to run for Governor. He is "not sufficiently progressive." Gov. Morehead, the present incumbent, with a reputation as the most progressive and best Governor Nebraska ever had, cannot secure the support of the Bryans for a second term. No reason is given. The Bryans don't want him.

C. W. Bryan is not as popular in Nebraska as is his brother and not every Democrat who would support the Secretary of State would vote for his brother. Especially in a primary election. There are many Democrats who would cast their full strength against C. W. Bryan, but if there should be several candidates in the field, Bryan probably would win the nomination. If he were nominated, most of those Democrats would oppose him in the election.

Republicans Are Split.

But whether the nominee be C. W. Bryan, or another Democrat, he is very sure to be elected. There is something more that a possibility that the two wings of the Republican party will get together on naming a candidate, but there is not the slightest possibility that the Progressives will come in with them.

Nebraska Republicans split into three sections instead of only into two as in other States. In Nebraska there are Republicans, Progressive Republicans and Progressives. Next week the Republicans and Progressive-Republicans are to hold a "get-together" meeting. But if a Standpat Republican secures the nomination, thousands of Progressive Republicans will bolt him, and if a Progressive-Republican is named in the primary, not all stand-pat Republicans will give him loyal support.

And regardless of the complexion of the Republican-Progressive-Republican candidate, the real Progressives will have their own candidate to support. With the Republican party in that condition, there is small chance for any other than a Democrat to be elected.

KANSAS HIRES TRAIN TO EXHIBIT ITS PRODUCTS

Special of Eleven Cars Will Make Tour of East Beginning April 12.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 28.—The Eastern part of the United States is to be given a chance to see with its own eyes how Kansas fared last year—the worst crop year in more than a decade. The train will make stops in St. Louis, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Washington, Chicago, Cleveland and other Northern and Eastern cities. At Washington, President Wilson, Vice-President Marshall, Speaker Clark and the Kansas delegation in Congress will receive the tourists.

The tour will be made under the auspices of the Southeast Kansas Association of Commercial Clubs. Exhibits will be taken from the whole State, though particular attention will be paid to products from Southeastern Kansas. The start will be made from Kansas City, April 12, and the trip will last until the end of the month.

Health and Strength Regained By Splendid Tonic Influence

The Season's Difference Affects All Manner of Life and the Human Body Needs Help Most of All

So many people use S. S. S. every Spring that it is really a message of health to those who wonder why they feel so utterly worn out when the trees begin to bud. Throughout the Southern States S. S. S. has been for forty years a trusted tonic for the early days of Spring. Of purely vegetable origin it combines elements which kindly influence the overworked blood vessels or overstrained nerve tissues. Its action is medicinal just as meat or milk is nutritional.

OUR WINTER INACTIVITY.

During the confined months of the winter season there are many of us who are less active. The liver is sluggish, the skin is dormant, the kidneys are overworked, the lungs are not called upon to breathe with sufficient depth and energy to satisfy the demands of the tissues for their needed amount of oxygen. And thus the body needs help, must have it. Experience comes to our relief, and what better guide could we select than the example of those who annually know exactly what to do—use S. S. S.

RETAINS ITS INDIVIDUALITY.

The wonderful tonic influence of this splendid blood purifier is traced to its ability to retain its individuality. It is acceptable to the weakest stomach, and yet it is not changed or converted or excreted until it has exercised its medicinal dominance throughout the blood circulation.

This is important. Some drugs have this same effect, but they remain in the system, a fruitful source of irritation and danger. S. S. S. does not remain in the system, for after having served the purpose as a medicinal action, it is excreted with the wa products, and this emunctory proc goes on every second of time.

BLOOD IMPURITIES BY NAME.

We are prone to think too much names. When the muscles ache the sciatic nerve hurts, and there general pains the word Rheumati leads one to forget that it is the blo as much as the nerves that are resp sible for these pains. And S. S. proves this by its tonic influence in t blood. When the mind and body jaded and utterly cast down wi malarial infection, it is the blood th contains this poisonous influe Here again S. S. S. asserts its to influence. And if from a sluggi blood stream, there are skin eruptio blood risings, indolent abscesses other evidences of accumulated bo wastes, the medicinal action of S. S. gives ocular evidence of its medicin influence.

A TRUTHFUL MEDICINE.

Not one particle of anything oth than the native roots and simple pr servatives are used in the preparatio of S. S. S. It has survived many yea of the most searching tests, and nev in its forty and more years of usefu ness has it ever been found otherwi than a purely beneficial medicine, hel ful to the young, invigorating to tho advanced in years, and containing ju the amount of gentle exhilaration much required by most women.

S. S. S. is strongly recommended almost every community in Americ and is sold in most drug, departm and general stores.

But by all means avoid substitut Do not permit anyone to palm off so thing they claim to be "Just as good Ask for S. S. S., insist upon getting and you will thus avoid grievous di appointment. S. S. First Question the Doctor Always Asks

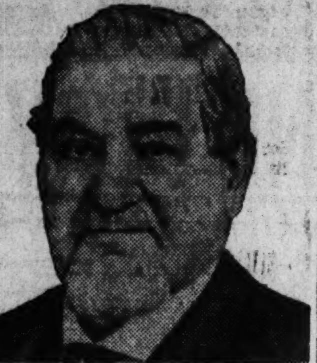
"How Are Your Bowels?" A Simple Remedy That Guarantees Good, Healthy Bowels.

Trace the origin of the commoner ills of life and almost invariably you will find that constipation was the cause. It is not to be expected that a mass of fermented food can remain in the system beyond its time without vitiating the blood and affecting the nerves and muscles. It congests the entire body.

The results are colds, fevers, piles, headaches, and nervousness, with its accompanying indigestion and sleeplessness. There is only one thing to do, and that is to remove the trouble; and when nature seems unable to do it, outside aid is necessary. You will find the best of all outside aids a remedy that many thousands are now using for this very purpose, called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Many hundreds of letters are received by Dr. Caldwell telling of the good results obtained, and among the enthusiastic letters is one from Lieut. G. W. Vaughan, of 623 W. North St., Decatur, Ill. He is 72 and has had a bad liver and stomach since he came out of the army. He says he tried about everything, but never succeeded in getting permanent relief until he took Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. He is never without a bottle in the house, and he is never without good health.



LIEUT. G. W. VAUGHN

It has untold advantages over pills, salts and the various coarse cathartics and purgatives, for while these do but temporary good, Syrup Pepsin cures permanently. The effect of its action is to train the stomach and bowel muscles to do their work naturally again, and in a short time all forms of medicine can be dispensed with. It can be bought without inconvenience at any nearby drug store for fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, the latter size being regularly bought by those who already know its value. Results are always guarananteed or money will be refunded.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it postpaid by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 419 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. A postal card with your name and address on it will do.

FARM FUGITIVES RETAIN A LOVE FOR RURAL LIFE

Other Conditions Being Equal Most of Them Prefer to Live in Country.

MENTAL NEEDS DISCUSSED

City Is Attractive but Equal Pleasures Cost Much More Says One Writer.

Why Did You Leave the Farm?

WILLIAM HIRTH, publisher of the Missouri Farmer, put this question in the Post-Dispatch Feb. 8, to the hundreds of young men in St. Louis who, for one reason or another, have come to the city to make a living. The object is to find out how to improve conditions of country life so that many of the brightest young men and women will not be tempted to leave the homestead for the precarious chance of bettering themselves in the big cities. Young women who have come from farms are also invited to give their experience.

Replies, as brief as possible, will be published in the Post-Dispatch. Here are the questions:

1. Why did you leave the farm?
2. If you had it to do over again, would you come to the city?
3. What position do you hold, what is your salary and how much money have you been able to save?
4. Do you believe the city is as good a place in which to rear a family as the country?
5. Did you find city life as attractive and profitable as it looked to you from the old farm home?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I am pleased that you have opened for discussion so vast and important a question, "Why Did You Leave the Farm?"

1. Because we had to work awful hard for a mere pittance, and I found that we were taxed to death almost for everything we raised, or had to buy—implements, etc. When a calf or pigs came we were assessed for them. We could not get ahead of our debts, no matter how hard we worked or what luck we had. It was just work, work, work. We read in the papers and books that men and women who lived in the city and never did a lick of work were getting rich and had, not thousands, but millions of dollars, and we could not understand it. And we did not understand until we came to the city; then we found that speculation, gambling and special privileges was the thing we must learn or understand, as they were upheld by the church, the law and high society, and the fool farmer had to support them all.

2. "If I Had to Do It Over Again?" No, I would not do it over again; knowing what I know now, and I would advise all young men farmers not to be fooled or led away by all these foolish ideas, but to stay on the farm and vote out of existence this damnable tax system that is robbing the farmer and peoeple in general and place it on monopoly and special privileges, the curses of the age.

3. "What Position Do I Hold?" I went into professional work, as I saw all the trades were overcrowded. Sometimes I have done fairly well, but most of the time broke about even.

4. "Do I Believe the City is as Good a Place to Rear a Family as the Country?" Yes. Why not? There is the tango, the hobble skirt, the picture show, the stage hands' ball, skating rinks and the morning and evening papers, and a great many more things and places in "Hell's Half Acre," that you can't find on the farm's half acre. Splendid for children!

5. "Did I Find City Life as Attractive and Profitable as It Looked From the Old Farm?" Yes, and no. Attractive? Yes! Profitable? No! I was blinded by the glare of the electric light, and the crowds of pushing and hurrying people, quite upset me. I heard noise and music and singing and whatnot, and I was enchanted, hypnotized, or whatever you may call it. But, gee, after a while it became monotonous and sour, and I was checked by lonesomeness and fear as to where it all would end, and the memory of the old farm home came to me as in a dream.

HENRY SMYTHE.

City Has Some Advantages, but He Is Going Back.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Why did I leave the farm?

Like all other simple boys, not realizing the serious step I was taking, I left the farm July 13, 1900, owing to the severe drouth. I landed in this city with $1.80 in my pocket. Still I thought that was quite a sum, but I soon realized my condition and got work at a lumber yard the next day at $1.50 a day, and during these 13 years I have learned the carpenter trade, car finishing, buggy and carriage building and have earned from $2.50 to $3 a day. Out of this I have managed to save enough to buy 120 acres of land and stock it with machinery, etc. I also acquired a wife. If I just had known half then that I know now, I never would have left the farm. By experience, I find farm life to be the most healthful and independent any man can live. Stock and chicken raising are pleasure as well as profit, and for rearing a family, the country is the most desirable place.

I find that city life is attractive in some respects, and also expensive. While there are as great attractions on the farm at far less expense. On a farm one has a more comfortable and easy time than the city man, as a rule. He works hard in the summer season, but takes life easy in the winter time. While the city man has to tug summer and winter without rest. No man dislikes to work hard when he realizes it's for his own benefit, so it is with the farmer. I would advise every working man to look forward to that mark. Be your own boss. It is gratifying to me to know I have provided for myself and family a place of safety, which I intend to enjoy soon or later. There is not the least doubt but that hundreds of men in and near this city would be very thankful if they had a place called home. Economy is the first step toward this great enterprise. I hope through these letters in the Post-Dispatch, the "back-to-the-farm" movement will be renewed, for the boys are in great demand on the farm.

YALE ANTI-SUFFRAGISTS CHALLENGED BY WOMEN

Winners in College Contest Are Asked to Debate Question With New Yorkers.

NEW YORK, March 28.—The triple tie of the debating teams of Yale, Harvard and Princeton in their recent debate on woman suffrage in which each anti-suffrage team won its contest, stirred up the New York State Suffrage Association today to challenge Yale to argue the question with real suffragists.

"The suffragists of New York City challenge the winning anti-suffrage team of Yale to debate in New York City with real suffragists, the time and place to be decided later," read the telegram sent to Yale by Mrs. Raymond Brown, president of the association.

Messages were also sent to the New Jersey Suffrage Association and the Massachusetts Suffrage Association, asking them to challenge Princeton and Harvard, respectively.

OWNING PROPERTY SHOULD BE PROFITABLE, NOT COSTLY TO YOU!

Good tenants usually consider ONLY advertised houses or apartments. They do the most important part of their "looking around" among the "For Rent" ads in St. Louis' big House and Home Directory in the Post-Dispatch Want Columns.

If you are becoming "property poor," this hint should turn the tide for you.

CHARGES RISK COMBINE

Mayor of Wilkes Barre Orders Arrest of Underwriters.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., March 28.—Warrants were sworn out today by Mayor Kosek for the arrest of 50 members of the Wilkesbarre Underwriters' Association, charging them with criminal conspiracy to maintain fire insurance rates. The hearing will be held on Monday.

The Mayor yesterday brought an equity suit to dissolve the association. Mayor Kosek's action follows an investigation made by the State Insurance Commission. Evidence was submitted to the commission in which it was alleged that insurance rates have been advanced 300 per cent since the local association was formed.

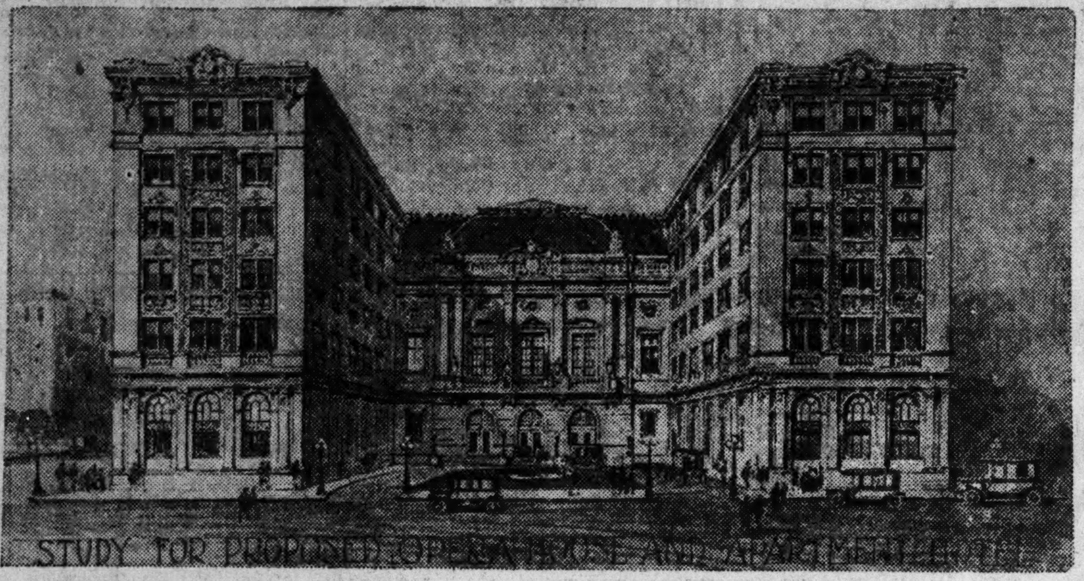
OPERA COMMITTEE ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR OPERA HOUSE

A Combination Structure, Including Apartment Hotel, Is Favorably Considered.

The likelihood of St. Louis' early possession of a commodious and entirely modern opera house significantly is indicated in a statement issued last night by the St. Louis Grand Opera Committee through Guy Golterman, one of its members, who already has submitted to the committee the building plan of such a structure.

New Grand Opera House and Apartment Hotel as Shown in Plan Favored by Opera Committee



STUDY FOR PROPOSED OPERA HOUSE AND APARTMENT HOTEL

This plan now is being considered and has met with a cordial reception, advance assurances of some substantial financial support being given. In a preliminary statement concerning the movement, Mr. Golterman says:

"The St. Louis Grand Opera House as contemplated in this building plan essentially shall be an institution of service to the people—the home of operatic, symphonic and dramatic art, as well as of other forms of educational entertainment. It will contain approximately 3350 chairs, distributed in proper proportion about as follows: Parquet, 900; parquet circle, 500; balcony, 1000; second balcony, 740; 35 parterre boxes (the Golden Horseshoe, 210; total seating capacity, 3350, making possible a scale of prices within reach of all.

New Opera House's Building Plan.

"I suggest a combination opera house and hotel apartment building, believing that these enterprises harmonize. The St. Louis need of both is great. Space in the building should be provided for conservatories of music, art studios and other arts and industries. The plan includes the practical without destroying the ideal.

"The Metropolitan Opera House in New York City, without loss of prestige, rents one of its street corner spaces to a bank, another to a restaurant, and offices, studios and living apartments are found throughout the building above the ground floor. It is a serviceable building. The opera houses in Philadelphia and Chicago are "combination houses" in this same sense. The Boston Opera House is the lone exception, and it has been a constant drain on its founders, with the result that the next opera season in Boston will be reduced from 20 to 12 weeks.

Stately Open Court and Approach.

"The St. Louis Grand Opera House, following closely the well-recognized lines of opera house construction as to stage, seating arrangement, etc., and with the open court, as shown in the building plan, serving as a stately approach to the massive entrances, will more nearly rival the Government-owned opera houses of Europe than does the opera house of any other North American city.

"The plan places the opera house inside of another structure without hiding it, and no rumbling of street cars will be heard within its walls. The open court shown on the plan is 80 feet wide—wider than an ordinary street—and 100 feet deep, containing 8100 square feet, an area greater than is occupied by any banking room in St. Louis, with one exception. The building should pay its expenses from year to year, including possibly a nominal return on the investment. No more than this should be expected.

"I have recommended no particular location. A site west of Grand avenue, on any one of five or six streets near the chief traffic center, will be practicable. Accessibility from north and south, as well as West St. Louis, is important. The elevated and improving situations west of Grand avenue are practicable. St. Louis needs an opera house. The Opera Committee's experiences with the Coliseum and the Odeon prove this. The Coliseum serves its purpose, but is too vast for opera. The seating capacity of the Odeon is too limited. The building plan now before the committee will lend itself to any of a dozen sites obtainable in the district mentioned."

Views of Other Committee Members.

Mrs. John Lawrence Mauran, of the Grand Opera Executive Board, says: "I see no reason why this splendid plan may not be worked out. The pleasure we have in the occasional opera engagements will be greatly increased by our knowing that a large audience may be accommodated at each performance."

Mrs. John T. Davis Jr., of the Executive Board says: "I think the plan submitted is ideal and I am heartily in favor of it. It is desirable for St. Louis to have more opera, but at intervals. During the Chicago season, from late November to January, the company could visit St. Louis several times, giving possibly two performances at each visit. Of course, the additional expense could not be thought of without assurance of a new and larger theater."

George W. Simmons, chairman of the Grand Opera Committee, says: "As chairman of the Grand Opera Committee, I want to help this plan from the beginning. Within a few days after my return from the East, I will call the committee together to formulate a plan of organization to make the project a reality. It seems to me we should have from 35 to 50 'founders of the new opera house' to take the initiative. The addition of an apartment hotel will help materially. It will be a distinct advantage to have the theater situated inside of the outer building. The symphony Orchestra could use the opera house most advantageously. Then, too, it would be available for great conventions. The plan has unlimited possibilities for civic betterment."

Edward A. Faust, vice-chairman of the Grand Opera Committee, says: "This plan is a happy compromise. The combination of opera house and apartment hotel seems perfectly sensible and feasible. I shall co-operate to the fullest extent."

Judge Daniel G. Taylor, chairman Auxiliary Guarantors' Committee, says: "We must have twice as many seats as the Odeon affords. Obviously, we do need a new opera house. What could be more appropriate than the plan presented? Command me whenever and wherever I can help."

Charles A. Stix, chairman of the Grand Opera Executive Board, says: "As long as 10 years ago St. Louis required and supported three auditoriums independent of the regular theaters—the Exposition music hall, the old Coliseum and the Odeon. The new Coliseum is filling a long-felt want, but it is not suitable for grand opera. The Odeon is too small. The new combination plan is exactly what St. Louis needs. I favor the project and will do all I can to help it."

Alexander Hilton of the Executive Board says: "By all means we must have a suitable building for grand opera. Mr. Golterman's plan, in my opinion, is directed along the correct lines. I believe we have a sufficient number of public-spirited St. Louisans to subscribe more than enough money to put this civic improvement through."

Try This if You Have Dandruff

Or Are Bothered With Falling Hair or Itching Scalp.

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to keep your hair looking rich, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair so quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everybody notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail. —ADV.

Your Grandmother's Remedy for Purifying the Blood

And Renovating the System in the Springtime

ASK FOR SULPHERB TABLETS.

What was grandmother's unexcelled remedy? Haven't you heard of it? Yes, you have! It was sulphur, cream of tartar and molasses. The main trouble with it was its nauseous taste.

A modern method puts the cream of tartar and sulphur into sugar-coated tablets and mixes them with herbs, roots, etc., making a wonderful tonic blood purifier and system cleanser.

Just try Sulpherb Tablets (not sulphur tablets), but Sulpherb—remember the name—and get the tablets in sealed tubes at 50c per tube.

Grown-up people and children who don't feel well, who are constipated or sluggish, or who have pimples, boils, carbuncles, ulcers and the like, can soon rid the system of these impurities by taking this good old-fashioned remedy in modern form. Their action satisfies or money is refunded by the Prescription Products Company, Dayton, Ohio. A free trial sent to any address. Buy of any well-stocked druggist.

BLOND ESKIMO ORDERS ENGLISH TYPEWRITER

Man Who Never Has Been Out of Arctic Circle Wants Machine Delivered.

EDMONTON, Alberta, March 28.—J. Cornwall Fraser, a member of the tribe of blond Eskimos living at the mouth of the Mackenzie River in the sixty-ninth parallel of latitude, has commissioned a local trading company to ship a typewriting machine, with the latest approved attachments, to his hut on the roof of the earth, 2200 miles north of Edmonton.

Fraser, who is a trapper, hunter and pathfinder, was educated in an English mission school at Point Barrow, one of the northern outposts. He has never been south of the sixty-fifth parallel, inside the Arctic Circle.

Officers of the trading companies operating in the district report he is one of the best-posted men in the far north country. He speaks and writes the English language fluently, and is familiar with conditions and affairs throughout Canada, the United States and Europe, as the result of wide and varied reading of newspaper and magazines.

CIVIC LEAGUE'S YEAR BOOK TELLS OF BIG ENDEAVORS

Recites 33 Specific Lines It Followed to Make St. Louis Better.

NEW CHARTER IS FIRST

Report Also Details Efforts for Improved Sanitation and Housing.

Executive officers of the Civic League, following the fourteenth annual meeting yesterday, mailed to the 2050 league members the year book for 1913-14, summing up the league's activities during the year and the program for the new fiscal year. The year book also was mailed to city officials, officers of every civic organization in the city and to 300 organizations, libraries and officials all over the United States.

Charles A. Stix, president of the Civic League, reports his organization is the only one in St. Louis working constantly to improve all the functions of city government. Much of the work, he says, is accomplished quietly, without public notice of any kind, because it is done in co-operation with city officials, to whom recognition and credit is given. He declares the league is seeking results, not credit.

Covers a Wide Range.

The work of the last year to make St. Louis a better place in which to live covers a wide range of activities, grouped under the general heads of better city government, public health, social service, the city's sightliness, public safety, public recreation and co-operation. Thirty-three specific lines of accomplishments of the 20 standing committees are set forth.

To obtain better city government the league organized the movement for a new city charter and has started the work for the adoption of the short ballot in both city and State. All municipal legislation affecting the welfare of St. Louis was carefull followed. Special effort was made to obtain a first-rate provision for the initiative and referendum in the new city charter, being drafted.

In the public health field the league worked for the pure milk bill, tenement house law, the enforcement of the law abolishing vaults, the better heating and ventilating of street cars, strengthening of city department for smoke abatement, extensive tree planting by school children, and the better control of the odor nuisance.

Leader in Social Service.

In the field of public social service the league obtained the continuance of the municipal lodging house and better control of street begging, proposed a new use of the Mullanphy fund and assisted in establishing a Board of Parole in the police courts.

To help make a sightly city the league obtained the passage of a bill removing wires and poles from the public streets and the adoption of a new design for street gas lamps.

The work for public safety covered an investigation of old theaters and the enforcement of traffic laws.

The League's office is the executive agency for a number of co-operative movements which, in the last two years, have brought all organizations of St. Louis together to a greater degree than probably in any other large city in the United States.

Groups That Co-Operate.

These co-operating groups are the Joint Charter Conference, made up of 34 business, civic and labor organizations interested in securing a new city charter; the Central Civic Council, a co-operative clearing house for 17 improvement associations; the Conference of Federations, a co-operative clearing house for the leading federations of the city, representing 30 different societies, and for the Greater St. Louis Committee, representing eight city and county business and civic associations interested in obtaining the establishment of a great public reservation district.

Stress Laid on New Charter.

In the program of work now in the hands of the standing committees, first place is given to the need for a new city charter, which will give both popular and efficient city government. No other one need, the league book states, begins to compare with the need for sweeping changes in the fundamental law controlling the city government.

The 20 standing committees to whose many activities more than 200 citizens are giving their time and thought are, with their chairmen:

Charter Revision, Frank P. Crunden; Education for Citizenship, Percival Chubb; Franchise, Joseph L. Hornsby; Housing, James A. Smith; Municipal Art, Louis La Beaume; Social Service, Mrs. P. N. Moore; Streets, Lewis S. Haslam; Municipal Finance and Taxation, Harry B. Wallace; Parks and Boulevards, John D. Davis; Public Markets, Hanford Crawford; Public Safety and Law Enforcement, A. L. Abbott; Sanitation, Dr. Emmet Kane; Short Ballot, Percy Werner; Smoke Abatements, Prof. E. L. Ohle, and Tree Planting, Dr. Selden Spencer.

Stix Directs General Work.

The general work of the league is under the general supervision of the Executive Board of 15 members, as follows: Charles A. Stix, chairman; Frank P. Crunden, Clifford B. Allen, Paul P. Wielandy, Miss Mary E. Bulkley, J. Lionberger Davis, Phillip B. Fouke, Dr. W. H. Fuchs, Edward Hidden, John H. Gundlach, Mrs. Phillip N. Moore, Eugene Pettus, A. H. Reller, O'Neill Ryan and Tyrrell Williams.

Officers in charge of the work are: Charles A. Stix, president; Frank P. Crunden, vice-president; Clifford B. Allen, second vice-president; Paul J. Wielandy, treasurer; Roger N. Baldwin, secretary; Scott R. DeKins, assistant secretary; Holt Roudebush, attorney.

My Wife and I

Want to Tell You

How She Stopped Me From Drinking

For over twenty years I was a hard drinker. I loved liquor. I cared for nothing else. Every cent I could get hold of I spent for beer and whiskey. My work was neglected. Our home was in sore straits. My case was as hopeless as man's could be. My wife was constantly begging and pleading with me to stop, but I couldn't. I loved liquor too well.

Many women would have become so discouraged, they would have given up all hope, but my wife didn't. She kept trying. Finally, about ten years ago, she gave me a simple remedy, hoping against hope that it would have some effect upon my drinking. Much to her delight, it stopped my drinking entirely! It took away my every desire for alcoholic liquor. I have not touched a drop since.

Can you imagine her delight—her great happiness? Really, it seemed to make a new woman of her. And what a change it made in me! Our friends and neighbors hardly knew me as the same man. To most of them it seemed a miracle. But it wasn't. It was simply the little home remedy that my wife gave me. We know it was, for she later gave it to her brother and several of our neighbors who were heavy drinkers, and it stopped every one of them from drinking. This proved that it was not mere luck in my case.

To us, one of the most wonderful things about this remedy, which can be given secretly if desired, is that it costs so little. Enough to last us forty days only came to five dollars, and we think every man and woman who suffers because of a relative or friend's drinking should know just what it is, for we wouldn't take a thousand times its cost for the change it has made in our home and lives, and we don't think anybody else would either who suffers as we did.

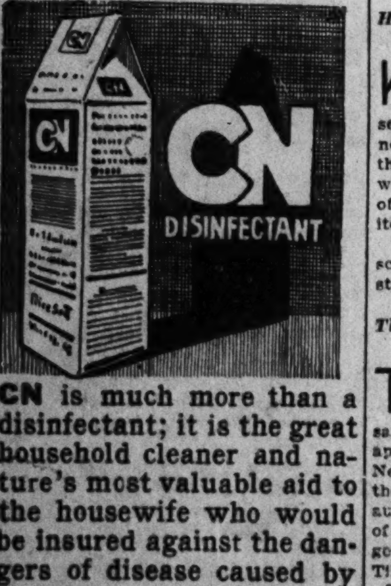
My wife is the letter writer of our family and she will gladly answer every letter that is written to her. She will tell in her own way, much better than I can, what she used, how she happened to try it and how it worked. She will give this information with a glad heart, so do not hesitate to write.

In the ten years that have elapsed since I was cured many folks have written and asked her how it was done and she gladly answered all letters. And to show that her service has been beneficial, we would like to have you read extracts from a few of the letters which she afterward received from some of these people.

Dear Madam: I feel very grateful to you for letting me know how I could cure my husband of drunkenness. He was cured completely.—Mrs. P. W. Cowell, Athens, Penna. Dear Friend: I was benefited by your letter, for my husband was a hard drinker and now he does not drink.—Mrs. W. D. Blue, Perry, Fla. My Dear Friend: It cured him of drunkenness; he is in better health than ever before, and is a different man altogether; it has saved us many dollars and we now live in peace and happiness.—Mrs. Ann Mitchell, Valliant, Okla. Dear Madam: Your advice was taken at once and my son was cured in a short time.—Mrs. Martha Day, Roanoke, Va.

Such letters as these—she has received permission to publish them—make my wife very happy, for she feels that her efforts have not been in vain. She wants you to address your letter to her personally, as the answer will come from her. She also wants me to say that the remedy is very easy to use.

Her answer will come in a sealed envelope, so there will be no publicity in your affairs. There is one other thing. We have nothing whatever to sell, so please do not send money. Simply write with all confidence to Mrs. Margaret Anderson, 10 Cedar Av., Hillburn, N. Y., taking care to write your name and full address plainly. We would suggest that you tell others who need this information about my wife's offer, for we often wish that the whole world knew it.



CN is much more than a disinfectant; it is the great household cleaner and nature's most valuable aid to the housewife who would be insured against the dangers of disease caused by insanitary conditions and common dirt.

A little CN in a gallon of water sprinkled on decaying matter and poured into waste pipes will do the work.

Tumulty Explains Sudden Regard for a Reporter

Other Washington Stories

President's Secretary Had Been Dispatched on Errand to Department of Justice and, Not Knowing Its Location, He Invited Correspondent to Go Along.

JOSEPH TUMULTY, secretary to the President, appeared at the door of the White House offices one morning after he had been on the job about eight months, and remarked to a newspaper correspondent who was standing nearby:

"Come on and walk over to the Department of Justice with me."

"I'm sorry, but I can't,' replied the correspondent. "Why don't you ride over?'

"The automobile is not here now," exclaimed Tumulty, "and I want you to go with me."

"But why do you want me?" persisted the correspondent.

"To tell the truth," admitted Tumulty, "I don't know where the darned old place is."

"Rain Would Do More Good," Listener's Comment on Speech

C. E. STEWART, whose mission in life, just at present, is to prove that Oscar W. Underwood is the greatest living American, notwithstanding the claims of sundry other statesmen, recently made a tour of Alabama in the interest of Underwood's campaign against Richmond P. Hobson, for the United States senatorship.

Stewart spoke with great eloquence and length, and as hundreds were clapping their hands, he felt sure he had done his friend a great service. He walked through the crowd complimenting himself on his great power of oratory. As he reached the edge of the crowd he heard a tall, dignified-looking Southern Colonel, with thin white whiskers, say:

"Well, Hiram, what did you think of the speech?"

Stewart looked around and heard Hiram say, through a bushy growth of alfalfa whiskers:

"Oh, I reckon it was all right, but I think about two hours' hard rain would 'a' done us a darn sight more good."

When the President, on Knees, Searched for Girl's Sidecombs

THE whole country read a few weeks ago about President Wilson picking up a little girl who had been thrown from her horse in a Washington park, but the part of the story which showed the human side of the incident, both on the part of the President and the girl, has just become public.

Secretary Tumulty was with the President and he says that, true to the instinct of her sex, the first thing the little girl did when she opened her eyes was to feel of her hair and to discover that her side combs were lost.

"Oh, please find my combs," she said The President was down on his hands and knees in a second, and after scrambling around in the dirt and grass for some time, came up triumphantly with the combs.

Fewer Tips From Bryan's Baggy Pants Visitors Than Formerly

A WESTERN politician who called at the Department of State to recommend the appointment of a young friend who wished to enter the consular service was much surprised at the large crowd he found in the reception room.

After spending several weary hours waiting his turn, he called an aged negro attendant to him and said:

"Is it usual to have to wait so long to see Mr. Bryan?"

The negro informed him that the crowd was particularly small on that day and that it was usual for both the reception room and the hall to be lined with people waiting to see the Secretary.

"I suppose you get a good many tips from the crowds," said the politician.

"Well, Ah gets a few," replied the grinning negro, "but not as many as when Mistah Root and Mistah Knox was heah."

"How's that?" asked the visitor.

"Ah don't know," said the negro, "but seems dey ain't the same class of people comes heah as dey did in dem days. I 'member when all the gent'men come heah in automobiles, and wearin' silk hats, and long coats, but now days seem like most these people wear baggy trousers and don't 'pear to have nothing to spare foh tips."

How paragrapher, Turned Actor, Got Even With Critical Editor

KIN HUBBARD, the comic paragrapher, once grew tired of newspaper work, and started out to seek his fortune on the stage. The newspaper in one little town where the troupe appeared roasted the show without mercy. When Kin saw a copy of the paper he wrote a card to the editor, saying:

"I don't know whether I am a subscriber to your paper or not. If I am, stop it."

Theft Saved Trouble of Getting Rid of Auto by Other Means

THEODORE TILLER, a Washington newspaper correspondent, had succeeded, after years of labor, to save $600 from the meager checks of unappreciative publishers all the way from New York to Budapest and he invested the money in a well-known make of automobile. One day he left it in front of a hotel and when he returned it was gone. It had been ruthlessly stolen and Tiller's grief was genuine.

Thinking that it would ease his feelings, John Kirby, another correspondent, told him this story:

"The'do, my boy, once there was a man who owned a car, just like yours. His friends mistook it so often for the family coffee mill that at length he decided to sell it. He advertised. He offered it for $250. There were no takers. Then he inserted an ad in the paper, promising to release the machine to any man with $150. Still there were no takers. Gradually he reduced this sum to $50.

"At last he advertised that on the morrow, at 8 a. m., in front of his house, he would give away that car. He telephoned the police to keep the lines of surging folk in order in front of his house next day; he prepared an elaborate system of drawing lots so that the winner might have the car; he double-locked the garage door and went to bed.

"Excitement and the hope at last of getting rid of that automobile disturbed his slumber. At 6 o'clock he found he could go to sleep no more. So he went to the window to see what sort of a day was breaking.

"In front of his house, The'do, stood three other cars, just like his own."

Clayton's Temper Is a Safety Valve to Maintain Good Humor

REPRESENTATIVE HENRY D. CLAYTON, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, has a temper that acts like an escape valve to keep him in a good humor most of the time. He does not get mad and stay mad, but while he is mad there is apt to be something doing. A burst of temper seems to burn up all the ill will in him.

One time he was making a campaign speech and a man in the audience remarked audibly about an inconsequential personal matter that was nobody's business. Clayton was in a rage in an instant and he called that man every name that he could think of, and he is some thinker on such occasions. An hour later he met the man face to face but he had forgotten all about his rage, and showed no anger in his face.

One of Clayton's first campaign speeches was in a hotbed of Populism in Alabama, which is his native State, as well as his present home. He went to the village to preach some straight Democratic doctrine, but when he mounted a barrel he found himself entirely surrounded by Populists and whiskers. They jeered and showed plainly that they did not intend to listen to a Democratic speech. Clayton got mad. He had a speech in his system and he intended to get it out. He started in amid derisive shouts and hurled such a choice line of expletives at the crowd that they were forced to keep quiet occasionally to hear them. Whenever there was a lull he would insert a part of his speech and then taunt the crowd because they had to listen to it. He finally got through the speech, but it took him almost three hours.

Slayer's Heart Stitched.

LONDON, March 28.—Charles Butler, a laborer, indicted for the manslaughter of a woman who was stabbed, was acquitted at the Old Bailey. Butler was himself stabbed some time ago and had his heart stitched in a hospital.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Remedy

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.00.

This plan makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually conquers an ordinary cough in 24 hours. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, spasmodic croup and bronchial asthma.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly.

Pine is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this combination.

The prompt results from this mixture have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this preparation. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Throw Away Your Eye-Glasses

A Free Prescription

You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye-strain or other eye-weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing, say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Optona. Fill a two-ounce bottle with warm water, drop in one Optona tablet and allow to dissolve. With this liquid, bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes on time.—ADV.

A Happy Bald Headed Man

Well-Known Politician, Nearly Bald, Now Has Heavy Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It.

A Western politician, well known on account of his baldness and ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a heavy growth of hair; many of his old friends did not know him and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following statement: "I attribute the remarkable growth of my hair to the use of the following simple recipe, which any lady or gentleman can mix at home: To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens streaked, faded, gray hair and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home."—ADV.

4 INDIAN SLAYERS OF TRIBAL PRIEST GET 10 YEARS EACH

Navajos Found Guilty of Killing Medicine Man Because He "Was Full of Devils."

GIRL HE TREATED DIED

Black Spot Appearing on Body Aroused Fears of Witchcraft; Chief Ordered Murder.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PRESCOTT, Ariz., March 28.—Ten years in the Federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., is to be the penalty for the sin committed in the name of a tribe's deity by four young Navajo Indians of Arizona. They murdered a medicine man, Gi Shin Beta, because they believed the arts he practiced upon the sick "were shot with witchcraft born of the devil," resulting in the death of two patients who never recovered from the uncanny spell cast over them.

The murder was committed by order of the chief without knowledge or fear of the white man's law and in the name of the Great Spirit.

Natani Bezab, Hoskay Oho Neeth, Natch We No and Bitsie No Dozie were found guilty after a trial fraught with difficulty and delay. The defendants never had learned even a smattering of the English language, making it necessary to translate every question and answer. The jury consisted of white men.

Parole for Bitsie No Dozie.

Bitsie No Dozie did not actively participate in the crime and was told by the Court that a parole or pardon would be recommended for him within a short time.

A young woman of the Navajo tribe was afflicted with tuberculosis. Her parents sent a messenger for Gi Shin Beta, who had a reputation for healing the sick and casting out devils. He had also a black spot on his long record. Four years ago he attended a young woman ill of a similar disease and was said to have cast a spell over her from which she never recovered.

The girl was found in a dying condition. The four men charged with murder and others of the community waited without while the "treatment" was being administered. The medicine man went out and consulted the stars when he noted her condition. Returning he said that he had seen a large wheel in the heavens and two men shoveling ashes into the center of it. This meant there was no hope for her recovery.

Black Spot Over Heart.

After she died a black spot was found over her heart, and her father instantly divined that the medicine man had shot an arrow of withcraft through her body, thereby causing her death. He consulted his friends and the belief became general in the Indian camps that Gi Shin Beta possessed a "body full of devils."

In the former case he had cast a spell over the young woman that lasted for many days. He was importuned to take it away but he steadfastly refused, holding that he had no power to do it. Another medicine man was called and after examining the girl he confirmed the beliefs of the other Indians that could the spell be removed the girl would recover. This was recalled and Gi Shin Beta was informally sentenced to die.

Conforming to an unwritten law of the tribe and in the belief that they were doing their fellow-men a justice, the four young Indian braves went to the mountain lodge of Gi Shin Beta, took him from the house and killed him with an ax. They left the body in the yard and there it remained for several hours. A friend of the four came along later and rolled it into a ditch.

Tribal Beliefs Explained.

In defense of their act the four Indians told of the peculiar belief of the tribe with reference to those who practiced black arts among them and declared that their own lives were in danger from such practices. The Government, on the contrary, produced some evidence showing there had been ill feeling between Gi Shin Beta and Natini Bezab over a piece of land and a fence, the title to which was in controversy. This evidence was strengthened by the fact that Bezab himself struck the blows with the ax that killed the medicine man.

After the crime the four men went to the Indian Agent and told him of their deed, surrendering upon his command to the authorities of the United States Government.

The plea of H. H. Linney, counsel for the defendants, was unique. The defendants, he said, knew not what they did. They were following a wild call of other generations of their kind; not the Old Testament call of an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, but the call that rings in behalf of society and the peaceable livelihood of those interested in the welfare of their kin and kind. Linney declared that the white man is inconsistent in condemning a belief in witchcraft since it has been but a few years comparatively since white men were burned at the stake by their own kind for the practice of witchcraft.

Consternation in Navajo Camp.

There are thousands of men today who believe that humans are possessed of the power to cast out devils, Linney argued, and the white man should not be too prone to condemn the Indian for holding such a belief. Religious belief is strong in all mankind, he said, and these four slayers could scarcely, in justice to their belief, be measured by the tape of the white man's law.

There is consternation in the camps of the Navajos. No argument that their simple minds can conceive justifies the white man in depriving members of their band of their liberty for doing their duty as patriotic representatives of a dwindling tribe.

FREE SERVICES CUT RAILROAD REVENUE, BRANDEIS ASSERTS

Privileges to Shippers Often Absorb 25 Pr Cent of Receipts, He Charges.

OPPOSES RATE INCREASE

Declares Abolishing of Storage and Warehouse Practices Would be Sufficient.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Louis D. Brandeis, counsel for the Interstate Commerce Commission, in opposition to the proposed 5 per cent increase in railroad freight rates, today submitted a statement showing that free services rendered shippers by railroads in classification territory result in serious depletion of the revenues of the roads. The special free services under consideration by the commission were free storage, free warehousing, free loading and unloading of cars, free lighterage, free elevation of grain and various other free terminal services.

Mr. Brandeis asserted that the cost to the railroads of these free services was so great as to absorb from 25 to 50 per cent of the freight rates receipts, and in certain instances more than the entire receipts were absorbed, resulting in a substantial cash loss to the railroads.

Free Service Costs $282,261.

Mr. Brandeis states that in Philadelphia shippers "who choose to patronize certain warehouses designated by the Pennsylvania Railroad have their freight unloaded from the cars, stored four days, and then carried to the wagon free of expense to the shipper, the expense of the operation being borne by the Pennsylvania Railroad. This free service costs the Pennsylvania at Philadelphia, through three of the four subsidized warehouse companies, $282,261 in the year ended June 30, 1913."

He pointed out that unless the freight passed through these warehouses, the road made no allowance to the shipper for loading, unloading or warehousing.

"Besides the discrimination between shippers there is furthermore a discrimination between warehousemen," Mr. Brandeis asserted. "The provision on the part of the railroad appears to be strikingly improvident from whatever point of view it may be regarded. Why should the Pennsylvania railroad throw away money in paying for that service which other warehousemen would not perform without pay from the railroad because of the storage charges paid by the consignee?"

Mr. Brandeis instances a shipment of 20 cars from Ivorydale, O., to Buffalo, on which 35 per cent of the total revenue was for free services.

Instances were cited showing that the Pennsylvania railroad carried freight on which the free service cost was so great that the service "might as well have been presented as an instance of free transportation, because the cost exceeded the total freight charge received."

One of these instances was in the handling of grain from Buffalo to Philadelphia.

Cost Is $24 a Car.

Mr. Brandeis declared that the free service cost to the Erie railroad at New York Harbor as applied to 18,153 cars investigated amounted to "at least $24 a car"—about $435,672.

Instances also were given of free service at Baltimore, one in particular of the handling by the Baltimore & Ohio of 21 carloads of tobacco from various Virginia points to New York City for export.

"The depletion of revenues by carriers through free unloading, storage and similar terminal services is even more marked on certain shipments, large in volume to New York City," said Mr. Brandeis. He instances a shipment of 25 carloads of flour from Buffalo by the West Shore road, in which nearly 85 per cent of the gross revenue were consumed in terminal charges.

Mr. Brandeis urged that a discontinuation of such service to certain shippers, or a reasonable charge for them vastly would increase the revenues of the roads.

Many Labor Saving Devices in New Texas Drug Building.

The Behrens Drug Co. of Waco, Tex., invites all the druggists of the Lone Star State to visit its new home. The company maintains that in arranging this new building at Fourth and Mary streets, Waco, it has erected one of the handsomest in the State. It was designed by Dr. W. R. Clifton, and the entire structure is full of labor-saving devices. On the second floor, where most of the work is done, there are circular chutes that carry goods from every department. When something is needed the employe just signals for what he wants and the goods are in his hands within a few seconds. The tables on which orders are filled have rollers, so that goods may be rolled from one shelf or barrel to another without inconvenience. But these are only a few of the labor-saving devices in the new building, all of which are entirely new.

Football Under Difficulties.

LONDON, March 28.—Mrs. Humphrey Ward, speaking at a meeting of the Personal Service Association yesterday, told a story to show the difficulties which face the workers at the play centers for children. "One day, when a game of football was being played," she said, "a worker called to one of the boys, 'Why don't you kick harder?' 'I'd like to,' replied the boy, 'but the sole is half off my right boot, and my left toe's busted.'" The attendance at the centers, she said, had risen from 200,000 in the first year to 1,500,000 last year.

A Message to Thin, Weak, Scrawny Folks

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 lbs. of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh

Thin, nervous, undeveloped men and women everywhere are heard to say: "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good, nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats and hand them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's body is like a dry sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. The best way to overcome this sinful waste of flesh-building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to use Sargol, the recently discovered regenerative force that is recommended so highly by physicians here and abroad. Take a little Sargol tablet with every meal and notice how quickly your cheeks fill out and rolls of firm, healthy flesh are deposited over your body, covering each bony angle and projecting point. Judge & Dolph, Weipert Drug Co., Raboteau, Wolff-Wilson, Johnson Bros. and other good druggists have Sargol, or can get it from their wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and highly efficient.

Caution—While Sargol has produced remarkable results in overcoming nervous dyspepsia and general stomach troubles, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain ten pounds or more, for it is a wonderful flesh-builder. —ADV.

PIMPLES ON CHEEKS BACK AND ARMS

Also Chest. Grew Larger. Festered and Came to Head. Itched Badly. Ashamed to Go Anywhere. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

7115 Madison Ave., Chicago, Ill.—"The trouble began by having little pimples on my head and then on one cheek. It spread on the other cheek, my chin, back, arms and chest. The pimples looked like little red spots at first and then they grew larger and festered and came to a head. They itched so badly that I would scratch and pick them and make them about ten times worse. My clothing irritated the breaking out on my body. I was ashamed to go anywhere.

"I procured a ——— Soap, Salve, several creams, ——— and ——— but none of them helped me. I was just about discouraged as to what to do when I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and I was overjoyed at the results. I gently smeared the Cuticura Ointment on the affected parts, let it remain for a while and washed it off with hot water and Cuticura Soap. I used three cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and they cured me entirely in a little less than a month and a half." (Signed) Miss Doris Witzeman, Sept. 30, 1913.

A single hot bath with Cuticura Soap and a gentle anointing with Cuticura Ointment are often sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing cases of skin and scalp diseases when all else fails. Sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

☞Men who shave and shampoo with Cuticura Soap will find it best for skin and scalp.

HOW BUST MEASURE MAY BE INCREASED

No Longer Need to Be Flat Chested and Undeveloped.

The woman without a properly developed bust is as nearly shapeless as any woman can be. A full, firm, perfectly rounded bust is her birthright and natural inheritance and quite as much for her health's sake as for mere personal appearance she should see to it that this natural right is hers. The bust can be developed by proper treatment just as safely and surely and probably more quickly than any other part of the body.

Some time ago a prominent physician discovered in experimental laboratory work a combination of stimulating ingredients possessing remarkable power in developing an undeveloped or retarded bust. "Sereso" has since been used by thousands of women with wonderful success. There are no creams, oils or massage of any kind, no mechanical pumps or appliance, nothing that can possibly injure in any way. You just take it as directed and see almost from day to day the steady growth of the shrunken, undeveloped busts to full-rounded beauty until development of from three to six inches is obtained.

Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. sell it on a positive guarantee of success and satisfaction or money back. Price for a three-weeks' treatment $1.00. Mail orders filled by Embee Toilet Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

SCHOLARSHIP IN MICHIGAN U. FOR ST. LOUIS PLANNED

Proceeds of Glee Club Concert on April 6 to Aid Alumni Fund.

A St. Louis scholarship in the University of Michigan will be established by the local alumni, which has 200 members, and the first funds for this purpose will come from the proceeds of the appearance of the Michigan Musical Clubs at the Victoria Theater Monday night, April 6.

The alumni has arranged to make the musical clubs' visit one of the most interesting society events of the Lenten season. The clubs, with 40 members, will arrive in St. Louis next Sunday morning from Chicago. In the afternoon they will be taken for a motor ride through the city and will be guests in the afternoon at a reception at the Washington Hotel. They will sing Monday morning at each of the four high schools. At luncheon Monday they will be the guests of the City Club, where Dean Hutchings of the University of Michigan will speak.

Branch Rickey, manager of the Browns, who coached three championship baseball teams for Michigan, will provide a special ball game Monday afternoon for the musical clubs and the St. Louis alumni. Rickey is a recent law graduate of Michigan.

The box seats for the concert have been sold to W. F. Carter, F. H. Bacon, C. P. Walbridge, Theodore F. Meyer, Oreon E. Scott, Millard Kaiser and W. B. Thompson. Roy F. Britton is in charge of the Entertainment Committee, George L. Neuhoff Jr. of Arrangements, and J. W. Booth of Publicity.

The Glee and Mandolin clubs are on their third annual recess tour to the Pacific Coast, traveling 6000 miles each year.

PARISIAN SAYS NEW YORK WOMEN LEAD U. S. IN DRESS

Dressmaker Declares Men of America in Baggy Trousers Look Like Ragpickers.

NEW YORK, March 28.—Mme. Suzanne Joire, one of the leading dressmakers in Paris, who sailed for home today on the Olympic of the White Star Line, was enthusiastic over New York women, but gave the men a body blow.

"The ladies of New York are the best looking and best gowned women in America," said she. "The men look like ragpickers. To watch the ladies is like watching the ladies of Paris, except that the New York ladies are more beautiful.

"Your men do not know how to dress. You see the beautiful madame coming down the avenue, dressed most wonderfully. By her side is a man. At first you think he is the lady's butler, but he is not in livery. Then you think the man must be an old family servant, who has been sent out with the lady to guard her from the bad gunmen of New York. Then the lady stops and you are introduced. Mon dieu, the man is the lady's husband.

"Why do not your men dress in keeping with your ladies. The trousers of the men bag at the knees, their coats do not fit. Ah, they are impossible as dressers. Why do not the men wear beards? Beards stand for manhood, virility and nobility. The only hair on the face is worn by the office boys; the simple youths who decorate themselves with the little mustache and the hat pulled down over the ears."

WEST END GIRLS TO SOLICIT AID FOR CHILDREN'S SOCIETY

Will Traverse City in Pairs to Distribute Year Book of Organization.

West End society girls will be important factors in the membership campaign of the St. Louis Children's Aid Society which will open April 6. The West End district will be divided into routes which young women will traverse in pairs the last week of Lent, following a plan which was successful recently in Boston, where society girls started a neighborhood campaign to aid the Visiting Nurses' Association.

The plans for the Children's Aid Society membership movement were formulated last week at the residence of Mrs. George C. Hitchcock, 5363 Waterman avenue, where a group of young women met and formed a working committee with Miss Nannie Lionberger as chairman. Miss Lionberger will be assisted on the committee by Misses Frances Gray, Helen Lane, Enid Simpkins, Elizabeth Grunden and others.

No money will be solicited during the campaign, but the society girls will leave year books of the Children's Aid Society at each home they visit and also cards on which the persons visited will be asked to sign their names and the amounts they will give in annual membership dues. The cards will be collected later.

Finds Summer Work for Children.

The advent of spring finds the society busy with its annual campaign to reinforce its list of eligible country and suburban homes where boys and girls can work during the summer. The society, however, vigorously prosecutes its work in winter as well as summer and in its search for child-loving persons who will throw open their homes to its proteges it aims to keep its eligible list amply supplied for its purposes the year round.

Most of the boys and girls aided are found in the Juvenile Court. The society takes the initiative and often has to convince unwilling parents that the best interests of their children demand they be sent to country homes.

The boys who are placed out through this channel usually go to farms within a radius of 25 miles of St. Louis. They are not sent so far away that the society cannot keep in touch with their deportment and progress.

Girls are placed in suburban homes principally and the agents of the society make frequent visits to them. Until boys and girls become self-supporting the society follows their development closely.

3000 Visits Made.

In the last year agents of the society made upwards of 3000 visits to children. By memberships and subscriptions the organization is enabled to carry on its work.

Miss Bertha Phillips is the general secretary of the society and she has as her regular agents Misses Margaret Williams, Bertha Miller and Florence Van Sickler. All the agents are trained social workers. The principal officers are: President, Mrs. George C. Hitchcock; vice-president, Dr. Fred T. Murphy; treasurer, Arthur Schwab, and corresponding secretary, Miss Mary Semple Scott.

TAKE SALTS IF YOUR BACK HURTS SAYS DRUGS ONLY EXCITE THE KIDNEYS

Salts is absolutely harmless to flush your Kidneys and neutralize uric acid, thus ending all Bladder trouble.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite and irritate the kidneys. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder trouble.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.—ADV.

COMMONWEALTH TRUST REORGANIZED INTO 2 COMPANIES

'Guardian Trust Co.' Formed Yesterday Takes Over Deposits, Banking and Trust Business and Liquid Assets—Will Begin Business at Once—Old Company Retains Slow Assets, Which It Will Liquidate.

SAME OFFICERS AND DIRECTORS IN BOTH

New Concern's $1,050,000 Capital Evenly Divided Between Commonwealth Company and Group of Commonwealth Directors and Officers as Individuals—Other Commonwealth Stockholders May Obtain Stock on Same Terms.

A new banking and trust company, the Guardian Trust Co. of St. Louis, was organized yesterday to take over the deposits and the quick, or liquid, assets of the Commonwealth Trust Co. and the Commonwealth banking and trust business. Its charter was issued by State Bank Commissioner Mitchell, and its capital is $1,050,000. Its officers and employes are the same as those of the Commonwealth, former Judge Daniel G. Taylor being president, and it will begin business tomorrow morning in the Commonwealth's quarters at the northeast corner of Broadway and Locust street.

The Commonwealth Trust Co. will remain in existence for the present, with the same officers, and will retain what are known as the slow assets, whose value when liquidated the officers believe will exceed the $2,000,000 capitalization of the Commonwealth company. These assets will be liquidated as soon as is found possible, and the company will then pass out of existence.

The Commonwealth Trust Co. holds $500,000 of the stock of the Guardian Co. The other $550,000 of the Guardian Co.'s stock was taken by a group of Commonwealth stockholders, including the directors of that company, who will hold it for 30 days, subject to purchase by the other stockholders of the Commonwealth on the same terms. The Commonwealth stockholders will have that length of time in which they can buy the stock before it is sold to outsiders. To purchase the stock, they will have to invest new capital.

President Taylor, in a statement last night, made public the reasons for the formation of the new company. He said the assets of the Commonwealth, while of undoubted value, were in part so slow of liquidation that the company found itself without sufficient ready money to do the aggressive and progressive banking business which its officers desired to do.

Taylor said he and his associates realized, when they took charge of the company's affairs early in January, that it would be necessary to find some way of separating the quick from the slow assets, and of liquidating the slow assets, while, at the same time, proceeding with an aggressive business. The plan of forming a new company resulted from a number of conferences.

The arrangements were completed yesterday afternoon, and the officers of the St. Louis Clearing House Association were consulted, and gave their approval to the plan. Bank Commissioner Mitchell, summoned from Jefferson City, also gave his approval, and issued the charter of the Guardian company last night.

To acquire $500,000 of the new company's stock, the Commonwealth company paid $250,000, which, according to President Taylor, represents the excess of quick assets over deposits, and $250,000, which it borrowed from the St. Louis Union Trust Co., with certain of its slow assets as security.

President Taylor gave out the following statement:

"The Guardian Trust Co. of St. Louis received its charter from the State Banking Commissioner, J. T. Mitchell, today. The new company has been organized, with a cash capital and surplus of $1,050,000, and has acquired the active banking and trust business of the Commonwealth Trust Co., and will open up for business at the northeast corner of Fifth and Locust streets (the quarters formerly occupied by the Commonwealth Trust Co.) Monday morning at 9 o'clock. Daniel G. Taylor is the president of the new company; Messrs. Jesse D. Depa, W. C. Fordyce, S. C. Davis and Charles A. Lemp will be vice-presidents; J. M. Woods, secretary; W. V. Delahunt, trust officer, and R. L. Gurney, manager of the savings department. The directors of the company will consist, in additions to the above officers, of:

"W. C. McBride, Adolphus Busch III, J. L. Green, James Green, Edward L. Preetorius, Edward F. Goltra, James W. Byrnes, Otto F. Stifel, S. W. Fordyce Jr., E. H. Simmons, Sam Lazarus, Charles J. Ma-

"Well, the season's on—great crowd—ideal day for opening—mighty good showing, too," panted Mr X. as he sat down to a late dinner.

"Yes. Everyone seems to have caught the spirit," replied Mrs. X.

"I was disappointed in the Browns, though—they semed a bit off-shade."

"They don't generally predominate until fall," mused Mrs. X.

"They were last choice last year Of course one shouldn't predict so early, but I hoped they would show a little more form."

"That's funny; only yesterday you said you didn't see why styles should become so extreme."

TOLEDOANS ARE RIDING FREE ON STREET CARS

Refusal of Company to Obey 3-Cent-Fare Law Brings Odd Condition.

TOLEDO, O., March 28.—The Toledo Railways and Light Co. is carrying passengers free today, pending the result of injunction proceedings brought by the company against the city in Federal Court.

An ordinance requiring the company to carry all passengers at straight 3-cent fares became effective at 12:01 this morning. The company instructed conductors to refuse 3-cent fares, but passengers who refused to pay more were carried free.

The free-ride order of the company turned anticipated rioting and tragedy to burlesque and removed all grounds for disorder.

The hearing on the company's application for injunction to restrain the city from enforcing the low-fare ordinance, on the ground that it is confiscatory, began today.

AVERILL HARRIMAN HAS ALL-DAY WAIT FOR BERTH

He Is Delayed Ten Hours in Omaha by Lack of Accommodation on Own Road.

OMAHA, Neb., March 28.—W. Averill Harriman, son of the late E. H. Harriman, had to wait in Omaha all day because he could not get a Pullman berth on his own railroad. After a wait of 10 hours the young multi-millionaire departed on a regular train tonight.

Harriman came from the East on an early morning train and wanted to depart on the Union Pacific Overland Limited, but there was not a single lower berth unoccupied, and every drawing room had an occupant. A second train also was lacking in accommodation and it was not until late this afternoon that he was able to get a drawing room on a train on his own railroad and start for San Francisco.

FIND WALLS OF DUTCH JAIL OF COLONIAL TIME

New York Workmen Unearth Masonry Which Probably Was Part of New Amsterdam Prison.

NEW YORK, March 28.—Excavators of the new Broadway subway have found what they think is the wall of an old Dutch jail, built when the settlement of Manhattan Island was New Amsterdam.

The discovery was made underneath Church street at a point about midway between Dey and Cortlandt streets. Workmen struck their picks into a stone wall, which completely blocked their path. It extended from a point about eight feet beneath the surface downward for 22 feet. Uncovering the wall, the diggers found it was solid stone masonry, with three windows fortified with iron bars.

ROME, March 28.—Prof. Giacomo Boni, who last January discovered the "mundus," or center of the ancient city of Rome, has now found, nearby, what he is convinced is the place where the vestals preserved the finest ears of corn for the celebration of marriages.

This ceremony was considered symbolic of the betterment of the race.

GIRL TEACHER SLAIN BY BOY, 15, WHOM SHE HAD EXPELLED

Youth Confesses After Body Is Found Near Road Leading to His Home.

EVIDENCE OF HARD FIGHT

Pastor's Daughter Was on Way to See Youth's Parents About His Reinstatement.

UTICA, N. Y., March 28.—The body of Miss Lydia Beecher, 20 years old, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. William A. Beecher of Sennett, and a teacher in the high school at Poland, 12 miles north of this city, was found back of a clump of willows this morning. The girl had been stabbed many times and beaten on the head and had been attacked.

Eugene Gianni, 15 years old, and a former pupil of the teacher, who is in the County Jail at Herkimer, has confessed to the murder. He at first denied all knowledge of the crime.

Miss Beecher left her boarding house about 7:30 o'clock last evening to mail a letter. A searching party was being organized this morning when word came that Henry Fitch, a farmer living near Poland, had found her body. While on his way to the milk station, Mr. Fitch saw traces of blood in the snow. A broken fence nearby and the track of something dragged through the snow toward the willows caused him to follow the trail. At the edge of the swamp the body of the missing teacher was found.

There was a wound on her forehead and finger marks on her throat.

Had Expelled Boy.

Miss Beecher had young Gianni, who is an Italian, expelled for misconduct two years ago. At the time he made threats to "get even" with her. The boy recently returned to his home in Poland, after serving some time in St. Vincent's Industrial School at Utica on a minor charge. He sought reinstatement in Miss Beecher's school and was seen talking with the teacher after she left her boarding house last night.

Young Gianni was not about the hamlet this morning, but a few hours later was found at Newport, four miles away.

Gianni admitted, it is said, that he met Miss Beecher last night, talked with her and asked her to visit his father and make arrrangements for his return to school. He said he walked to her boarding house with her after that and then went to his own home.

"I went down to the village later on an errand for my father," said the youth in his first statement on the murder, "and came back and went to bed about 9 o'clock. The reason I went to Newport was that I had planned to go to Herkimer and see the moving pictures, today. I thought I would take a day off."

Gianni's father corroborated the youth in these statements. He said it was nothing unusual for the boy to leave his home and go to Newport and other places.

No questioning on the part of the authorites at first could weaken the story of the youth in any way. He was sorry to hear Miss Beecher had been killed, he said, and declared he was her friend and would do no harm to her under any conditions.

Before she left her boarding house last evening Miss Beecher told Mr. Countryman that she was going to the Gianni home to have a talk with the boy's parents about having him return to school. She said the youth had requested her to do this. Her body was found near the road that led to that home.

Signs of Struggle Found.

A little beyond the village Miss Beecher apparently was attacked by her companion and it was there the death struggle was commenced. There is evidence that the fight was a desperate one and that she was probably murdered there. The ground all about the place was trampled and there were traces of blood and imprints of struggling feet of the knees when one of the two was forced to the ground and then of the body of the young woman as the murderer overcame her and felled her to the earth. Her hat, raincoat, umbrella, back comb, hairpins, glasses and portions of her dress were found. These were trampled in the snow and over them and around them were splashes of blood. Later her slayer had dragged her from the road into the little swamp.

THREE ARE HURT WHEN MOTORCYCLE HITS A MAN

Rider, Young Nephew He Was Carrying, and Negro Grocery Driver Are Bruised.

Glen Bowles, 17 years old, of 410 North Fourteenth street, East St. Louis, while riding a bicycle on the pavement last night at 7:30 o'clock, and carrying on the handle-bar his 5-year-old nephew, Donald McFarland, ran into Pearl Johnson, a negro, 20 years old, and a grocery driver who was crossing the sidewalk to deliver an order. All three were injured.

Bowles was riding on the east sidewalk of Fourteenth street when he struck the negro. His nephew was thrown on the lawn, and his head was bruised. Johnson was only slightly bruised. Bowles suffered a cut over the eye, and his face, head and left hip were bruised.

RICH CHINESE ARE ARRESTED IN RAID; OPIUM IS SEIZED

Hop Alley Jarred When Government Men Take Lee Mow Lin and Aid.

FIREARMS ARE FOUND, TOO

Material Worth $1000 Confiscated—Evidence of Much Smoking Discovered.

The slow-moving life in Hop Alley was jarred yesterday afternoon when revenue agents arrested Lee Mow Lin, 60 years old,, with his assistant, Lee Hay, and charged them with manufacturing opium for smoking purposes.

In Lin's establishment at 17 South Eighth street, where he holds a Federal liquor license under the name of Quong On Long, about $1000 worth of pure opium, distributed in 30 or 40 boxes; one large pan of cooked opium ready for the refining process, a four-gallon jar of opium in the process of maceration, a two-gallon pan of the same and small portions of crude opium were found and confiscated.

The raid was directed by Charles R. Bradley, chief of the special agents in the local customs department, and L. G. Nutt, chief of the local revenue agents. They had received a "tip" about the contraband opium. Assisting them were Deputy Revenue Agents Ernest Langley, W. H. Fowle and W. S. Larner.

Small Arsenal Found.

The raid was made at 2 p. m. At that hour business in Hop Alley is flourishing. The agents walked suddenly into the first floor of Lin's establishment, where Lin, in a vivid green sweater, was waiting on a customer. Silently he submitted to arrest. Then Bradley and Nutt began an inspection. In the rear of the first floor they found a Chinese reclining on a rosewood box, with two half-pound boxes of gunpowder for a pillar. Further back were two heavy revolvers, several rifles, knives and many cartridges.

On the second floor a sick Chinese lay. "Don't takee me," he said. "Me dyee pletty quick." He was allowed to remain.

On the third floor Lee Hay was macerating opium in a huge pan. Seeing th officers he dashed the mixture out of the rear window on to a one-story building below. A search revealed the opium in cans, about 11 ounces being in each can. Two of the 30 or 40 cans were stamped with imported marks, showing they had been brought into the country before the law prohibiting the importation of opium was passed.

Besides the opium, pipes for its use, opium lamps, and a large number of little one-pronged forks used in raking out the yenshee, or refuse, from the pipe, were found. A large bag of yenshee, weighing several pounds, was confiscated. Nutt said this indicated that a tremendous amount of opium smoking had been going on. This yenshee is collected after the smoking and used to add tang to fresh opium.

Woman's Note Is Found.

Nutt also found seevral notes asking for the drug in from 25-cent to $10 lots. One note read: "Please send me 25 cents worth immediately. Eva."

After Lin's arrest he turned over a pile of money to a countryman in the shop.

Although only about $1000 worth of opium was found if the manufacturer's duty of $300 a pound had been paid, its value would have been increased at least $30,000.

If Lin and Hay are convicted of manufacturing the opium without a license for smoking purposes, they will be liable to a $10,000 fine, or five years in prison, or both.

Lin has been in business in St. Louis more than 30 years, and is said to be the most wealthy Chinese here.

3 CHILDREN RUN DOWN BY VEHICLES AND A CAR

Boy's Leg Fractured by Auto; Fender Picks Up and Saves Girl.

Three 5-year-old children, one girl and two boys, were run down and injured by vehicles and a street car in different parts of the city yesterday.

Mary Spelman of 3523 Caroline street was struck by a wagon and team driven by John Kaufmann of 1725 South Tenth street, while playing with another child in front of her home at 9 a. m. She was severely bruised on the left hip and leg, where the tongue of the wagon hit her.

Sam Spiva of 2727 Ivanhoe avenue, while crossing the street in front of 6833 Manchester road with his sister, Edna, at 11:30 a. m., was run down by an auto owned and driven by Dr. W. H. Dodger of 1527 East Grand avenue. Dr. Dodger took the injured lad to Dr. William Sparhawk, at 6821 Manchester road, who found the boy's left leg was fractured. Dr. Dodger then took the boy home.

About the same hour Leon Weyerech of 3547 Laclede avenue was hit by a westbound Laclede car as he was crossing the street at Grand avenue. Motorman John Riechmann of 4348 Cadet avenue, dropped the car's fender, which caught up the boy, carrying him 25 feet. The boy was taken into the office of Dr. A. J. Raendonck, 3540 Laclede avenue, who found him badly scared and shaken, but uninjured.

SENATOR STONE, AT DESK AGAIN, WILL TAKE VACATION

Will Go to Carolinas to Avoid Relapse and Return for Tolls Fight.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Senator Stone of Missouri announced today he would take a vacation and recuperate. He will go to North Carolina or South Carolina, but has not yet determined whether it shall be Asheville, Pinehurst or Summerville.

Stone was in his seat in the Senate this afternoon for the first time in eight weeks. He was at the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations Wednesday, but did not visit the Senate chamber. Today when he appeared in the Senate he was congratulated by many Senators of both parties. For several minutes he held a reception. The Senator looked much better than he did Wednesday. His color is healthier and his leg has improved so much that he does not need his crutches all the time.

Mrs. Stone will accompany the Senator to North Carolina or wherever he goes and see that he gets complete rest and good care. She said tonight he soon would be all right.

In the absence of Senator Stone, Senator Shively of Indiana will act as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, which will consider the Nicaraguan and other important treaties.

Senator Stone expects to return to Washington in time to take part in the Panama Canal tolls contest. He will be here for part of the debate and the vote.

Physicians who have attended Stone through his recent illness say he ought to be at a quiet place where he can rest without being molested. It is understood he has a blood clot on his knee and any excitement might cause a relapse or death. Careful attention, it is thought, will steer him past any lurking troubles.

GIRL ATTACKED IN PARK; 10 MEN DRIVE HER ESCORTS AWAY

Policeman Finds Assailants Fleeing at Fairground and Makes One Arrest.

Miss Catherine Gleason, 18 years old, who lives with her widowed mother at 2508 Belle Glade avenue, was attacked by one of 10 men who accosted her and her three escorts in Fairground Park at 11:30 o'clock last night. The man was arrested and gave his name as Charles Holden, saying he lived at 1455 East Fifty-fifth street, Chicago.

Miss Gleason told the police that she and George Thompson of 4262 Lucky street, George Bonland of 4406 Cote Brilliante avenue and Joseph Ryan of 4285 Cote Brilliante avenue, were returning through the park from a party on Laclede avenue.

As they neared the west bridge, she said, 10 men suddenly confronted them, assailing them with stones. She said the men told her escorts to run or they would kill them.

Thompson, Bonland and Ryan said they ran to get help, their cries attracting Patrolman Phillips. When Phillips reached the scene, he said, he saw several men running away, but caught Holden attacking the girl, who was taken to the dispensary.

None of the other men was arrested.

Suspect Is Not Mrs. Gunness.

NEVILLE, Sask., March 28.—The woman, living on a homestead near here, suspected of being Mrs. Belle Gunness, the accused La Porte (Ind.) murderess, is not the person sought. After seeing and talking with the woman today, Clinton Cochrane, marshal of La Porte, declared that she is not Mrs. Gunness.

FARM-TO-TABLE GUIDE ARRANGED BY POSTMASTER

List of Those Who Would Sell to Consumers to Be Sent to Every Home.

Farm-to-table shipments of butter, eggs, vegetables and fruit by parcel post, may help to reduce the cost of living for St. Louis consumers this spring and summer, under a plan announced yesterday by Postmaster Selph.

The present parcel post rates and the weight limit, 50 pounds within the first two zones, make it possible for St. Louisans to get farm produce direct from growers in Missouri, Illinois, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Iowa, without the intervention of the middleman. The difficulty is that most city residents do not know where to send for the supplies.

To meet this difficulty Postmaster Selph has decided to prepare and distribute throughout the city a list of farmers who will ship produce by parcel post on receipt of the price. To get the names for this list he has sent bulletins to rural postoffices, asking that farmers who wish to be on the list send in their names.

Lists for All St. Louisans.

One thousand such bulletins were sent out yesterday, mostly to postoffices in Missouri. Within a week or 10 days, Selph believes, he will have enough names and addresses to print his first list. This list, printed at the Government's expense, will be distributed, as a starter, in 15,000 to 20,000 St. Louis homes by letter carriers. The homes will all be in a certain district, to be selected by the Postmaster.

If the consumers make the use of the list the Postmaster expects, it will be expanded and its distribution will be extended over the whole city.

When the mail order business gets to working well, Selph believes a large cold storage room in the Central Postoffice building will be needed. He has a room which will serve the purpose, and he has written to Washington for authority to advertise for bids for equipping it as a refrigerator room.

Thinks He Can Beat Middleman.

Selph plans to keep this room at a temperature of 30 to 40 degrees, with chilled air circulating through conduits, so that butter, eggs and fruits can be kept there 24 hours or longer without detriment, though they will be distributed, as a rule, within three hours.

The cost of postage, Selph believes, will prove to be considerably less than the middleman's commission and the present express rate. Several St. Louis families have adopted this method of purchasing table supplies from farmers they know and have found it to be a money-saving plan. All perishable articles, the Postmaster says, will be accepted for mailing outside of mail bags, if suitably wrapped.

Sanitary Car Bill Passes.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The Senate today passed the House bill directing the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Secretary of the Treasury to promulgate regulations for keeping in sanitary condition all interstate passenger cars. Surgeons of the Public Health Service are authorized to enter cars at any time to enforce the regulations.

VILLA IN TORREON WIRES CAPTURE OF CITY IS IMMINENT

Rebel General Establishes Base and Directs by Telephone Men Who in All Parts of Town Demolish Adobe Houses With Hand Grenades.

Unconfirmed Report Is That Velasco, Commander at Torreon, and Three Other Generals Killed Themselves to Avoid Capture.

Two Trainloads of Rebel Wounded Reach Chihuahua and Tell How Men Were Sent to Sure Death to Draw Fire.

By Associated Press.

JUAREZ, Mev., March 28 (10:30 p. m.)—A telegram just received from Gen. Villa says the capture of Torreon is a matter of minutes, not hours.

BY JOHN ROBERTS,

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch in the Field.

TORREON, Mex., March 28.—Gen. Villa was in command of his troops within the city tonight, having established his base at a little way station on the Mexican national line not far from the Mexican National Railroad bridge across the Nazas River. Villa was within the Federal intrenchments at 7:40 and was directing his men by field telephone and wireless.

From the new base he distributed 20,000 hand grenades which are being used in all parts of the city. The adobe houses are being blown into dust.

The Federals are battling away in spite of Villa's overwhelming numbers. The resistance of Torreon has been one of Villa's greatest surprises. He expected only a show of resistence and found a town filled with human tigers ready to take the offensive the minute his forces weakened. Buildings are burning in all parts of the business district and the bodies of people and horses are being hurled into the fires to prevent the spread of cholera.

Wounded soldiers and civilians by the trainloads are being gathered from the battlefield and sent north to obtain treatment at the general hospital in Chihuahua. Villa has lost most heavily, as the Federals have been fighting under shelter, while Villa has been in the open.

Federals Abandon Important Positions—Go to Housetops.

By Associated Press.

JUAREZ, Mexico, March 28.—The attack upon the last line of Federal defenses at Torreon began at noon today, according to a telegram from Gen. Villa, who said he expected to capture the stronghold tonight.

The assault last night is declared to have proved abortive because of the failure of the supply of hand grenades, the most useful ammunition in street fighting. Villa is declared to have received 5000 more hand grenades before he renewed the attack.

The positions already taken in the business section of the city, it is said, were made secure last night and the smelter, the bull ring and the Hotel Sternau are said to have become rebel property.

The forenoon today was devoted to disposing of the dead and making comfortable the quarters of the wounded at Gomez Palacio, and in the field hospitals.

Orders Hospital Supplies.

One telegram was received from Gen. Villa, urging that more hospital supplies including quick lime, bandages and absorbent cotton and antiseptics be rushed to the front in haste.

The cost of his victories is known to have been heavy, and the fact that more hospital supplies must be sent from here, despite the large store which Villa took with him, adds confirmation.

The Zaragoza Brigade, which left Juarez 1300 strong, is said on excellent authority to have lost 25 per cent in killed and wounded. Some of the loss was at Sacramento, when Gen. Benavides was hewing a patch in Gomez Palacio, and some when the brigade was joined with the column of Gen. Monclovio Herrera and the dash into Torreon from the east was made. Gen. Maximo Garcia was badly wounded and is expected to die. Gen. Trinidad Rodriguez has a bullet wound in one arm. Maj. Macedonia Andana was shot in the chest and Juan N. Guiterres, Chief of Police of the city of Chihuahua, was killed.

A private telegram from a subaltern at Gomez Palacio to his father this afternoon said that it was rumored in the barracks there that Gen. Refugio Velasco, Federal commander at Torreon, had killed himself rather than fall into the rebel hands. Little faith attaches to the story. There were rumors also that three other Federal Generals reported killed in action—Pena, Rayna and Anaya—really took their own lives.

Death Preferred to Capture.

A report was received at Gen. Chao's headquarters tonight that a force of Federal volunteers, or former Orosquistas, attempted to cut their way out of Torreon today, but were driven back with a great loss of life. Gen. Villa long ago gave notice that no quarter would be given to any Federal volunteers found under arms and this is prompting those in the ranks of Velasco's army at Torreon to fight with desperation. They may be killed in battle, but they know they will surely be killed if captured. It is believed Velasco has taken advantage of this situation to force the Federal volunteers into the position of the greatest danger in the defense of Torreon.

In street fighting, rifles are of comparatively little use against an enemy using adobe walls as defenses. These must be shattered by shells or attacked with hand grenades. The ordinary adobe house is one story high, the four right-angled walls of which rise two or three feet above the flat roof. It is customary for troops to station themselves on these roofs, behind the projecting walls, and in attacking such defenses, the grenade, thrown by galloping cavalrymen, is the most effective weapon. Bullets do not pierce the thick mud walls.

Carranza Nears Juarez.

Gen. Manuel Choa, Military Governor of the State of Chihuahua, who carried greeting to Gen. Venustiona Carranza yesterday, returned here this evening. He said Carranza declined the use of a special train, preferring to finish his trip on horseback. Gen. Chao said the chief probably would arrive tomorrow at noon.

A private letter from the front dealing with the preliminary fighting before Gomez Palacio, tells a story of the fatalities which followed an attempt of a body of 300 Federals to surrender. According to the letter the rebel column already had accepted the surrender of 200 Federals, who found themselves hopelessly outnumbered, when in the distance 300 more Federals were observed approaching.

Two rapid-fire guns were turned on them and they lost heavily before the rebels observed that their fire was not returned and that the detachment was coming steadily forward. The rebel fire then was checked and it was learned that the 300 also wished to surrender.

On telegraphic orders from Gen. Villa, six carloads of provisions were sent out of Juarez by special train this evening to relieve the suffering inhabitants of Gomez Palacio and Lerdo. Villa is reported to have ordered the merchants to proceed by special train to Juarez and El Paso to buy provisions which will be admitted free of duty and shipped without freight charges. The goods must be retailed at cost, it was stipulated.

Smelter Is Abandoned.

A dispatch to an El Paso newspaper, dated Gomez Palacio, says:

"The Torreon smelter, which the Maderos formerly owned and one of the largest in the State, was the storm center of today's fighting at Torreon. Gen. Benjamin Argumedo, the famous converted rebel of Orozco's army, had been defending the smelter all day from the assaults of Herrera's men.

"The smelter has proved to be a good defensive position because of the high walls and stacks which have served as lookout towers. The rebel cordon of troops drew too close for Argumedo's comfort today, however, and at 4 o'clock this afternoon he started to pierce the lines of the rebels which had surrounded the smelter. This was a disastrous move for the irregular commander, who lost more than 400 in the fight and a large number of prisoners, who were later executed.

"He abandoned the smelter and withdrew into the central plaza, where the Federals are being slowly driven back and probably will make their last stand with the Cathedral back of them.

"Argumedo's original force numbered 1500, but he has lost heavily and less than 800 succeeded in reaching the plaza.

"Villa went along the entire battle line today, advising his officers to get as much rest as possible for the big assault tonight. The street fighting continued all day, but was not as fierce as on Friday, as the forces are exhausting their ammunition and slipping back in small squads to replenish supplies.

"The Federals are fighting from behind street barricades, in houses and from house tops, and it will be almost impossible to dislodge them until their ammunition is exhausted or Villa gets a larger supply of hand grenades."

REBEL WOUNDED FILL TWO TRAINS

Distorted Soldiers Reach Chihuahua and Tell How Villa Was Surprised.

CHIHUAHUA, Mex., March 27 (via El Paso, March 28.)—Evidence of the severe fighting which the rebels suffered at the hands of the Federals outside Torreon was brought here today, with the first two trainloads of rebel wounded. Sixteen coaches filled with soldiers, distorted with the agony of their wounds, wrapped in blankets, reached the city as the vanguard of a long line of wounded scattered along the railroad at points 300 miles southward. Three hundred rebel wounded, including three lieutenant-colonels and about 20 minor officers, had arrived by night. They reported a total of about 1000 wounded, with an unknown number dead. Gen. Trinidad Rodriguez, probably fatally wounded, and Gen. Maximo Garcia, seriously wounded, were left at the front.

All accounts given by the soldiers were that the Federals surprised Gen. Villa, who, instead of frightening the Huerta forces on his approach, found the Torreon garrison stubbornly entrenched and prepared to resist. These accounts agreed that the first firing resulted in a victory for the Federals and loss of courage among the rebels. After five days' fighting Villa had failed not only to enter Torreon proper, but had not taken Gomez Palacio, a suburb.

Sent to Certain Death.

Most of the wounded were soldiers of the Zaragosa Brigade, commanded by Gen. Aguirre Benavides, which undertook to blaze the way through the heavy Federal cannonading outside Gomez Palacio. These soldiers were mowed down, killed and wounded by scores, according to the stories told by individual soldiers. They were sent out to almost certain death to bring out the Federal fire so that the Federals might be located for an attack from other points. Many of the wounded died, and the dead, of course, simply were covered with loose earth, without the digging of graves.

"Hell met us at Torreon," said one youthful soldier, as he crawled out of the train with his head, arms and legs wrapped in rags, yet with a grim smile on his face. He was one of the boys who joined the Zaragosa brigade in numbers.

Exiles' Homes Stripped.

Police Fire on Anti-Huerta Crowd in Mexico City.

MEXICO CITY, March 28.—Already small demonstrations against President Huerta have occurred in the streets of the capital. The police tonight fired upon a small crowd of students who were marching and shouting "Muera Huerta," and making remarks derogatory to the Government.

Emboldened by the growing popular belief that the Government forces are failing to hold back the rebels at Torreon, the students organized a manifestation, but not more than 50 of them had joined in the movement when they were faced by a squad of police near the Alameda. About forty shots were fired by the police, who apparently aimed high, as no one was hurt. A number of the participants were arrested and the others found safety in the side streets.

The two Americans, Goldsmith and Byrd, who recently were arrested at Tampico, and charged with seditious activity, have been released on the representations of the American Charge d'affaires, Nelson O'Shaughnessy.

JIMENEZ, Mexico, March 28.—Two more trainloads of rebel wounded from near Torreon passed through here today en route to Chihuahua. The soldiers reported there were 300 or more wounded at Bermejillo, who were unable to find accommodations in the northbound trains. Some of the soldiers were injured too seriously to be transported.

Rebels Sink Steamer Belonging to Huerta Sympathizer.

NOGALES, Sonora, Mexico, March 28.—The steamer Carmen, belonging to La Compania Navira del Pacifico, has been captured and sunk by Constitutionalists, according to a dispatch sent here today by Gen. Obregon, the rebel commander on the west coast of Mexico. The vessel was scuttled in Yavaros Bay, and all the crew were made prisoners. Gen. Obregon said he had issued an order that all vessels of the Navira del Pacifico be captured and destroyed on account of the company's alleged assistance to Huerta.

American Buys $7,000,000 Worth of Armaments for Huerta.

LONDON, March 28.—Among the passengers taking the boat train at Euston for the Cunard liner Mauretania today was John Wesley de Kay of New York, former president of the Mexican National Packing Co., who expected to have Sir Lionel Carden, the British Minister to Mexico, as his fellow passenger. Sir Lionel's passage had been canceled, however, at the last moment.

De Kay said that he had purchased and was about to ship within a week from France, under sealed orders, to a secret destination, $7,000,000 worth of armaments for Mexico. These munitions of war include 250 French Creusot guns and 10,000 rounds of ammunition. He said he had done this as a protest against the attitude of the United States Government toward Huerta.

WOMAN MUST PAY $4285 FOR BOY'S DEATH BY AUTO

A verdict for $4285.75 was returned yesterday by a jury in Circuit Judge Rassieur's court in favor of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Linstroth, 2519A Prairie avenue, against Mrs. Madeline Peper, 50 Lewis place, widow of Adolphus Peper, on account of the death of the plaintiffs' son, William, 6 years old. The boy died April 29, 1913, from injuries received three days before by being run down by Mrs. Peper's automobile in front of 3010 Newstead avenue.

Mrs. Peper made the defense she had loaned the automobile to her brother-in-law, Horace Mays, who had charge of the car, and hence she was not liable. The defense further was made that the boy was permitted by his mother, who was with him when he was hurt, to run across the street in front of the machine, and the accident was unavoidable on the part of the driver. Mrs. Peper was not in the machine.

CHARGES MAYOR'S AIDS CAUSED MAN'S MURDER

Prosecutor at Executive's Trial Says Election Crooks Had "Squealer" Killed.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 28.—That political conditions, caused by Mayor Donn M. Roberts, on trial here for election frauds, and his agents, were responsible for one murder, according to the opening statement of the trial made today by Joseph Roach, special prosecutor. Prosecutor Roach charged that the murder of Harry Kiger was instigated by "the political corruptionists" when they learned Kiger was about to reveal information regarding his part in false registration. Frank Savage is serving a term in the penitentiary for the Kiger murder.

Roach said further evidence would be introduced to show that Mayor Roberts and his agents had conspired to register 2700 fictitious persons to make it possible for 100 men to vote eight or nine times in each precinct in the city.

Judge Charles M. Fortune adjourned court this afternoon when Prosecutor Roach completed his address. Ephraim Inman will make the opening statement for the defense Monday.

Commonwealth Trust Reorganized Into 2 Companies

guire, W. B. Dean Jr. and Charles Holman.

"The working force will be the same as that of the Commonwealth Trust Co.

"The new company will start business under the most favorable conditions. It has over two millions of cash and over $2,900,000 of other quick and liquid assets and has deposits of over $3,900,000 turned over to it by the Commonwealth Trust Co. The officers of the new company are confident of the future and anticipate being able to rapidly make the new company one of the leading financial institutions of the city.

The new board of directors of the Commonwealth Trust Co., elected last January, concluded that the interests of the stockholders and of all parties concerned would be best served by the organization of this new company to take over the quick assets of the Commonwealth Trust Co. and conduct the business heretofore conducted by it, with additional capital and along aggressive lines. The Commonwealth Trust Co. will no longer take deposits, nor engage actively in general banking business, but retains the ownership of the building at Fifth and Locust streets and other property and assets which, while of great value, are what may be termed "slow" from a banking standpoint and which can now be advantageously handled and disposed of to the greatest advantage to its stockholders."

In further explanation of the new arrangement, President Taylor said it had not been possible, before organizing the new company, to offer all the Commonwealth's stockholders an opportunity to obtain the new company's stock. The same purpose was served, he said, by the action of the coterie of directors and large stockholders, who took over the $550,000 of stock. The members of this group will sell to their fellow stockholders, who might wish to buy, in the next 30 days.

He said, in answer to inquiries, that the only loan in which either company figured directly was the $250,000 loan made to the Commonwealth Company by the St. Louis Union Trust Co. When asked where the buyers of the $550,000 of stock got the money which they paid for the stock, he said they put up the cash as individuals.

Among the slow assets of the Commonwealth, President Taylor mentioned the building it now occupies, its interest in the new Monward Building and a railroad in Kansas, in which the company is largely interested.

All stockholders of the Commonwealth will retain their stock whose whole value will be determined by the liquidation of the "slow assets" and the Commonwealth's half interest in the new company.

The capital of the Commonwealth Trust Co. is $3,000,000. There has been no trading in its stock on the Stock Exchange for more than a month. For many months its stock has been listed at $75 and $76 a share. The par value is $100.

The findings from the post-mortem are incomplete, as the microscopic work is being done in Chicago.

MOTHERS DEMAND A NEW SCHOOL TO REPLACE FIRETRAP

Garfield Club Members Get 2000 Signers to Petition to the Board.

Members of the Mothers' Club of the Garfield School, Jefferson avenue and Wyoming street, will this week present to the Board of Education a petition, signed by over 2000 residents and taxpayers in the district, formally demanding a new school building for their children.

For the last three weeks volunteer workers from the club have been making an energetic house-to-house canvass with the petition. The assistance of the Patrons' Association, an organization composed of the fathers of the school children, was early enlisted.

It is pointed out that the school buildings, which were erected about 35 years ago and are among the oldest in St. Louis, are no longer adequate for the purpose they are intended to serve, but are a menace to the lives of the 850 pupils. Three red brick buildings comprise the group, one of which was condemned last fall by the Building Commissioner. The main floor of the three-story structure is still being used for the eighth-grade classrooms, and on the second floor the office of the principal, J. S. Nants, is located. The building has no fire escape and but one door, leading out to the front yard from a single wooden staircase, which is old and rickety.

Board Would Remodel Building.

The central building of the group is used for the primary grades. It has two stories and contains 12 spacious rooms. It is equipped with two inclosed staircases, made of iron stringers with wood tread, having exits directly on to the playground, and there is an additional exit in the front leading from the first floor to the street. It was intended to remove the inclosed staircases this summer and replace them with reinforced concrete.

The two-story building used for the kindergarten has a back and front entrance and an inclosed outside stairway, of noncombustible materials.

The Mothers Club not only demands better fire protection for their children, but urge the erection of model schoolhouses on the site as a matter of civic pride. They complain that the South Side has comparatively few modern schools, and that it is running too far behind the West End and North Side in its physical and architectural appearance. The School Board has proposed to remodel the school at a cost of $30,000.

Mrs. Fred Winter, 3449A Tennessee avenue, president of the club, explained to a Post-Dispatch reporter the mothers' point of view in the campaign the organization has undertaken: "I do not consider the buildings as they now stand safe for the children who are housed in them daily," she said. "Why cannot the School Board give us the same sort of modern structures they have put up all through the West End and in the north part of the city? We pay our taxes in South St. Louis just the same as other property owners and our children are entitled to the same consideration given others.

School 40 Years Old.

"The Garfield School, to my knowledge, is nearly forty years old, and certainly has served its day. The present generation deserves something better. The site is really ideal, being opposite Benton Park, and all that is required to make the school a real ornament to the locality is suitable buildings. Surely the city is rich enough to provide the right sort of schoolhouses for its youth. The Mothers Club and Patrons Association are going to keep pegging away at this matter until we accomplish our object."

Mrs. James McGowan, 3139 Texas avenue, vice-president, is one of the hardest workers in the club. She said:

"That school is in a terrible condition. I regard it as a regular firetrap, and if it ever caught fire there isn't one chance in ten of the children on the upper floors getting out alive. The boilers are located at the foot of the main staircase, and in case of an explosion this would cut off that exit. Of course, there are fire escapes. But there were fire escapes at the M. A. C., too. Besides, the sanitation of the buildings is not what it should be. The school should be pulled down."

Principal Nants stated that he highly approved of the civic pride and progressive spirit the Mothers' Club is showing in this matter. The club, he said, had been discussing the project for over two years. They hold regular meetings once a month, in the kindergarten room after school hours, and have an active membership of 100 mothers.

"I think in case of fire," Nants explained, "we could get every pupil out of the buildings quickly and without loss of life. They are given a fire drill three times a day as a part of their regular dismissal."

The officers of the Patrons' Association, which is co-operating with the Mothers' Club to get new school buildings, are: John H. Matthews, chairman of the committee; Martin Scherer, Fred Winter, John Kasler, Otto Schultles.

At the office of the Board of Education is was stated that no action could be taken in the matter until the board holds its next meeting, April 14.

Dr. Eliot's Lines "Fixed Up" by President Wilson

Former Head of Harvard University Writes Inscriptions for a Washington Building and They Are Changed Without His Knowledge.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 28.

IN order to improve the inscriptions arranged by Dr. Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, for the new Washington City Postoffice Building, President Wilson, as master of the English language, revised and edited the lines without the knowledge of Dr. Eliot, according to Treasury officials and the Government architects office. As revised and edited by the President, the inscriptions were cut into the stone.

Following are the inscriptions, as originally written, and as changed by President Wilson:

INSCRIPTION FOR THE EAST PAVILION.

As Dr. Eliot Wrote It.	As Mr. Wilson Revised It.
Carrier of news and knowledge.	Carrier of news and knowledge.
Instrument of trade and commerce.	Instrument of trade and industry.
Promoter of mutual acquaintance.	Promoter of mutual acquaintance.
Among men and nations and hence.	Of peace and good will.
Of peace and good will.	Among men and nations.

INSCRIPTION FOR THE WEST PAVILION.

As Dr. Eliot Wrote It.	As Mr. Wilson Revised It.
Carrier of love and sympathy.	Messenger of sympathy and love.
Messenger of friendship.	Servant of parted friends.
Consoler of the lonely.	Consoler of the lonely.
Bond of the scattered family.	Bond of the scattered family.
Enlarger of the public life.	Enlarger of the common life.

Rumors of a change in Dr. Eliot's wording of the inscription reached the public several days ago, but not until today was anything definite learned as to the nature and extent of the changes made by the President or his reasons for making the changes.

Dr. Eliot was engaged by D. H. Burnham & Co., architects of the Postoffice Building to prepare suitable inscriptions, and this was done several years ago when the plans were drafted. Within the past year, while the building was nearing completion, the attention of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo was called to the matter of the inscriptions, and, according to the supervising architect, McAdoo consulted with the President about them.

It is now learned that President Wilson personally revised and changed the inscriptions about six months ago without the knowledge of their author.

The Postoffice officials, who will soon occupy the building, said they knew nothing of the changes. Treasury officials say, however, the changes were made in the interest of improvement.

MAN ON CITY PAYROLL A FEDERAL EMPLOYE

Auditor Withholds Approval Until City Counselor Rules Janitor Can Be Paid Legally.

The city payroll for March was held up when it was discovered that Walter Lowe, a negro janitor at the City Hall was also a postal clerk in the Government service, but after President Kinsey of the Board of Public Improvements assured Auditor Sheehan that he did not care where Lowe worked when he was off duty at the City Hall and City Counselor Baird ruled it was legal, the payroll was approved.

Baird ruled that Lowe could hold as many jobs as he chose as long as he gave satisfaction at the City Hall. There is a charter clause against any city official holding an office with the State or Federal government, but Lowe was ruled out of the "officer" class by Baird.

Lowe gets $55 a month from the City and $800 a year from the Postal Department.

The payroll of the City Plan Commission, twice threatened by Sheehan with being tied up because it contains two engineers at $500 a month and one at $25 a day who are not mentioned in the code, was approved this month by Sheehan after a conference with Comptroller Player.

The police had been informed that, after the closing of the segregated district, many of the women moved to various parts of the city and opened resorts under the guise of manicure and massage parlors. Complaints were made by neighbors against the Folsom avenue house.

600 WOMEN'S LETTERS FOUND IN MAN'S ROOM

Forty Photographs Also in Possession of Man Who Advertised for Housekeeper.

More than 600 letters from women, and 40 photographs of women, were found yesterday by the police in a room occupied at the Antlers Hotel, Eighteenth and Olive streets, by Robert H. Grimes, drug buyer for a downtown firm. He was arrested Friday on a charge of inserting a false advertisement.

Grimes advertised in a morning newspaper for an "unincumbered young woman to be the housekeeper for a wealthy bachelor in his beautiful home," where ther would be no servant's work to do. He said this was his method of becoming socially acquainted with young women, and intimated that if he found the right girl he intended to propose marriage to her. Memoranda found in the room showed he had carried on similar advertising campaigns in Hugo, Ok., Dallas and San Antonio.

The police expect to bring him to trial under a city ordinance prohibiting the insertion of false advertisements.

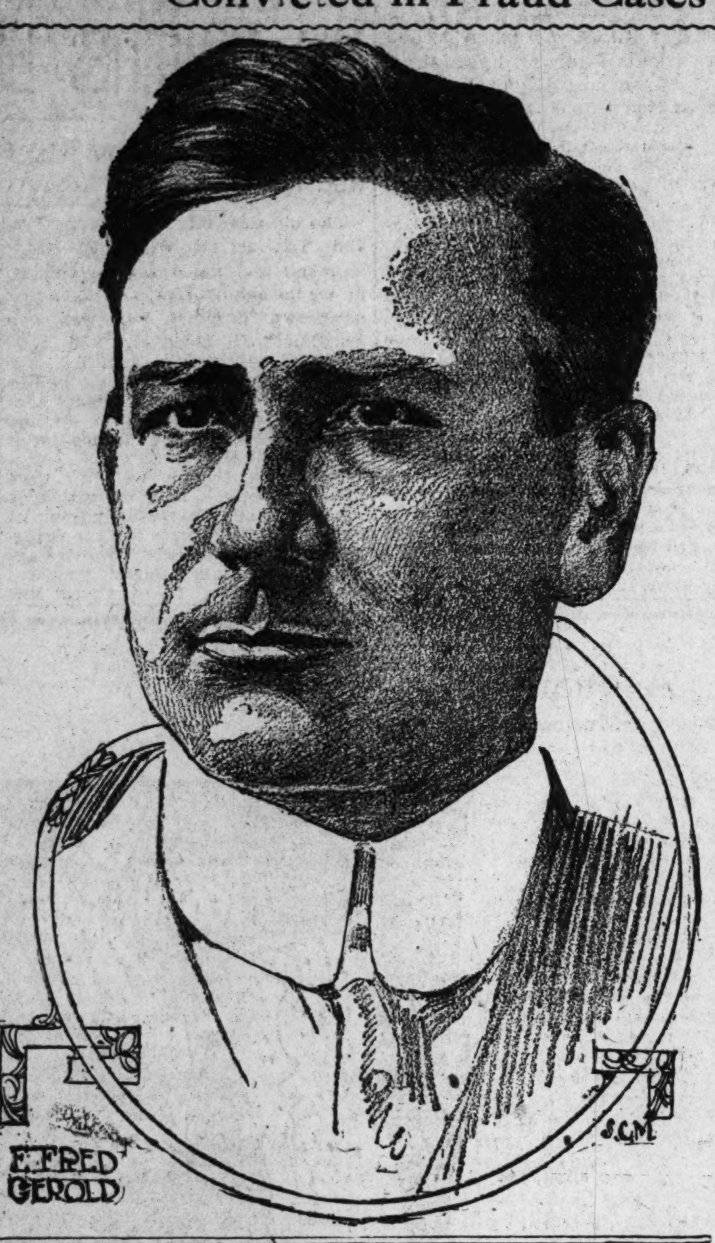
GEROLD GUILTY, OTHERS REPORTED READY TO CONFESS

Former East Side Treasurer Is Convicted of Withholding Funds; Prosecutor Informed of 29 Others Under Indictment Will Seek Clemency.

TRIALS OF OTHERS WILL BE PUSHED

Jury Is Out 18 Hours Reaching Verdict; Defendant Is Unmoved When Decision Is Announced; Appeal to Be Taken.

Former East Side Treasurer Convicted in Fraud Cases



E. Fred Gerold, former City Treasurer of East St. Louis, was found guilty in the East St. Louis City Court yesterday of witholding city funds. The penalty is an indeterminate sentence of from one to ten years in the penitentiary. The trial lasted three weeks.

The jury argued from 4 p. m. Friday to 10 a. m. yesterday, without sleep, before reaching an agreement on Gerold's guilt. The greater part of the time was occupied by 11 of the jurors in winning over one who wanted to acquit Gerold. On the first ballot the vote was 9 to 3 for conviction, on the second 10 to 2 and on the third 11 to 1. It stood that way until the ninth ballot.

Gerold is the first of the indicted city officials convicted as a result of an exhaustive investigation by the Post-Dispatch, extending over several months, into municipal conditions in East St. Louis. Evidence gathered by the Post-Dispatch was placed in the hands of State's Attorney Charles Webb, who acted with such vigor that 100 indictments were returned against 30 men, most of them city officials during the administration of Mayor Lambert.

Other Indictments Pending.

A number of indictments charging Gerold with conspiracy to defraud the city, with embezzlement and with unlawfully engaging in contracts with the city are still pending. He is under bonds aggregating $67,000. State's Attorney Webb says he will be tried under all the other indictments.

Gerold's attorney, D. J. Sullivan, announced, following the reading of the verdict, that he would file a motion for a new trial. He has 10 days in which to do this. If this motion is denied an appeal will be taken to the Illinois Supreme Court.

Taking an appeal does not have the effect of suspending sentence unless the Supreme Court issues a supercedeas, and this is rarely done. If not Gerold would be sent to the penitentiary if a new trial were denied him.

None of the other cases against Gerold or against other of the indicted men have been set for trial. State's Attorney Webb will within two weeks prepare bills of particulars in the various cases and the trial dates will then be set.

Information has been received by the State's Attorney that some of the indicted men are anxious to plead guilty and turn State's evidence in the hope of having their punishment lightened. He says he will consider any offer of the kind that may be made. He is satisfied that with the evidence in hand he can obtain convictions in the remaining cases, but will be willing to receive additional evidence. He says he will consider each of such offers on its own merits and recommend such leniency as he can, according to the value of the evidence offered.

It is expected that the trial of William Rodenberger, former City Comptroller, charged with embezzlement of city records, will be set for an early date.

Two Under Contempt Charge.

Ben Gerold, a brother of Fred Gerold, and Raymond Le Compete, stepson of Ben Gerold, will be arraigned Thursday by Judge Pope on the charge of contempt of court in giving money to Henry Burton, a witness against Fred Gerold, to leave East St. Louis and stay away until the trial was over. The two men are also under bond to appear in Justice Boyn's court and answer to the charge of causing a witness to abscond.

The concluding argument in the Gerold case for the State was made by Thomas M. Webb, brother of State's Attorney Webb. The instructions of Judge Pope were lengthy, requiring a half hour in the reading, and were looked upon by Gerold's friends as giving the accused the benefit of every doubt.

Interest in the outcome was so great that many stayed around the city hall the greater part of the night. Judge Pope had left instructions that he was to be called if a verdict was reached, no matter how late it might be. The jurymen argued all night, and after being taken to breakfast at 6:15 a. m., the 11 resumed their efforts to convince the twelfth that Gerold should be convicted. He finally gave in and at 9:55 the jury filed into court.

State's Attorney Webb had not arrived from his home at Belleville, but he was represented by his brother, Elmer Webb.

Gerold was accompanied by Attorney Sullivan. He heard the verdict without comment or exhibiting emotion. Mrs. Gerold, who had been a daily visitor in court, was not present.

After the verdict had been read Judge Pope thanked the jurors for their patience and the painstaking attention they had given to the evidence and discharged them. Their compensation was $60 each and mileage. They were: Fred Kissel, Joseph Gark, Max Adler, August Gerghahn, Henry Kuehmer, Charles J. Kurtzmann, John Thompson, John Muskopf, John Ridemich, Henry Schrader, John Hotz and George W. Sander.

The indictment against Gerold charged him with withholding $50,000 of city funds. During the trial he turned over to City Treasurer Frank Keating $20,461.45. After this and other deductions had been made the prosecution contended that the evidence showed he was still withholding $22,931.45. The verdict did not fix the amount, but merely set forth that Gerold had withheld more than $100.

The testimony showed Gerold took credit for the payment of bonds and interest coupons on public improvements that had been paid by his predecessor, Frank Holten, and credited himself with $1000 more than was paid out on a judgment against the city and with $800 more than was paid out by him for the expenses of a junket of officials to Buffalo.

His defense was that some of the excess and duplicate credits were taken by mistake and others because he or his clerks had redeemed unknowingly interest coupons which had been redeemed by his predecessor.

Several Items Made Good.

Some of the items in which mistakes were claimed were made good by Gerold during the trial. No attempt, however, was made by the defense to prove that the duplicate credits taken by him represented money actually paid out by him in the redemption of interest coupons. His failure to produce checks and check stubs showing such payment was considered by the State to be against him.

When Gerold went out of office his books showed a cash balance of $137,471.27. He turned over to his successor $114,224.62 in the Lynch avenue improvement fund. In the remainder, $23,246.65, was included $6360.20 in assignment warrants which Gerold said represented money he had paid out and for which he wanted to be credited as with cash. Frank Keating, the present Treasurer, declined to accept the warrants as cash and also declined to accept the cash unless it was apportioned to the special funds.

During the trial it was shown and admitted by Gerold that he had improperly taken credit for $3575 which he had not paid out, which increased by that amount the cash for which he was accountable. Last week he turned over to the city $20,461.45, in which was included this $3575.

Prosecutor Praises Post-Dispatch For Assistance Given.

STATE'S ATTORNEY WEBB, after the jury brought in its verdict, said:

"Gerold is not the only guilty man. There are others equally guilty, and the prosecutions will continue until all the guilty men are brought to justice.

"For a long time it was believed impossible to convict dishonest officials in East St. Louis. The verdict shows this is no longer true. The law has been vindicated. The verdict is a victory of the people over graft.

"No greater public service could be performed by a newspaper than has been rendered by the Post-Dispatch in the investigation of East St. Louis corruption. The people of St. Clair County and the State's Attorney's office are indebted to the Post-Dispatch for assistance lent by it in the investigation. Whenever the State's Attorney's office called upon the Post-Dispatch for assistance it was given."

JURY CENSURES M'KELVEY OVER STORE COLLAPSE

Coroner's Verdict, However, Fails to Fix Blame and Calls It Accident.

A Coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of accident in the case of the seven deaths caused by the collapse of the St. Louis Seed Co. store, 411 Washington avenue, on which the west wall of the burned Missouri Athletic Club building fell, March 17.

The inquest continued 10 days and the jury considered its verdict two hours and 40 minutes. It accompanied its verdict with this written statement:

"While we have reached a verdict of accident in this case, we feel the Building Commissioner and his assistants should be censured for their poor judgment in permitting anyone to enter the St. Louis Seed Co. building after the Missouri Athletic Club fire and until all danger from the collapse of walls had elapsed.

"Furthermore, we believe that explicit laws should be passed as to whose duty it should be to remove bodies after any calamity. We also believe that explicit rules or laws should state whose duty it is to see that proper regulations as to the surroundings of a fire or other wreck be maintained.

"While it may not have been the Building Commissioner's duty to clear out these ruins, nevertheless, after assuming this duty, and that voluntarily, he assumed the concomitant responsibility."

The verdict was signed by Coroner Padberg and the members of the jury, Max Tamm, Walter M. Lowry, James R. Frazier, Edward J. Lawler, William A. Giraldin and Charles H. Buettner.

McKelvey Admits He Gave Order.

The seven killed in the seed store collapse were Charles L. Gryder, Walter Spaulding, William Davidson, George Nickloff, Frank Weber and an unidentified white man supposed to be O. Ball, who were killed in the collapse, and Thomas Burke, who was rescued alive after being buried 39 hours, but who died at the city hospital a few hours later.

The Coroner recalled McKelvey near the end of the inquest to ask him whether he had given an order at 7 p. m. on the day of the accident that the men should stop work in the ruins. He said that, owing to exhaustion from his work on the M. A. C. ruins, he was excited and hardly responsible at the time, but that he supposed he had given such an order. Firemen testified Friday that he had done so. Several bodies, at that time, were in the seed store ruins and Burke was alive.

Diamond Presented to McKelvey at Testimonial Banquet.

One hundred and fifty friends of Building Commissioner McKelvey met in McTague's cafe last night at a testimonial to him for his work at the Missouri Athletic Club and St. Louis Seed Co. disasters. Following speechmaking a diamond stud was presented to McKelvey.

The banqueters, many city officers, contractors and representatives of amusement enterprises, were called upon for talks by Charles W. Bates, former City Counselor, who acted as toastmaster. President Samuel B. McPheeters of the Police Board was the principal speaker.

McPheeters likened McKelvey to Capt. Lynch, who lost his life in the Day Rubber Co. fire. He said, following the M. A. C. fire, if anyone wished to see McKelvey he was found at "the end of the line." He declared he never witnessed more splendid heroism than McKelvey displayed; that for weeks he was constantly on the scene of the disasters, listening patiently to suggestions, and that everything he did was done after the opinion of all city officers upon the scene was obtained, even to the opening of the St. Louis Seed Co.'s store.

McKelvey, in response, said he did not believe he deserved all this praise. He said he had worked under a great mental strain, however, as he had heard many unjust criticisms.

PEERS PLANNING TO OUST A LORD IN ULSTER ROW

Unionist Members to Make Demand Tomorrow and Spirited Debate Is Expected.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, March 28.—Further big debates on the army crisis are planned for both houses of Parliament on Monday. The Unionist Peers intend to make a tremendous effort to force Lord Morley's resignation from the Cabinet on the ground that, by his own admission, he is jointly responsible with War Secretary Seely for the two unauthorized paragraphs added to the Cabinet document defining the position of the Government toward the disaffected officers in Ireland.

Morley's part in that transaction has been most mysterious, for it is incredible that a man of his experience and acumen could be a consenting party to Seely's folly. The Post-Dispatch correspondent learns that in assisting to draft the paragraphs, Morley had no idea that they were to be added to the Cabinet decision, but thought they were intended for another purpose.

Sir Edward Carson, said today:

"It is a ridiculous farce. The Government are simply making fools of themselves. It means the same thing over again, as the guarantee given to Gen. Gough."

Carson said he was delighted with the equipment and organization of the Ulster Volunteers and the admirable restraint they are showing.

Carson Calls It a Farce.

Whether or not Gen. Gough will agree to surrender the assurance given him by Field Marshal French is regarded as entirely a matter between those two men. As between Gough and the Government, the assurance now has no value, having been repudiated publicly by Prime Minister Asquith in the House of Commons and overridden by yesterday's new army order.

But French feels himself bound to Gough by the written word of one soldier to another, and unless Gough releases him, French considers there is nothing for him to do but to persist in resigning.

Gen. Seely's disappearance from the War Office and possibly from the Government altogether, seems to be becoming inevitable. For French to go and Seely, whose fatuousness caused the whole trouble, to remain, would evoke an outburst of indignation on all sides, and the Government journals today are practically unanimous that under any circumstances it would be better that Seely should go. Even the Westminster Gazette, the Government organ, most closely in touch with Mr. Asquith, now shares this view.

If Seely retires, his successor probably will be Lewis V. Harcourt (whose wife was Miss Mary Burn of New York, niece of the late J. Pierpont Morgan), known to be strongly ambitious for the post. Burns always has taken profound interest in army matters, and frequently spends his holidays camping with soldiers at maneuvers.

The militant suffragettes of London have prepared for a demonstration tomorrow.

Party leaders are conferring in London and urgent summonses have been sent to all members to attend. If the outcome of the crisis is to be a general election in the near future, the radical wing of the Liberal party will form a close alliance with the Labor party, the coalition crystalizing its platform into the battle cry "The aristocrats against the people."

Panama Debate Forgotten.

The King's actions and attitude during the crisis are gradually becoming known. The attacks of the radicals and laborites on the King for his alleged interference in politics have subsided.

Gough Wires "I Will Not Be a Political Pawn."

DUBLIN, March 28.—Brigadier-General Gough, who brought back from London written assurance from the War Office that officers in his brigade, stationed at the Camp in the Curragh of Kildare, will not be ordered to serve against the Ulster Covenanters, telegraphed from his headquarters this morning to a relative in England this message: "I will not be a pawn in any political game." The officers at the Curragh were silent to questions asked by reporters, and seemed generally subdued.

T. P. O'Connor will have a special article in Sunday's issue of the Freeman's Journal pointing out that Gen. Gough's letter, which produced the crisis, was dictated to him by London Tory lawyers. O'Connor says that on Friday it was known that either Seely or Lloyd-George would resign; that it is known that secret information is being conveyed to the Unionist party by Government officials; that the movements of the troops at the last week-end was tipped off to the Unionist leaders, and hence originated the Unionist story of a Government plot to crush Ulster.

ADDISON CLOAK CO. OPENS HERE

Although the Addison Cloak Co. has been opened less than three weeks, in their new and attractive quarters at the northeast corner of Washington avenue and Sixth street, it has already become one of the popular shops of this city.

J. I. Olian is president of the company. He is a former St. Louisan and again claims this city as his permanent home. President Olian says their second-floor location and low rent will mean a saving to their customers.

The Addison Cloak Co. controls similar shops in Cleveland and New York.

The new quarters of the Addison Cloak Co. are attractive in every particular, having plenty of natural light and floor space. Six elevators are used to handle the customers without crowding or inconvenience. They employ a corps of experienced sales people in order to handle their patrons promptly. St. Louisans are invited to call and inspect their line of new spring suits and millinery.

DENMARK REFUSES TO APPROVE NEW TREATY WITH U. S.

Its Foreign Office Wants to Secure Better Terms Regarding Arbitration.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, March 28.—Tomorrow there will be no treaty between the United States and Denmark, as the Danish Senate today failed to ratify the new obligatory arbitration treaty and the Danish Government has refused the proffered renewal of the old one made by the United States.

The Danish Foreign Office today said the Government was ready to start negotiations for a special treaty for the adjustment of disputes between the two countries, as suggested by the State Department at Washington to the Danish legation, but doesn't want to continue the present treaty, as it desires to secure better terms regarding arbitration.

State Department Surprised by Action of Danish Senate.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—The refusal of the Danish Senate to approve the Danish-American arbitration treaty greatly surprised State Department officials, although no comment was forthcoming in advance of formal notices of the action.

That the treaty might be rejected by the United States Senate because of the consistent attitude of the Senate against all general arbitration treaties, or those which did not expressly except from compulsory arbitration questions involving the national honor, matters of State legislation and affecting the Monroe Doctrine, had been deemed a possibility.

Secretary Bryan recently addressed the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations in support of this treaty. While some objections developed among the committee members, it was said that this could be overcome by slight amendment and that the Senate could be induced to accept the principle of unlimited arbitration, which it had formerly rejected.

Made at Denmark's Request.

The action of the Danish Senate was a genuine surprise for the reason, that, as stated on the authority of Secretary Bryan himself, this treaty was made at the request of the Government of Denmark, which made a similar treaty with Italy.

Secretary Bryan realized that, while it might not be timely to enter into such treaty relations with the great Powers, there was every reason why the United States should test unlimited arbitration with all of the smaller nations. He felt that this gave an easy approach to the ultimate settlement of all international disputes by arbitration.

MAJORITY OF 75 FOR TOLLS REPEAL EXPECTED IN HOUSE

President's Floor Lieutenants' Estimates Cause Belief That 30 Republicans Who Voted Against Limiting Debate Will Vote in Favor of Repeal Bill.

PLANS REPORTED FOR DELAY IN THE SENATE

Clark Is Expected to Attack Bryan, But His Bolt Is Thought to Have Acted as a Boomerang — Women Fight to Hear House Debate.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—At tonight's close of the second day's fight for a repeal of the exemption clause in favor of American coastwise shipping in the Panama Canal law, administration leaders in the House were satisfied that they would run up a majority of between 75 and 100 on the final vote next Wednesday.

Every surface indication tended to show that the eleventh-hour bolt of Speaker Clark has acted as a boomerang. He will take the floor in a final attempt to defeat the repeal on Tuesday. Experienced politicians in the House were almost unanimous in the opinion that anything Speaker Clark may say when he takes the floor against repeal has been discounted by the statement he issued Thursday night.

Clark is expected to attack Secretary Bryan. This will not be unwelcome to those supporters of the administration who have realized since the Baltimore convention that the Speaker would never become reconciled to his defeat. These men insist it is better for the administration, from a political standpoint, to have the opposition fighting openly than to have it operating covertly within the party line-up.

Estimates of Strength.

Careful estimates made by President Wilson's floor lieutenants today established the belief that approximately thirty of the Republicans who voted against the rule limiting debate will vote in favor of the repeal. At least ten Democrats who opposed the rule are expected to line up with the administration on the final vote, and one or two Progressives will do the same. If a vote is taken on Wednesday it will be necessary to get the unanimous consent of the House to displace the calendar on that day.

Reports that an organized effort would be made in the Senate to delay passage of the bill repealing the Panama Canal tolls exemption aroused administration leaders today, while general debate of the issue in the House continued to hold the public interest.

The intimation that a prolonged filibuster in the Senate had been determined upon, now that the first decisive battle had been won by the President, was reported to several senatorial supporters of the administration, and it was suggested that Senator O'Gorman, chairman of the Committee of Inter-Oceanic Canals, already was delaying consideration of the measure by his committee.

Senator O'Gorman was asked when he expected to call his committee together to consider the matter, which already is before it, Senator Owen having introduced a repeal bill similar to the Sims House measure two weeks ago. During the day Senator Crawford, a member of the committee, had returned the chairman having stated previously that he would not take the issue up in committees until the South Dakota Senator reached Washington.

When Committee Will Meet.

"There will be no meeting of the committee," Senator O'Gorman asserted, "until after the bill comes over from the House, which probably will not be until next Wednesday. Senators Simmons and Shields are absent now and it would be unfair to act until every member has been given an opportunity to be heard."

How long the issue would be held in committee Senator O'Gorman would not predict, declaring that there were other important matters of legislation to keep the Senate busy, such as anti-trust and appropriation bills.

"I heard several Democratic Senators, who probably will vote to repeal the toll exemption, declare today that they did not look for a vote in the Senate within six weeks," the New York Senator added.

Delay Attempts "Foolish."

Senator Owen, a Democratic member of the Canals Committee, who is leading the preliminary fight for repeal, asserted tonight that any attempt to delay the bill in the Senate unduly would be foolish. He intimated that deliberate delay in the committee might result in forcing the issue before the Senate on a motion to discharge the Canals Committee from consideration of the subject.

"Any disposition to pettifog in this matter," said Senator Owen, "obviously would be a silly thing. As far as Senator O'Gorman is concerned, I think he is disposed to delay now. I personally expressed to him yesterday a wish that the committee might be called to consider the repeal bill which I introduced two weeks ago. I can say this much, that delay will serve no useful purpose.

"Senator O'Gorman seems to take the view that this controversy is a party asset instead of a party liability. I think the result of the vote in the House yesterday will have some effect, inasmuch as it shows where the big majority of the party stands."

Representative Knowland, who is leading the fight on the Republican side against the repeal, severely criticized President Wilson for advocating the repeal.

There was a brief skirmish in the Senate on the Panama tolls question today, but the fireworks expected from Senator Lewis of Illinois, and Gallinger of New Hampshire, did not come. Senator Lewis announced that he and Gallinger had agreed to let their resolutions go over until Monday.

Reed Introduces a Bill.

Senator Reed of Missouri, injected a new phase into the situation late today by introducing a bill to repeal the toll exemption on American ships, but providing further that foreign vessels might enter into coastwise trade. He sought, he said, "to break up any existing American monopoly in coastwise shipping."

The bill provides that foreign owned vessels may enter the ports of the United States to the same extent and under the restrictions imposed upon vessels of the United States, the President to prescribe and from time to time to change the tolls charged for the use of the Panama Canal by coastwise traffic. It is stipulated, however, that charges should as nearly as possible equal the expense of transporting such vessels through the canal without seeking to cover any interest upon the investment of the United States in constructing the canal.

Senator Lewis also introduced a bill to give the President authority to suspend tolls "whenever consistent with the interests of the United States."

Debate on the repeal bill drew crowds to the House galleries today, although the climax there was reached yesterday, when Speaker Clark, Majority Leader Underwood and other Democratic chieftains met defeat in an effort to prevent limitation of debate on the issue. Hours before the gallery doors were opened today the corridors were crowded with spectators and there were lively scrambles for seats later, men and women participating.

Two women engaged in a physical encounter for possession of a seat just before the House convened. It was a stirring battle, the hats and coiffures of the feminine contestants being rudely disturbed before door keepers could part them.

The debate today was spirited on both sides, party lines being disregarded. Representative Fitzgerald, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, aligned himself with the anti-repeal forces, and was loudly cheered when he advanced to the well of the House to attack the repeal. Fitzgerald asserted he had no sympathy for those who condemned the President for his views, but declared his firm conviction that toll exemption for American ships was essential "to provide effective competition with the transcontinental railroads; to increase the efficiency of our naval forces, and, to prevent the control of an isthmian canal by a European power."

Verbal Warfare Rages.

The verbal warfare raged throughout the day, holding the interest of the House membership as no debate has for many a day. In committee rooms, however, conferences of leaders were in progress, where yesterday's divisions in the Democratic ranks were discussed.

Representative Chandler (Progressive) of New York, who opposed the repeal, declared that the people in the 1912 election had endorsed the free tolls plank of the various platforms and that "for one man, no matter how high his station, or how great his gifts, to now reverse that endorsement without an appeal to the people, is not the way of our fathers who founded this republic, but the way of a monarchy, a benevolent despotism.

"I do not know what has frightened the President, but I do know that, if Andrew Jackson had received from across the seas a British threat instead of sending to this House a cowardly message acceding to it, he would have demanded a great appropriation to increase the standing army and buy 100 battleships."

"Experimental Diplomacy."

Representative Hawley of Oregon, and Representative Curry of California, opposed repeal. Curry attacked the administration's foreign policy.

"The policies and achievements of the President certainly cannot be viewed with satisfaction and commendation by his political adherents," he said. "His experimental diplomacy has proven to be a failure.

"The President is an exceedingly erudate, well meaning, polished and kindly gentleman, more highly educated and possessing more knowledge, if not more wisdom, than any of his predecessors. During the short time he has occupied the presidential chair, it has been demonstrated conclusively that it is one of the most easy of intellectual feats for a scholastic idealist to dream dreams, evolve theories and in imagination govern the world from a philosopher's chair, but that when it comes to dealing with flesh and blood, human nature, economic conditions and national and international problems as they are, it is an entirely different proposition."

Republican for Repeal.

Representative Stevens of Minnesota, a Republican member of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, told the House that the exemption clause was economically faulty, that it contravened the Hay-Pauncefote treaty and that it would be met by the British Government, if not repealed, by reprisals that would greatly injure the commerce of the Northwestern states.

He cited our contention with Great Britain that the language of the Welland Canal treaty, "to the citizens of the United States on terms of equality with the inhabitants of Canada," included necessarily the coastwise commerce of Canada, as well as all subjects, ports, routes and traffic of both nations.

"Last year the little Welland Canal of 14 feet depth transported 978,440 tons of American tonnage. In 1914 the American tonnage should exceed 1,000,000 tons. The assumption is that next year the Panama Canal will carry 1,000,000 tons of our coastwise trade. The Canadian Soo Canal last year carried 5,000,000 tons of Canadian freight and more than 37,000,000 tons of American freight.

"In addition, there have been completed by Canada surveys for three routes from the Great Lakes to the St. Lawrence for a 30-foot canal. One of these will be completed in the not-far-distant future. If we insist upon a policy of discrimination in our favor in the use of the Panama Canal, Canada has the same right to insist upon this policy of discrimination in its favor in use of any of its ship canals. The commerce on the northern border will be far larger and more important than our commerce through the Panama Canal. We are inviting exactly that sort of retaliation and will be a spectacle to the world and ourselves when it shall come."

He denied the argument that a repeal of the treaty would result in taking from this country control of the canal for purposes of war.

Ball Tells Clark Opposition to Wilson Means Retirement.

MONTGOMERY CITY, Mo., March 28.—Claude R. Ball, candidate for Congress in this district two years ago with the understanding that if Speaker Clark was not nominated for President he would withdraw, sent a message to Clark this evening in which he told the Speaker that if he persisted in his opposition to the President it would mean his early retirement from Congress.

"If that is what you want," said Ball to Clark, "go ahead; if not, get right."

The message also added that the Democrats in this district were almost a unit for the repeal. It is understood that Ball will not be a candidate himself this year and at present Clark has no opposition.

Pantzos was taken to the city hospital in a serious condition.

Flint, sales manager; Moody Damron, advertising manager; and salesmen E. M. Flint, C. G. Chandler, J. F. Hellrung Jr., Fred Reinhardt, H. R. Sinz, A. J. Arnson, F. H. Koch, R. S. Krabbe, George M. TRY IT! SAYS SAGE TEA DARKENS AND BEAUTIFIES LIFELESS, GRAY HAIR

Sage Tea when Mixed with Sulphur makes the Hair Soft and Luxuriant and Removes Dandruff from the Scalp.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is coming in vogue again, says a well-known downtown druggist. It was our grandmother's treatment and hundreds of women and men too, are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is the most popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply dampen a soft brush or sponge with "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Do this tonight, and by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application it is restored to its natural color.

What delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair they say it produces that soft luster and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. Here, you gray-haired folks, get busy; look years younger. —ADV.

"About fifteen or twenty years ago I was suffering with pains in my back. I could scarcely get about. I got some Peruna and was relieved of the pains ever since.

"I have used Peruna occasionally since and recommended it to others. When I first knew of Peruna the druggists here did not keep it. Now they all keep it.

"I have lived in this place eighty-four years. I am a farmer. Was born where I live. I have three living children. Should you publish this in the papers it will reach many of my old friends. You can use my picture as you think proper." Mr. G. W. Roberts, R. F. D. 1, Box 36, Pickens, Miss.

Eighty-two Years Old.

"I had a severe attack of grip. I suffered terribly while it lasted. After my attack I sent for Peruna. My wife said I must have a doctor, but I insisted upon taking the Peruna, and made a quick and perfect recovery." Mr. J. R. Prince, R. R. 1, Tuckahoe, N. Y.

Seventy-eight Years Old.

"Peruna has been a blessing to me. I had catarrh so badly I had lost the sense of smell and taste. My stomach was also bad. I bought a half dozen bottles of Peruna and will say that I am completely cured of my catarrh and the stomach trouble." Mrs. H. A. Weaver, Somerset, Ohio.

Seventy-eight Years Old.

"I had catarrh of the head. Commenced taking Peruna and gained eleven pounds. It is a great medicine. A fair trial would convince anyone of its efficacy." Mr. F. M. Joffrion, Bogalusa, Louisiana.

Those who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets. —ADV.

On Pianola rolls is a red ink line—the Metrostyle line. This line is to be followed by a pointer attached to the tempo lever of the Pianola. It thus shows you precisely how to reproduce with exact fidelity the finest tempo phrasing of Paderewski, Chaminade, Greeg or any of the world's greatest masters of music.

Steinway Pianola

The world's greatest Piano and the one supreme player-action! Not only may one now possess the Steinway alone, but with it you can purchase outright the priceless ability to play—and play artistically!

Significant is the combination of the Steinway Piano and the Pianola. The Pianola is the one player-action deemed worthy by Messrs. Steinway & Sons to be incorporated within the case of their wonderful instrument. The Steinway Piano is the only piano not manufactured by the Aeolian Company which is privileged to carry the genuine Pianola action within its case.

Stroud Pianola

This latest creation of the great Aeolian organization of player and piano experts embodies the genuine Pianola player-action and a piano of surpassing beauty of tone.

Wherever exhibited, this instrument has won the hearty approval of musicians whose endorsement is proof positive of superior excellence.

The Stroud Pianola is an instrument of which every home might well be proud. These exclusive features which have set the Pianola upon so high a plane are all of them combined in this new and splendid instrument.

Do not confuse the name Pianola with the term player-piano. The genuine Pianola is widely imitated—but do not be misled. The genuine Pianola cannot be obtained in St. Louis elsewhere than at Aeolian Hall. Why consider imitations when you can obtain at Aeolian Hall a genuine Pianola Piano for as little as $550. Don't Let Your Truss

Make Operation Necessary

Operation for rupture would hardly ever be heard of if it weren't for the mischief done by elastic and spring trusses.

Mighty few people ever have to be operated on when first ruptured.

But wearing makeshift trusses year after year is sooner or later almost sure to make work for the surgeon.

You know that from your own experience—you know you're worse now than a year ago—probably getting worse all the time.

If you keep on that way, how long will it be before you'll have to undergo a dangerous and expensive operation?

Aren't you willing to let us prove—by a 60-day demonstration—how you can save yourself from all that?

Especially when you can make this sixty-day test without having to risk a penny?

60 Days' Trial To Prove How Good It Is

Here is something—a guaranteed rupture holder—which has saved thousands of people from ever having to be operated on.

It has so thoroughly proved its merits that we are willing to send it on 60-days' trial.

We'll make it especially for your case—make it to your measure—and practically lend it to you just for a test.

If it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out or from bothering you in any way, then you can send it back and it won't cost you a single penny.

Don't Send Any Money

Simply write for our free book—that will tell you everything you want to know.

It shows how our guaranteed rupture holder is made on an absolutely new principle. How it instantly and automatically protects you against every strain so your rupture can't possibly be forced out. And how in addition it provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture.

The book tells how our guaranteed rupture holder—the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss—is so beneficial that physicians in all parts of America now recommend it instead of advising operation. How it has completely cured thousands of people whose cases seemed almost hopeless. How it does away with the curse of belts, leg-straps and springs. How it is perspiration-proof and waterproof and will hold in the bath. How you can try it sixty days without having to risk a penny, and how little it costs if you keep it.

This Free Book Is Full of Facts Never Before Put in Print

This book sums up all we have learned about rupture during forty years of experience.

Shows just why elastic and spring trusses are the ruptured man's worst enemies.

Exposes the humbug "appliances," "methods," "plasters," etc.

Explains why operation is nearly always a needless gamble with death—and why, even if you manage to live through it, you may have to keep on wearing a truss.

It shows why sixty-days' trial is the only safe way to buy anything for rupture and how the Cluthe Truss is the only thing you can get on such a long trial because the only thing good enough to stand such a test.

Don't fail to get this book—don't put it off—the minute it takes you to write for it may free you from rupture troubles for the rest of your life.

MELVILLE CLARK APOLLO Player Piano

The Hardest Test of All—

It is hard to get a man to admit that another article is superior to the one he owns.

That's natural. Pride of possession is only human nature.

Bring with you when you come in to hear the Apollo Player Piano, one of your friends who owns a similar instrument of another make.

Then—when the Apollo accents the melody—ask your friend, "Will your instrument do this?"

And—when the Apollo omits the melody altogether, playing only the accompaniment—ask him, "Will your player piano do that?"

When the Apollo plays the accompaniment in any desired key, find out if your friend's instrument will accomplish that result.

The Metronome Motor which rewinds the rolls without touching the pedals won't be found in your friend's instrument, if it isn't an Apollo.

Ask your friend what he would think of a music teacher who stated that down on the keys was the wrong way to play the piano.

You and everyone else know that down on the keys is the right way. Suppose you were selling the Apollo and knew as we know that no other player piano in the world is permitted to play by touching down on the keys. What would you say about it?

Now bring along that friend of yours who owns a player piano. Both of you listen to Apollo music. We'll take our chances on the result.

INVESTIGATION IN UNION ELECTRIC TAX EXEMPTION

Company for 11 Years Has Not Paid on Its Franchise Valuation.

PLAYER INVESTIGATES

Comptroller Wants to Know Whether He Can Collect the Back Dues.

The Union Electric Light and Power Co., for 11 years past, has been exempted by the city authorities from paying city taxes on a personal property assessment listed as franchise which at present amounts to $5,000,000. This exemption has been granted so far as city officials have been able to determine, for the reason that the company pays the city 5 per cent of its gross earnings under the Keyes ordinance. In that time, it is estimated, if the city had forced payment, a total of $601,840 personal property tax would have been paid.

Comptroller Player has informed City Assessor Schramm that, so far as he can learn, this exemption is not required or sanctioned by law. Schramm told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he would consult City Counselor Baird this week, to learn whether the city has the right to make the assessment, and whether it can make a claim for the back taxes, from 1903 to 1913, inclusive.

The City Board of Equalization is now in session, and the matter will probably be placed before the board in a few days. In the meantime, Schramm intends to make sure that there is no court decision exempting the corporation from paying these city taxes. He agrees with the Comptroller that no such exemption appears in the law.

The Union Electric Co. paid taxes last year on the following assessments: Real estate, $1,323,360; personal property itemized $983,460. A merchants' license was paid also to the License Collector, and under the Keyes ordinance the city received $147,478 as 5 per cent of the gross earnings of the company in 1913.

Payments to the City.

On its assessed property the Union paid taxes at the following rates: State of Missouri, 19 cents; St. Louis School Board, 60 cents, and city of St. Louis, $1.43, or a total of $2.22 on the $100.

The Union paid no taxes to the city on its assessed property, listed at $5,000,000 under the caption, "franchise." It paid the city rate of $1.43 on the $100 on its realty assessment and on $983,000 of personal property, itemized as money in bank, securities in the treasury, machinery, horses, wagons, office fixtures, etc. On the "franchise" assessment, the Union paid taxes of $39,500 to the State and School Board and at the city rate of $1.43 would have paid $71,500 to the city, according to Comptroller Player.

City hall records show that in the same period of time the Union company paid in $1,182,276, under its franchise agreement to give the city 5 per cent of its gross earnings for the privilege of using public streets for poles and conduits. Deducting the $601,840 of personal property taxes exempted under the practice established in 1903, the company's net payments to the city under the 5 per cent agreement was $580,436 in 10 years, or less than 2½ per cent of its gross earnings.

Ben Schnurmacher, chief counsel for Union Electric, told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that he did not know whether there was any legal authority for the tax exemptions enjoyed by the Union and that he did not know how the exemption first came to be allowed. "I have not given the matter the slightest consideration," said Schnurmacher, "because it has never been called to my attention."

Increase Is Proposed.

Herman Spoehrer, secretary and treasurer of the Union Electric Co., appeared yesterday before the Board of Equalization and was granted until April 8 to present evidence that the latest personal property return of the company should not be increased $700,000, as proposed by District Assessor John H. Bohle. The absence of A. C. Eeinstein, vice-president and general manager, was given as the reason for postponement.

Bohle's proposed increase of this year's return is based upon statements in the stockholders' report of 1913 of Union Electric officials, in which it is asserted that $1,174,460 was invested during the year in extensions and improvements, of which $130,000 was devoted to new equipment. Spoehrer returned for the company this year $756,827 of personal property aside from that listed as "franchise," while in 1913, the Board of Equalization found that the company had $983,460 of personalty and fixed this assessment.

In 1911 the St. Louis Public Service Commission closed an extensive investigation of Union Electric properties by reporting that it had $14,500,000 invested in the public service exclusive of that used solely for the United Railways Co. Virtually all of this earning value was based upon existing physical properties, subject to taxation as realty or personalty.

Comptroller Player, in writing to Assessor Schramm about the exemption, said: "It has been the custom of your department for many years past to exempt the quasi-public corporations paying 5 per cent of their gross earnings through the Comptroller's department, from the regular city taxes. Apparently there is no authority in law for this exemption. On the contrary, the revised statures of 1909, Section 11,551, 11,552, 11,608 and 11,609 would appear to require the assessment of these quaso-public corporations by the city of St. Louis for city taxes, just as the city assesses all other property.

"The practice appears to have grown up on the theory that because the companies referred to pay the franchise tax on their gross earnings as required by our city code, they should not be called upon to pay the customary city taxes.

"There may be some decisions of the courts—possibly of the Supreme Court of the State—that would exempt these corporations from city taxes. If that is the case, I am not aware of it, and would therefore request that before completing your assessment for taxes of 1914 you consult with the City Counselor and ascertain definitely if the quasi-public corporations have not been escaping their proportion of city taxes through a misunderstanding or misinterpretation of the law. It may be that under the provisions of section 11,609 back taxes may be levied against these companies that have escaped taxation for so many years."

River Commission Plans Trip.

The Mississippi River Commission will meet for its usual spring session on board the steamer Mississippi, at St. Louis, April 14, at 10 a. m. The commission will make an inspection trip from St. Louis to New Orleans and will give public hearings at St. Louis and at points along the route on matters connected with the improvement of the Mississippi River.

16-STORY HOTEL FOR TWELFTH AND OLIVE IS NEW PLAN

Financial Backers of Ritz-Carlton Hotel Co. Are Said to Have Completed Arrangements to Build Hostelry to Cost $1,500,000.

FEDERAL LEAGUE PARK AIDS CHESTNUT REALTY

New Department Store at Broadway and Franklin Is Proposed Which Will Be Innovation as Each Department Will Have Separate Owner.

Projects which mark the resumption of large realty and building operations in downtown St. Louis are coming to light. Large hotels and department store plans are the features of the movement in this section of the city.

Arrangements, it is understood, have been virtually completed whereby William White & Sons of New York will finance the erection at the northeast corner of Olive and Twelfth streets of a 16-story hotel building. Incidentally, White & Sons are the financial backers of the Ritz-Carleton Hotel Co., operates large hotels in New York and London.

Yesterday plans and specifications for this hotel structure were received by T. [illegible] A. McConnell, 513 International Life Building, the St. Louis representative of F. W. Dodge & Co. of New York, their instructions being to obtain bids on the cost of construction from subcontractors and material dealers. The concern, which has branches throughout the country, makes a specialty of furnishing advanced information on the cost of building.

Building Will Cost $1,500,000.

McConnell estimates that the project will entail, exclusive of the site, an investment of $1,500,000, which bespeaks the character of the proposed building.

The structure, according to the plans, will have a frontage on Olive street of 175 feet, and on Twelfth street of 126 feet, or a total of 301 feet. The corner part of the site, 100x126 feet, is owned by Daniel Catlin. A 20-foot north-south alley, together with 55 feet frontage on the east, makes up the rest of the proposed site.

The ordinance for the vacation of the alley for this purpose, which was passed last summer, having expired, will have to be renewed.

The site, presumably, will be taken under a 99-year lease, the basis of which has not been disclosed. Catlin's holding is appraised by experts at $750,000, although it cost him three or four months ago, only $600,000. The inside 55 feet are valued at about $5000 a foot, while the City of St. Louis, by virtue of the ordinance, donates the alley, representing $100,000, for the improvement.

The Mathews Real Estate Co., in conjunction with Charles H. Bailey, Catlin's represented, it is understood, is handling the St. Louis end of the project.

Originally there was projected a 10-story hotel structure for this corner, but at the time the money was not available for it.

The site is one of the most commanding in the business area for a hotel structure of this magnitude.

New Regent to Be Extended.

Presumably, to provide for the extension of the New Regent Hotel Building, at the northwest corner of Chestnut and Fourteenth streets, W. W. Culver has purchased 74x109 feet adjoining on the west, giving him a total frontage on Chestnut and Fourteenth streets of 171 feet 9 inches.

The sale was effected by Henry E. Bartling, an agent, with offices at 1011 Chestnut street, on behalf of Catherine Calvin. While the consideration was not made public, the holding was held at $35,000, or about $500 a front foot.

The old three-story stone-front residence occupying the purchase, will be razed at once, it is understood, to make room for the proposed hotel building.

The New Regent, which was launched only a year ago, and of which E. E. Campbell is the proprietor, has flourished.

Several substantial offers, it is said, have been made for ground on Chestnut street, just west of the aforementioned purchase, and owned by F. B. McDonald. Sanguine as to the future of the street, he steadfastly declines to surrender his holdings.

The traffic incident to the new Federal League ball park at Grand and Laclede avenue, will give new impetus to Chestnut street, which is now the leading automobile or vehicle center of the city, especially between Union Station and the business center.

As a business center, Chestnut street, between Eighteenth and Twelfth, promises to out-rank Pine street.

Department Store to Be Unique.

As a site for a department store, which will be an innovation in St. Louis Ben Altheimer, a Chestnut street agent, has obtained an option on the five-story building at the southwest corner of Broadway and Franklin avenue. It will be known as the Mutual Department Store Co., the proprietorship of each department being separate and distinct. The store, however, will be under the general supervision of the Mutual company, of which Altheimer will be president, and which will dictate the policy of the enterprise as a whole. The building, which is owned by the Knox estate, represented by Cornet & Zeibig, is to be taken under a 25-year lease at an annual rental of $18,000, while the subleasing of the space, it is estimated, will insure the Mutual company an annual aggregate rental of $75,000.

Contracts have been signed with 50 different concerns which will be represented in the Mutual Department Store.

As the store would re-awaken this section of the business center, the enterprise is of prime importance to its realty interests. Property owners on both Franklin avenue and Broadway are backing up the venture with liberal subscriptions.

BOKERN MANAGERS SAY HE WILL HEAD REALTY EXCHANGE

Backers Say Members Will Fall in Line for Their Champion on Election Day.

The fight for the presidency of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange is waxing warm.

E. A. Bokern and John S. Harris are the opposing candidates for the presidency. J. H. Gundlach, in whose favor Bokern had offered to withdraw, declining to enter the contest.

Bokern, whose petition was filed Thursday with Secretary John W. Dowling, is championed by the older members of the fraternity.

Harris Claims 80 Supporters.

Harris launched his campaign a month ago when he gave a luncheon at the American Hotel to 25 of his confreres, ostensibly to line them up for his spring auctions. For more than a week his friends have been soliciting votes for him, upward of 80 members, he claims, being pledged to his support.

Regardless of this fact, Bokern's managers declare that election day, April 21, a majority of the members will fall in line for their candidate, contending that the pledges for Harris in the main were obtained before the candidacy of his rival was announced.

Bokern Has Been Director.

Bokern, who served a term as vice-president of the exchange, and several times as director, is one of the most representative members of the fraternity.

BILL TO EMPLOY ONLY LICENSED ENGINEERS FOUGHT

Realty Men Say Proposed Law Would Add Too Greatly to Expense of Apartments.

Officers of the Real Estate Exchange are protesting against the passage of a bill which is now in the Council, having passed the House of Delegates, and which requires the employment of a licensed engineer for every steam generating apparatus of 15 horsepower and over.

A hearing will be held on this measure in the Council chamber Friday night, and E. A. Hildenbrandt, president, and John J. Dowling, secretary of the Exchange, have written to members urging them to attend. The bill is being supported by the licensed engineers.

The real estate men, in opposing the bill, say it would require the employment of a licensed engineer, in addition to the janitor, in apartment houses accommodating more than six families and that it would make the smaller houses unprofitable. They say the bill takes no account of the pressure of the steam apparatus, but only of the horsepower.

The real estate men also say that the new measure would make the Inspector of Boilers and Elevators a mere figure head on the Board of Examining Engineers.

The establishment of Ozarkana, a new summer resort in Southwest Missouri, overlooking the Meramec River, is progressing rapidly and offers ideal country homes, according to Grant W. Porter and John D. Clancy, promoters.

The resort comprises 200 acres and is located 92 miles southwest of St. Louis in Crawford County. The Frisco Railroad line runs nearby and a station will be built there, the promoters say.

A modern clubhouse, golf links, tennis courts, an artificial lake, and other features are included in the plans. The tract has a picturesque cave in which the thermometer remains at 60 degrees the entire year.

The property is offered at a trifle more than the improvements cost and a number of St. Louisans have purchased home sites, the promoters report.

CARDS DEFEAT BROWN RECRUITS IN FIRST GAME, 6-1

BRITTON, HERE TO BOX KELLY, STILL HAS TITLE HOPES

Chicago Star, Rated Cleverest Lightweight, Is Reaching the Age Limit.

Three Boxing Clubs to Hold Shows This Week

National A. C. Monday.

Jack Britton of New York vs. Leo Kelly of St. Louis, 8 rounds at 135 pounds.

Oliver Kirk of St. Louis vs. Joe Genail of St. Louis, 8 rounds at 126 pounds.

Pierce Mathews of St. Louis vs. Dale Gardner of Oakland, Cal., 8 rounds at 115 pounds.

Future City A. C. Tuesday.

George Kirkwood of St. Louis vs. "Tickle" Sanders of Memphis, 8 rounds at 124 pounds.

Manuel Vierra of Oakland, Cal., vs. Kid Bandy of St. Louis, 8 rounds at 124 pounds.

"Speedy" Speer of St. Louis vs. Jim O'Brien of St. Louis, 8 rounds, catchweights.

Stag A. C. Saturday.

"Sailor" Jerabeck of St. Louis vs. Tommy Maxwell of St. Louis, 8 rounds at 145 pounds.

Tom Burke of St. Louis vs. Billy Collins of St. Louis, 8 rounds, at 142 pounds.

Johnny Thompson of St. Louis vs. N. Ford of St. Louis, 8 rounds, catchweights.

William J. Breslin, alias Jack Britton, from Broadway, New York is here to demonstrate to St. Louis boxing fans why he calls himself a candidate for the lightweight championship honors of the world. Britton will give said demonstration in a scheduled eight-round bout with Leo Kelly, a St. Louis product, before members of the National A. C. in the Coliseum Building tomorrow night.

Britton is hailed as the best thing in a short-round bout in the country, outside of Packey McFarland, the Chicagoan. That he isn't far behind the Windy City whirlwind has been proven in at least one meeting with McFarland.

Britton will probably fail to realize his ambition of becoming world's champion because he is 29 years old. He has been fighting since 1905 but did not jump into prominence until 1910. Then victories over Kid Farmer, Bert Keyes and Mike Memsic as well as draws with Ray Temple, Frankie White and Young Saylor put Britton on the map.

Has Draw With McFarland.

On Jan. 30, 1911, Britton fought McFarland to an eight-round draw in Memphis, after which he hung out his banner as a contender. Since then he has had considerable success.

A good line on Britton's ability can be obtained from his record against boys who have boxed before local clubs. Eddie Murphy, who put up a rattling good bout against Jimmy Duffy, before the Coliseum club, was floored for the count of ten by Britton in the eleventh round of their bout in Boston.

Britton also knocked out Young Saylor, who has boxed here several times and who was credited by some with having knocked out Freddie Welsh. In the last year Britton has won four bouts via the K. O. route, scoring these against Frankie Gage, Jimmie Evans, Eddie Hanlon and Kid Curley.

Duffy Evades Britton.

After losing on a foul to Jimmy Duffy, May 29, last year, the boxers were rematched on June 23. Then Britton held the Lockport boxer better than even in 10 rounds. Since then Britton charges that Duffy will not fight him.

Britton's last big fight was with Charley White, the clever Chicagoan, who he defeated in 18 rounds in New Orleans last Independence day.

Kelly has a big task before him in tomorrow's bout. That Kelly is able to tackle the best of them was demonstrated in his bout with Freddie Welsh recently. Welsh outpointed the local boy, but the latter stood his ground well. To followers of form, Britton should prove the winner over Kelly, but the latter's friends contend that the red-head has a chance, and a good one, to beat the New Yorker.

Kirk to Meet Genail.

The semi-windup between Ollie Kirk and Joe Genail promises some good action. This is something of a "grudge" fight, as the boys are anything but the best of friends.

Manager Bishop of the National A. C. says he will have introduced from the ring tomorrow night Bob Fitzsimmons and his son, Bob, who is hailed as the coming heavyweight champion. Fitz and his son will appear at the Gayety Theater this week. Bishop also announces that the National A. C. office, 2612 Washington avenue, will be open today until midnight for the accommodation of old and new members.

Kirkwood Ready for Sanders.

George Kirkwood, the local featherweight, is confident that he will defeat "Tickle" Sanders of Memphis in their eight-round bout at the Future City A. C. Tuesday night. Kirkwood boxed an eight-round draw with Benny McGovern early this month before the South Broadway A. C.

He says he was dissatisfied with his showing in that bout, the first one he had for 10 months. It served to demonstrate to him, he says, that he still is good enough to earn his way in the featherweight division. Kirkwood has been working out daily since then and reports himself ready.

Pull the Trigger.

NOW there's a certain class of men, who lead a life of leisure,
Their time is spent from day to day in fruitless, idle pleasure,
When opportunities arise they sit around and "figger"
And AIM to do a lot of things, but never PULL THE TRIGGER.

A careful aim is very good and no one can dispute it;
But after you have aimed the gun, just blaze away and shoot it.
The man who aims to do a thing, but never pulls the trigger,
May rest assured his bank account will not grow any bigger.

The one who hesitates is lost—that's quite a truthful saying;
And wasted opportunities result from such delaying.
When hunting in the game of life forget that AIMING habit;
For the man who pulls the trigger is the man who gets the rabbit.

Late Rally Wins for Cornell Track Men in Meet With Wolverines

ANN ARBOR, Mich., March 28.—Coming up from behind by winning firsts in five out of six events, the track team of Cornell University tonight defeated Michigan 44 to 27 in their annual indoor meet here. No records were broken.

Cornell's clean sweep in the high jump and high hurdles and strong showing in the mile run and pole vault gave the Easterners the meet. Armstrong, Michigan's crack hurdler, knocked over two hurdles during the preliminary heat in which he won second place. Shelton, of Cornell, who won the heat, tipped one of the barriers, and was not allowed to compete in the final for the same reason.

The half mile was won in the fast time of 1:59 3-5 by Irish of Cornell and Capt. Kohler of Michigan, who recently sustained a bruised ankle, won the shot put with a heave of 45 feet 9 inches. None of the other performances was unusual.

STEINHEIMER AND KERN MEET IN BENEFIT BOUT

BENTON, Ill., March 28.—Loren Steinheimer met Johnny Kern of St. Louis at the Armory tonight in a four-round bout. Harry Sharpe of St. Louis acted as referee. There was no decision. The bout was arranged so that sufficient funds might be raised to allow Steinheimer to enter the National Amateur Boxing tournament to be held at Boston, Mass., April 15 and 16.

About 500 attended among whom were many women.

As a preliminary to the bout, Bill Collins of St. Louis and Jack Benson, of Benton, met in a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match. After fifteen minutes of wrestling neither man succeeding in getting a fall.

FOREIGN CUE EXPERTS TO INVADE AMERICA

CHICAGO, March 28.—B. B. Benjamin, the Australian, who has been arranging billiard matches in America for Melbourne Inman, the English champion, with Willie Hoppe, departed today for London. In addition, he is arranging a visit to the United States by George Gray, champion of Australia; Cecil Harverson, champion of Africa; Thomas Aiken, the Scotch champion, and possibly Harry Stevenson and Tom Reece.

He plans to have these experts take part in a tournament at English billiards, and also in one at mixed styles, in which several American players will compete.

CINCINNATI PADDLERS WIN FROM CORNELL U.

CINCINNATI, March 28.—The University of Cincinnati won the swimming meet from the Cornell University team here tonight, 31 to 22 points. Cincinnati's team captured five of the seven events, Cornell winning the relay race and the fancy diving contest, while the local swimmers took the 20-yard, 50-yard, 100-yard and 220-yard dashes and the plunge distance. J. Morris, for the University of Cincinnati, was first in four of the events.

Principia Team Beats Belt A. C.

The Principia School team defeated the Belt A. C. baseball team yesterday, 18-3. Schaberg twirled for the winners and besides striking out 11 batters, allowed only four hits. Ruel, Roe and Leschen of the Soldan High team played with the Belt A. C. team.

BROWN'S PLAYERS CLAIM FLAG FOR ST. LOUIS TEAM

Local Feds Pick Themselves as Most Formidable Club in Outlaw League.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MONROE, La., March 28.—Showers prevented the playing of the scheduled game between the St. Louis Federals and the Chicago Federals at Shreveport, La., this afternoon. Instead the players spent the day in discussing the approaching pennant race. The concensus of opinion is that Miner Brown's team will land on top.

Of 23 players here with the Mound City newcomers, six refuse to be quoted, as they claim they have little knowledge on which to base their selections. Of the remaining 17, 12 selected St. Louis as the flag-bearers in the juvenile organization. Baltimore and Chicago were voted place and show positions, with Kansas City filling the first division. Buffalo and Brooklyn brought up the rear.

OWEN WILSON, one of the five Pittsburg players who figured in the big deal for Koney, Mowrey and Harmon, worked himself into the good graces of St. Louis fandom yesterday by hitting a home run in the seventh inning.

The ball soared into the right field bleachers and two runs resulted.

Previoulsy Wilson had coaxed a pass and smote a single. His batting average for the day was .666. He scored three runs.

Brown Has Good Batteries.

The exceptional strength of the batteries seem to be the potent factor in the selection of St. Louis. On paper Brown, with Willett, Crandall, Herbert, Keupper and himself has a staff of exceptional merit. The catching staff includes Hartley, Simon and Chapman, a corps above the average. As this is the foundation of the good ball club any weakness in other divisions is of lesser consequence.

Baltimore was accorded the infield vote as the presence of Knabe and Doolan on one ball club was a potential factor in the amassing of victories. With Swacina on first and either Walsh or Kirkpatrick on third the Orioles are well fortified. There was considerable argument relative to the merits of the various outfields. Pittsburg, with Davy Jones, "Rebel" Oakes and Bill Holden of last season's Yanks, and Brooklyn manned by Claude Cooper, Artie Hofman and Al Shaw or Danny Murphy loom up more prominent than the remaining six clubs. The outfields hardly equal in caliber the other points of the league.

Stovall Owns Best Hitters.

Kansas City's hitting strength carried weight with a majority of the athletes as the Stovall aggregation crowded Indianapolis out of the first division on this advantage. In Brief, La Porte, Stovall and Easterly the Kaws have the sluggers. In the practice games the K. C. outfit have been hitting all manner of pitching. Of course their batting powers can hardly be based upon what they show in these conflicts.

WILLIAMS AND JOHNSON WIN TENNIS TOURNEY

BOSTON, March 28.—R. Norris Williams II of Philadelphia and H. C. Johnson of this city won the final match tonight in the doubles competition of the tournament held on the covered courts of the Longwood Cricket Club. They defeated N. W. Niles and A. S. Dabney of Boston, 6—4, 6—8, 6—1, 6—4.

G. F. Touchard of New York, the national indoor tennis champion, was eliminated by Niles from the single division in the semi-finals round. The score was 6—2, 3—6, 6—2. Johnson disposed of J. D. E. Jones of Providence in the same round, 6—2, 6—1.

Pittsburg Club Must Exhibit Contracts in Hot Springs Court.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 28.

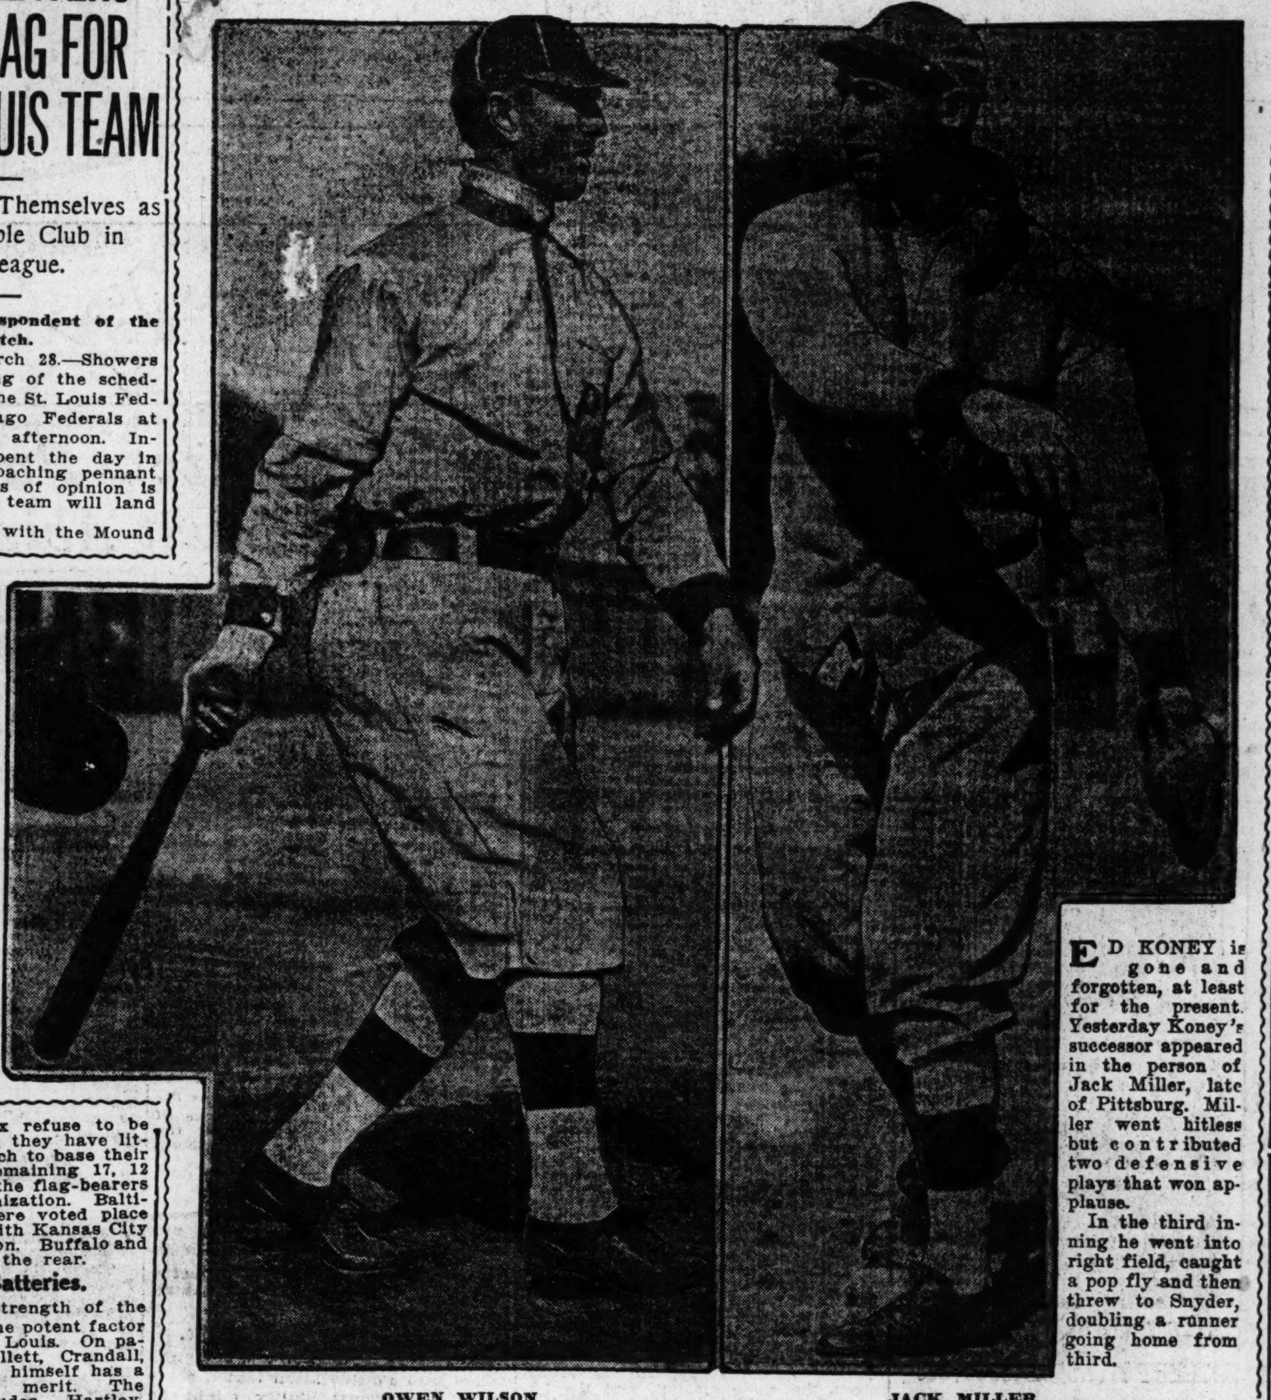
CONTRACTS between the Pittsburg National League and its players will be exhibited in court here Thursday, as a result of a decision today by Chancellor J. P. Henderson in injunction procedings of the Pittsburg club against Howard Camnitz and other agents of the Federal League.

The Chancellor previously had indicated that to prove contract relations between club and player the contracts should be exhibited in court. At today's session counsel for the Pittsburg club stated that the club was willing to exhibit the contracts, but argued that the salary paid each player was a private business relation.

It was agreed that the salary clause be subject to the scrutiny of the Court alone.

The Court granted the Pittsburg club until Thursday to produce the contracts.

Former Pirates Who Carried Cards to Victory



OWEN WILSON — JACK MILLER

ED KONEY is gone and forgotten, at least for the present. Yesterday Koney's successor appeared in the person of Jack Miller, late of Pittsburg. Miller went hitless but contributed two defensive plays that won applause.

In the third inning he went into right field, caught a pop fly and then threw to Snyder, doubling a runner going home from third.

Perritt Prevents Browns From Showing New Stuff

American Leaguers Were Unable to Show Any Daring on Bases After Cardinals Had Piled up an Early Lead.

By Clarence F. Lloyd.

THE inaugural between the Browns and Cardinals was anything but a high-class exhibition of the national pastime. Because the Browns didn't collect their blows in groups, they looked inferior, as most teams do when not hitting. The Cardinals, too, mussed things up at different times, especially in the one round in which the Browns tallied, kicking the ball about the lot like so many schoolboys.

Those fans who journeyed out to the yard in the hopes of seeing some of the much-advertised Rickey Brand of Baseball, were sadly disappointed. It was like any other old baseball game, only worse at times, due to the ragged fielding of both sides. Six errors were jotted into the box score by the American Leaguers while four boots were made by the Cardinals.

Rickey's proteges were prevented from showing any of the many things ho taught in the south because of the fact that Polly Perritt was pitching tight ball. For that reason there was little daring on the bases. Ernie Walker was the lone Brownie who attempted to pilfer, and the mighty right arm of Frank Snyder chopped him down at second with Hug doing the tagging.

Little Daring Work Tried.

It wasn't until the last three innings after the Cards had assumed a winning lead that the Browns hit Perritt. At that time, it would have been the height of folly to try any pilfering.

Only once in the game did the Browns show a marked difference over the brand of baseball they displayed in 1913. That was in the third round. Walsh put a lot of "pep" in his Maffitt avenue friends by starting the frame with a single. Agnew followed with a double. Dee kept hiking about the paths and when Magee heaved high to second, kept on to the plate. Even the lumbering Agnew didn't camp on second as the old Brownies were wont to do.

Instead he galloped off second and although apparently nipped in the run-up, didn't give up the fight and managed to scramble back to second when hit in the back with the ball.

Rickey Not Discouraged.

"The result of the game has not discouraged me," said Manager Rickey to the Post-Dispatch after the game. "In fact, that same lineup will again appear in the Cardinal series. My object was to test the players under fire. They looked a bit bad because they didn't hit well. The ground was heavy and that too, in my opinion, had considerable to do with the result.

"Hamilton's game didn't appear a good one, because he tried too hard. It also proved costly for us when Hamilton and Agnew left the plate uncovered in the fifth inning. The Cardinals got two undeserved runs in that inning. Say for me that the Cardinals look like an improved club."

Hug Is Pleased, Thank You.

Manager Huggins seemed as pleased as if his team had beaten the Athletics in a world's series game, last night. "I am well satisfied with the way the boys played," he said to the Post-Dispatch. "I will continue using the same team in the series with the exception of one or two changes, which will depend on the pitcher that the Browns use."

Mr. Chill Makes Debut.

Oliver Chill, a graduate of the American Association, was the A. L. half of the umpires assigned to the job. He paired off with Mal Eason, a National League veteran. Last season Ban Johnson sent on George Hildebrand, a former Coast Leaguer, to make his debut in the series.

The fans disagreed with Chill on one decision. That was in the fifth inning, when it looked from the stand as if Agnew's throw to Howard had Magee picked off first base.

Why Browns, or Cards?

A stranger dropping in would never be able to distinguish the Browns or Cardinals from their makeup. The American Leaguers appeared in the 1913 style of at-home uniforms, white suits and caps with dark blue trimmings. There was not a semblance of brown about them, unless the taste after the defeat.

The Cardinals appeared decked out in new "unis." Their "abroad" uniforms are of a drab color, like the Athletics wear. The stockings are black, with white feet and anklets. There's nothing about the get-up indicating cardinal.

Opening Very Tame.

The opening was as impressive as a contest at the same yard about Oct. 1, 1913, after the Browns had stumped to the eighth-hole and were booked to play the Athletics with Plank pitching on one of his good days. There were no ceremonies. The Mayor didn't pitch the first ball and no diamond rings or floral horseshoes were presented to any of the ballplayers.

The crowd fell below expectations, probably because of the threatening weather. One noticeable feature was the absence of women, who on big days invariably turn out in force at the Grand avenue yard.

Mr. Commission Is Absent.

Although the National Commission is in charge of the series, that august body failed to send on a man to represent its interests. The custom in other cities is to have the secretary or business manager of a third club on the scene to check the gate, give the umpires instructions and in other ways make himself useful. President Hedges of the Browns said he had been appointed the commission's representative during the series. Treasurer Seekamp of the Cardinals said the Colonel was acceptable to his side.

Officials of the local clubs refused to divulge the official attendance. It was estimated the crowd between 10,000 and 12,000.

Left-Handers Are No Jinx.

When a left-hander stepped to the mound to face the Cardinals a year ago, Cardinal supporters were ready to pay off on the other fellows. It may not be so this season. It wasn't that way yesterday, with Southpaw Hamilton on the job. Eight of the nine men on Hug's team yesterday swung from the [illegible] side of the plate when [illegible] served. Chief Wilson was the lone left-handed hitter and, strange to relate, he poled two blows off the Oswego citizen, one being the home run that caused Ham's retirement.

Rickey Will Be Absent.

Branch Rickey, following his custom, will not call at the ball yard today to direct his team. In his absence, Roderick J. Wallace [illegible]

A. A. MAGNATES TO SEE BROWNS AND CARDINALS PLAY

Mike Kelley and William McGill Will Call in Search of Surplus Talent.

Two American Association baseball magnates will be spectators at today's contest between the Browns and Cardinals, presumably to get a line on talent that is to be turned loose by Managers Rickey and Huggins.

They are Milke Kelley of the St. Paul club, and President William McGill of the Indianapolis club. Kelley was manager of the Indianapolis club last season but was replaced when the club changed ownership. Last night, Kelley was made business manager of the St. Paul club by President Lannon. He will have general supervision of the business interests of the club and aid Manager Friel in obtaining players.

Huggins and Kelley are very friendly and it is probable that the few players Huggins will release later will go to St. Paul. Rickey has considerable chopping to do and deals may be arranged with McGill or Kelley or both.

EX-PIRATE STARS HAMMER IN RUNS FOR HUG'S TEAM

Hitting of Wilson, Butler and Dolan Is Big Factor in National Leaguers' Victory in First Spring Series Clash—Rickey's Recruits Commit Six Errors—Perritt Scores Over Hamilton and Taylor.

By W. J. O'Connor.

FOUR reformed Pirates supplied the ammunition with which the Cardinals snuffed out the Brown Recruits, 6—1, yesterday afternoon at Sportsman's park in the opening game of the Spring series for the city baseball championship.

Six errors committed by the American League faction proved potential factors in the National Leaguers' conquest, but it was chiefly the hits of Owen Wilson, Artie Butler and Cozy Dolan and the fielding feats of Jack Miller, all ex-Pittsburg players, that brought about a victory for the Cardinals.

Butler smote two doubles, coaxed two passes, scored two runs and swiped one hassock, while Wilson compiled a home run, a single and delivered three runs to the box score.

Dolan had a single and a sacrifice to his credit. Jack Miller proved a substantial defensive prop, figuring in two double plays that nipped Brown rallies in their incipiency. The ex-Pirates scored all the Cardinals' runs.

The game was not wildly exciting, a slow field, sticky weather, strange faces on the diamond and an umpire named Chill conspiring to cool the ardor of the fans. Only once during the game—when Wilson lifted a liner into the right field bleachers—did any of the "pent-up enthusiasm" manifest itself. Most of the time the patrons were as reserved with their applause as an audience at a medium's seance.

Rickey Uses Only Recruits.

Manager Rickey of the Browns elected to send his reserve force of kids into the first portion of the series, so that he could accurately guage their ability under fire. Rickey originally intended to use his regulars yesterday and his recruits today, but inasmuch as he never graces the ball park with his presence on Sunday he decided it would be a better policy to watch the recruits in action.

He did nominate a veteran battery, sending Earl Hamilton, his best bet, to the hurling hill with Sam Agnew behind the bat. Hamilton was hit hard and his support cracked at critical times. But even though Hamilton had received errorless aid he would have been beaten, as the Cardinals hammered home three earned runs. Hamilton couldn't tighten up when hits meant runs at any stage of the battle.

Manager Rickey withdrew Hamilton in the seventh stanza and delegated Wiley Taylor, a rangy right-hander, to finish up. One hit, that a double by the indomitable Butler, was all Taylor yielded. He retired the side in order in the eighth, while four men faced him in the ninth, one dying at the plate.

Polly Perritt, an angular right-hander, fired shrapnel at the Brownies. He was touched for eight hits, but these were so widely scattered that little damage was done. Two double plays at ticklish times also made the going easy for Perritt, who was being hit hard during the waning moments of the battle.

Snyder Has Good Day.

With the exception of Cozy Dolan on third base and Frank Snyder behind the bat, the Cardinal Regulars were intact. At that, it still is a question whether Wingo or Snyder will be the regular receiver or whether Dolan or Whitted will be the permanent guardian of third base. Snyder and Dolan performed yesterday and creditably acquitted themselves.

Shotton was the only regular Brown player to appear besides Hamilton and Agnew, he running for Rumler, a heavy-hoofed outfielder, in the ninth inning. The Fleet Mr. Shotton had hardly become acquainted with his task before he was erased on a double play which Bisland slammed into, Perritt to Butler to Miller.

Rickey's Regulars to Face Cardinals Today

THE Browns and Cardinals will play the second game of their series at Sportsman's Park this afternoon, starting at 3 o'clock. Manager Rickey said last night that he would use his regular team with the following batting order: Shotton, cf.; Austin 3b.; Williams, rf.; Pratt, 2b.; C. Walker, lf.; Leary, 1b.; Wallace, ss.; Agnew-Crossin, c.; Baumgardner-Wellman, p.

Manager Huggins said he would use the same team which beat the Browns in the opener, with the exception of the battery. He expects to pitch Hagerman or Griner, with Snyder or Wingo behind the bat.

Lee Magee's Error Lets Browns Score Their Only Run of Game

THE Cardinals were first to break into the run column, scoring in the second chukker. Wilson first up, walked. Cozy Dolan came next with the hit-and-run sign hung out and when Dee Walsh went to cover second on Wilson's attempted steal Dolan blazed a single through short, sending Wilson to third. Dolan, a speed demon, bolted for second when Rumler, cavorting in left, made a late and useless throw to get Wilson.

With men on second and third and none out, the situation looked ticklish but Hamilton tightened up and escaped with only one run being scored. Cather cracked a long sacrifice fly to Rumler that let in Wilson while Dolan moved to third on the throw home. Snyder then tapped to Hamilton who discovered Dolan standing midway between third and home and promptly tagged him out. Just like that! Perritt ended the rally with a strike out.

Walsh Scores Browns' Run.

The Browns knotted the count in the very next inning. Walsh wopped a single to center as the opening wedge. Agnew followed with a wicked punch into the same territory and Walsh made third. Agnew set sail for second and when Magee made a wild throw to Huggins, Walsh percolated home with the Browns' lonesome run.

Agnew got in a run-up between second and third but returned safely to the middle bag when Dolan beaned him with the ball. Agnew, legally, took third on Hamilton's well-placed sacrifice but perished on a double-killing when he tried to score on Messenger's pop fly back of first.

Miller, acting absolutely contrary to the rules laid down by Ed Koney our former fellow townsman, ran madly into right field, absorbed the pill on the wing and shot true as a rifle to Snyder who had Agnew blocked three feet off the home plate. Snyder uses his shins to block off runners as though they (his shins) were made of lead. At that he's slow.

Cather Breaks Deadlock.

The deadlock was broken by the Cardinals in the fourth. Wilson started trouble with a line single to left. Dolan's sacrifice, Hamilton to Howard, put him on second, whence he rumbled home on Ted Cather's noisy double along the third base line. Cather stopped at third on Snyder's pop single to right center and was trapped off the bag and retired on Perritt's roller, Howard to Walsh. Huggins ended the run-getting with a roller to Walsh.

A medley of miscues gave the Cardinals two more in the fifth. Magee got a life when Bisland dropped his pop fly. Butler, who had walked his two previous times at bat, forced Magee, Wares to Bisland. Then Jack Miller paraded. Wilson took a reef at the ball on the hit and run, but his best was a dinky roller in front of the plate. Agnew and Hamilton both went for the ball. Agnew gloved it and handed the pill to Howard for the out at first. Butler saw the plate unguarded and set sail for home. Howard, in haste, threw to the plate, a perfect peg, but no one was there to receive it. Butler scored and so did Miller, both being alert to the situation.

Wilson's Homer Nets Two.

There was a letup in the sixth by the Cardinal sharpshooters, but the booming of cannons was heard again in the seventh, when the Piratical crew got busy. One gone, Butler whipped a double to left. He held the bag while Miller lifted a high one to Messenger, but advanced to third when Hamilton made a wild heave, trying to pick him off. Then Wilson, with two strikes called, "leaned on" one and salted a home run in the right field bleachers. The fans who had been sitting back with that "make-me-laugh" expression thawed out and yip-eehed as Wilson walked home behind Butler.

Wiley Taylor took up the pitching burden in the eighth and blanked the Cards in the last two rounds. The Browns threatened trouble in the ninth, when Rumler opened with a single and was relieved by Shotton. The rally was speedily killed, though, when Bisland slapped into a double play, Perritt to Butler to Miller. Howard followed with a double, but Walsh rung down the curtain with a strike-out.

COMPANY A FIVE DEFEATS ROYALS FOR BASKET CUP

Regimental Team Wins Game Involving City Championship, 32—21.

Battling for the championship of the city, the Company A basketball quintet last night defeated the Royals, 32 to 21, at Louisiana Hall. Both fives previously won all of their games, the company team walking away with the eRgimental title, while the Royals had encountered all of the local independent and collegiate teams. The title contest was followed by a game between this year's all-star interscholastic five and a quintet composed of former high school lights. The grads were easily the victors winning 54 to 12.

The main game proved very rough and during the second half promised to culminate in a fistic encounter, when Marting of Company A and Klostermeir of the Royals all but exchanged blows. Both teams had been playing quite a strenuous game from the start and numerous fouls were called for rough play. Meslow, center of the Armory squad was butted by Klostermeir, of the opposing team, and was knocked out. Marting, a teammate of Meslow, resented the alleged foul, and the two players started to mix. However they were soon parted by other players.

Royals Start With Rush.

The Royals started with a rush and after a few moments' play had the score in their favor. The first tally cames as a result of a free toss by "Pete" French. The same player then came back with a field goal, giving his five the advantage, 3—0. However this lead was but short lived, as Dryer, Meslow & Co., soon started scoring and were fairly unbeatable. Marting also showed a great deal of class by caging three baskets in five minutes. The half ended with Company A leading, 18 to 8.

The Royals again started off like a house afire in the second period and for a while the score was of more moderate proportions, only again to be increased by the soldiers. In this half Dryer was conspicuous with his long and difficult shots, shooting from seemingly impossible angles. "Pete" French starred for the losers netting 8 free throws out of 13 tries. The half and game ended with the score 32—21.

The second game, from the start, developed into a farce. The all-star interscholastic quintet of this year, minus the services of French, was helpless before the picked aggregation of former years. This team was composed of such stars as Stewe, Joern, Hebberger and Peters, all of whom were individual lights during their prep career. Soon after the starting whistle it was only a question as to the magnitude of the score. The final count was 54 to 12.

The games were promoted by Harry Hardin who also refereed the contests. Each of the winning teams will be presented with suitable trophies. A small crowd attended.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Oh, I Say—Take 'Em Off!

WHY not begin right now to complete arrangements for making the American League race a trifle more even? By way of starting the movement we suggest that the competition be made a handicap affair, with the Athletics conceding not less than one run to the Red Sox nor more than six runs to the Browns.

In that way the contest may be made keen enough for interest and gate receipts to last until well along in June. For, under the present conditions, what was merely a one-sided race to the naked eye in midwinter, now apears no contest at all.

The ocasion for the stronger conviction regarding the chances of the Mackites is the announcement that Jack Coombs is recovering and will be able to pitch about the middle of June.

That's the Last Straw!

WITH Coombs going in his old form the opposition in either league would seem to have but one chance—that of cinching second money in the world's series.

Coombs has written to friends that he will be able to travel with the club about the middle of June; and his teammates are looking for him to start pitching again July 1.

That's just at the time when the Athletics ought to be putting on the brakes to let the opposition get within hailing distance!

Coombs Can't Come Back.

HOWEVER, that's taking the optimistic view about Coombs' condition. The chances are more in favor of Coombs not coming back to his former physical condition. Coombs has suffered serious setbacks, for many months, and it would be unreasonable to expect him ever to show his best form again.

It is probable that Joe Wood of the Red Sox has a better hope of recovering than has Coombs. And, if this happens, perhaps the one-run handicap mentioned above may be dispensed with. Wood has already joined the Red Sox and thinks he can beat out the weakening effect of an operation for appendicitis.

Fitz Has Ideas of His Own.

ALL fistic fans who once followed the fortunes of the best man of his pounds that ever fought, Robert Fitzsimmons, will be interested to take a peek at the toothless old lion and his son, Bob Jr., who are visitors here this week.

"Like father, like son," is a saying that stops at the threshold of pugilism. Ring ability doesn't often run in families. Fitz is training his boy in a new school. He wants to send him into the ring a ready-made champion—one able to take up cudgels with the best and win. Now, recalling the gruelling beatings some fighters take in their climb to the top, can Old Man Bob be blamed for sparing his son the punishment.

But the wisdom, or probable success of the plan may be questioned, since no world's champion can exist without training in submitting to punishment as well as taking it. The fighter who cannot stand the gaff as well as give it, will have scant title recognition.

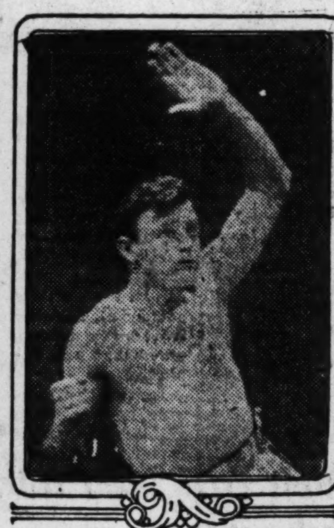
Bob Fitz Jr. Issues Defi.

In this connection Fitz's manager, who is in the city this week, penned the following:

ST. LOUIS, Mo., March 27, 1914.

Friend Wray—Regarding the item in your column about Fitz Jr., doubtless you are right. All the heavy champs of the past generation began at his age, 18½ years, but few began before that. Fitz, however, has his own system of getting the boy in shape and it will not be long before he is ready for his first battle.



ROBERT FITZSIMMONS, JR

Years ago I saw Jack Johnson beaten up at least four times by third-raters in preliminaries. Fitz wants this boy to start right and does not want any setbacks in his career.

I honestly believe he can beat Jack Johnson now! You will, too, when you see him. But just to prove that there is some of the old man's skill in him I would like to challenge any local heavyweight in St. Louis to meet him in private at one of the clubs next week and the younger Fitz will agree to stop him in four rounds.

Sincerely,
JOSEPH R. DORNEY.

Local Heavies Poor Timber.

YOUNG FITZ has been favorably spoken of around the circuit. But until he actually opposes some man of merit his ability is conjectural. As for knocking out any of the local heavyweights, if somebody were to whisper the name "Fitzsimmons" in the ear of one of our Kingdon Belmonts, the fight would be over.

Fitz may be right in his training plans, but the proper place to build up a champion would seem to be the prize ring, not the vaudeville stage. But you can't blame Bob for getting the soft pickings while the picking is good.

FOUR STAKES TO TOTAL $50,000 AT KENTUCKY TRACKS

Keen Interest Is Manifest by Horsemen in Coming Season on Blue Grass State Circuit.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 28.—Winter racing wound up this afternoon at Charleston and until the meetings in Kentucky and Maryland open next month, there will be a much-needed rest for horses and horsemen. While several stables went from Charleston to Pimlico, a majority of them will come on to Kentucky early next week.

The Juarez special arrived in Louisville Thursday morning with all the horses in good condition, after a hard and arduous journey. A few of the cheaper selling platers dropped off in Oklahoma to take a fling at the meeting in Tulsa next month.

Futurity Worth $8000.

Interest in the Kentucky circuit is higher this year than ever before. Four staker which have been offered this year will total close to $50,000, which is a big sum considering the amounts which have been added to stakes since 1910, when the metropolitan tracks closed. These stakes are:

The Breeders' Futurity, the headliner of the Lexington meeting, which will be worth close to $8000 this year; the Kentucky Derby, to which $10,000 has been added by the New Louisville Jockey Club, and the total will be in round numbers close to $14,000, and the Kentucky Handicap, the feature of the Douglas Park meeting, will be worth about the same amount, and the Latonia Jockey Club has announced that with $6000 added that the Latonia Derby will be worth $10,000 this year.

Belmont's String to Show.

In these big stakes some of the big stables which have remained in the East in the past will come to Kentucky. Among these stables are those of August Belmont, who has nominations in the Kentucky Derby, the Kentucky Handicap and the Latonia Derby, and John E. Madden, who has nominations in the same events. It is the first time that the Belmont colors will have been seen on the Kentucky circuit. Madden raced a couple of horses here last year, but this season he has 16 now in training at Churchill Downs.

The Kentucky Derby drew 46 nominations this year, which is a new record, and nearly every horse nominated has shown enough on the turf to be entitled to start in the rich event. Old Rosebud, champion 2-year-old of last year, is the favorite in the winter book, while Ralph, George J. Long's great colt, is second choice. Bringhurst, Black Toney, Old Ben, Bradley's Choice are all held at fairly short odds by the bookmakers.

There will be 61 racing days in Kentucky this spring, which is the longest season ever held in the State. Mars Cassidy, the veteran starter, has returned to his first love and will handle the barrier in the East this summer.

Alumnus to Donate $300,000 Stadium to Princeton University

PRINCETON, N. J., March 28.—Announcement was made today by President Hibben of Princeton University that Edgar Palmer of Rye, N. Y., a graduate of the class of 1903, has offered to build a stadium and present it to the university for use of the athletic association in time to be used for the Yale football game next fall.

The Committee on Grounds and Buildings met today and approved the plan. The Board of Trustees will formally accept the gift April 9.

The stadium will be built of reinforced concrete in the shape of the letter U, and will seat 41,000 persons. The location will be on the southern slope of a field south of the university buildings. The estimated cost is $300,000, to be given entirely by Mr. Palmer.

The object of the gift is to increase the endowment and income of the university by giving back into the treasury for scholastic purposes the money now spent annually for the erection of temporary bleachers for big football games. The field will be used for football and track athletics only.

Kentucky U. Students Raise $500 to Keep Ball Team in Field.

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 28.—After 1000 students had contributed 50 cents each toward the baseball fund, the Athletic Committee of the faculty of Kentucky State University today re-established the original baseball schedule of 24 games, and the strike of the baseball team, which has been on for several days, ended.

The team reported for practice as soon as the announcement was made. The reason for the cancellation of a number of games with several of the leading colleges and universities in the South was that the sport took too much time away from the students' studies and that the athletic fund was almost exhausted.

Baseball Loses Harry Hinton.

AMERICUS, Ga., March 28.—The Cleveland A. A. team lost a good southpaw recruit and Stamps, Ark., won a good druggist today when Harry Hinton quit baseball because his father offered him a drug store to quit the game.

Post-Dispatch Public School League Teams Must Abide by Eligibility Code

School Using Players Barred by Rules Will Be Dropped—Other Regulations Are Adopted After Conference With Principals of Schools.

Rules have been adopted to govern the play of teams in the Post-Dispatch Public School Baseball League, the first games of which are scheduled to be played Saturday, April 11.

To avoid charges of "ringing" in connection with the playing of any pupil who has just entered school, it has been decided to make eligible only students who have attended a public school at least 10 weeks prior to the opening games of the schedule. This time limit was named because cases are on record of boys reentering school after an absence of two or three years simply for the purpose of playing with the baseball team.

A pupil, whose parents move during the baseball season or who for some other reason is forced to transfer schools, will not be deprived from playing after the transfer. It has been decided to permit such a pupil to play the remaining games after his transfer with the school of which he was a members at the beginning of the season.

To Prevent Transfer of Stars.

In making this rule the fact was taken into consideration that a player of exceptional ability might be transferred from one school to another. If this player had aided his original school it is believed that it is only fair that he should continue his services with the same school.

Rule 3 permits a pupil to transfer his services to a new team in the event of his transfer from one school to another, provided he comes up to the eligibility requirements as stated in Rule 1.

Arguments arising over the umpire question in former years are expected to be eliminated by carrying out Rule 4. This year it will be necessary for the managers of opposing teams to agree upon one or two umpires at least 24 hours before the game is scheduled to be played. The schedule of Saturday games will be printed four or five days ahead, which will afford to managers ample time to arrange a meeting and agree upon officials.

Two Umpires, if Possible.

If possible, it is suggested to agree upon two grown boys or men to umpire the games. If two men are selected, the teams may request them to alternate in their work on the bases and behind the plate.

Because the decisions of umpires will remain final, the managers of the school teams are urged to select officials whom they know to be competent.

A team at any time before or during a game may ask to see the card of an opposing player, about whom there may be some doubt. The captain of the team may also ask that the player suspected of being a "ringer" sign his name to a piece of paper. Should this signature fail to correspond with the one on his card, a protest may be filed.

As sated in Rule 6, however, no protest will be considered unless charges are filed by at least three members of a team and at least one outside or disinterested party witnessing the game.

Penalty Is Suspension.

The penalty for the use of a "ringer" will be suspension of the team from the league for the remainder of the season, as stated in Rule 7.

In the event of a protest being filed, the matter will be considered by a commission, probably composed of principals of three schools. A similar commission will be asked to pass on other questions that may arise during the season.

No team will be permitted to have more than 11 players on its roster at a time. Only players who have signed membership cards are eligible to play in games. A team captain may at any time make a change in his squad by surrendering the card or cards of players he wishes to drop and by receiving new cards in their stead.

The adoption of these rules is expected to eliminate many of the arguments and protests that have come up in previous seasons. The managers and captains are requested to keep a copy of these rules for ready reference.

There is still time to enter the Post-Dispatch League. Teams not entered in the league may make applications for membership by sending their managers or captains to the Post-Dispatch office (third floor) after school hours when membership cards are issued.

Post-Dispatch School League Rules

RULE 1.—Any pupil who has been a bona fide student of a public school for ten weeks prior to April 11 shall be eligible to participate in the Post-Dispatch Public School Baseball League.

RULE 2.—Any pupil who is transferred from one school to another during the Post-Dispatch Public School Baseball League season shall be permitted to finish the baseball season with his original team, but cannot play with the school to which he is transferred.

RULE 3.—Any pupil who is transferred just prior to the opening of the baseball season shall be permitted to play with his new school, provided he comes up to the requirements as stated in Rule 1.

RULE 4.—Umpire or umpires must be named and agreed upon by captains or managers of opposing teams at least 24 hours before the game is scheduled to be played.

RULE 5.—After an umpire or umpires have been selected and agreed upon decisions rendered during a game shall remain final.

RULE 6.—Charges of the use of "ringers" will be considered only when made by at least three members of a team and at least one outside or disinterested party.

RULE 7.—Any team proven guilty of using any player who is not eligible under the rules shall be dropped from the league for the remainder of the season.

RULE 8.—A commission, to be composed of probably three persons, and named later, will decide all protests and questions that may arise during the season.

RULE 9.—Each school will be limited to a membership of 11 players.

Jerome Travers Is on Scratch in New Golf Rating

NEW YORK, March 28.—Jerome D. Travers, of Upper Montclair, N. J., the National amateur golf champion, who is now in England preparing for the coming British amateur championship tournament, holds the honor place of scratch, two strokes better than any other man, on this year's handicap list of the Metropolitan Golf Association. The list, which contains 541 names, six more than last year, of men handicapped up to nine strokes, was announced tonight by Chairman James A. Tyng, of Baltsurol, N. J.

None of the players gets a rating of one stroke, but Walter J. Travis, Garden City; Oswald Kirkby, Englewood, N. Byers, Pittsburg, who is a member of three or four metropolitan clubs, and W. K. Whigham of Southampton, L. I., with three each, while Findlay S. Douglass, Nassau, L. BOOK TELLS ROAD RULES

The B. F. Goodrich Co. has recently issued a booklet, "Rules of the Road." The purpose is to help further the Safety First movement by putting valuable hints in such concrete shape that they can be quickly mastered by the man behind the wheel.

Both new and experienced drivers will appreciate the information contained in "Rules of the Road." It tells in clear, concise manner many regulations which new drivers must usually acquire from costly and embarrassing experience. It gives rules governing street traffic, such as passing, turning, stopping and starting. Also data on precedence on right of way, speed laws, respective rights and duties of drivers and pedestrians, lights, etc.

Then follow chapters on the "Care of Tires," "How to Make Repairs," how to secure the Goodrich touring service, road marking service, good roads, and how to secure the benefits from Goodrich service stations.

SIX FOREIGNERS ENTER

Six European drivers are now practically certain for the Indianapolis 500-mile race and the latest to announce an intention of entering is Arthur Duray, a star of the days of the Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races at Savannah and the Vanderbilt race down on Long Island. Duray is the clown among foreign race drivers and most interesting at all times. He is able to speak considerable English and is bright and willing to learn. Duray was one of the most popular among the foreign drivers at Savannah. At Indianapolis he will drive a Peugeot, the property of M. Menier, the French chocolate king.

In Spring the Young Man's Fancy Turns to a Motor Car

So Also That of His Father, His Mother and All Male and Female Relatives—an Optimistic Trade Outlook

With the coming of spring the average man, whether he has the price or not, gets an insatiable, an unappeasable hunger for an automobile. This was not always the case, because automobiles were not always. But since the motor car has become a perfected vehicle, which you do not have to "get out and get under," the sing to the contrary notwithstanding, and since the price has come down almost to the level of any man's pocketbook, any man and every man wants one, and his wife wants one harder than he does.

With this psychological condition existing, and with brilliant weather promised by the weather man, the wise men in the automobile business are predicting a greater number of sales during the 1914 season than ever before known in this section. Already the selling has begun and hundreds of possible buyers are beginning to "nose around" the salesrooms, fearful to make known their ambitions to own a car lest they be persuaded to buy before they are ready.

There are represented in St. Louis 88 gasoline pleasure cars, 10 electric pleasure cars and two or three cycle cars. It is safe to assume that, if Sunday is as bright a day as the weather man says it will be and the public hopes it will be, there will be 88 makes of gasoline cars, 10 makes of electric cars and all of the cycle cars out demonstrating to prospective customers. Some of the dealers will have two or three demonstrators, and none will have less than one out showing its gaits and its graces to prospective buyers.

It has become possible to show cars on the roads around St. Louis to better advantage during the past 12 months than ever before. The highways through St. Louis and adjoining counties have been put in excellent condition, all the bumps and ruts eliminated and oil used on most of them, so that the driving is almost perfect.

Indicating the advance of the automobile in this country, which is the most phenomenal ever attained by any of the great industries, it is shown by an official report just issued by the Chicago Association of Commerce that the people of the United States will spend for automobiles during 1914 the sum of $600,000,000. Investigations made by the same body show that the percentage of purchases of motor cars with money that should have gone for bread, is so small as to be unworthy of attention in the big figuring.

Other facts of interest are that New York State alone has more automobiles registered that will be found in Germany and France combined. Yet these countries have been the pioneers in the production of motor cars. The State of California has an automobile for every 25 inhabitants, women and children figured in. Missouri has more than 40,000 cars already and this figure will probably reach 50,000 by the close of the registry season.

Automobile dealers and manufacturers alike point to the fact that although the cost of all commodities, particularly of food stuffs, has advanced greatly in the past three or four years, the cost of the motor car has been steadily going down, either by actual reduction or through the addition of many important features at the same time.

Now a man can buy a car at any price. He can have the two-passenger roadster for under $400, a full touring car for $550, a limousine for $10,000, a light six at $1500 or a splendid heavy six at $5500. In fact, he can have anything he wants at his own price, because they are being made that way—"a car for any pocketbook" being the general motto of the automobile industry.

In fact, the automobile is no longer a luxury. It is a real, an insistent necessity. It economically takes the men of the family to work in the morning, it is used by the women for visiting and shopping, it frequently is pressed into use for business purposes and it finally takes the family out in the evening or on Sunday for long drive through the charming health-inspiring country side, over smooth roads and through ozone-laden air that brings the flush of health to the cheeks of the children and the hum of joy to the lips of their mother. To father it brings a new interest in life—something to make him forget that tomorrow is Monday.

Prepare to buy your automobile; you cannot escape; the fever is as contagious as typhus and it's much pleasanter to have.

Musical instruments displaced by larger or more expensive ones are offered at small cost through the Post-Dispatch musical columns.

HELD ANNUAL MEETING

The second annual stockholders' meeting of the Pyrene Company of Missouri was held at the offices in the Pierce Building. This company handles the Pyrene Fire Extinguisher in Missouri, Iowa, Kansas and Arkansas.

A recent ruling was made by all fire insurance companies writing automobile fire insurance, whereby they allow a reduction of 15 per cent from the fire premium, where Pyrene extinguishers in Pyrene brackets are carried on automobiles.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were: C. H. Morrill, president; H. McK Jones, vice-president; Stanley M. Riggs, secretary. The Board of Directors for 1914 is: C. H. Morrill, H. McK. Jones, Charles W. Moore, John H. Holliday, Stanley M. Riggs. E. L. Kent, New York sales manager for the Pyrene company, attended the meeting.

INDIANA MAKERS TO TOUR THROUGH SOUTH

The Hoosiers who last year toured from Indianapolis to Pacific Coast are contemplating a tour this year which will be routed to Louisville, thence by boat to Memphis, where the overland journey will be taken up to Dallas and thence northward via Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri and Illinois, to Indiana. This event will be a trade-boosting tour, as have been previous events for several years.

CACTUS FOR PHONE POLES

"Tourists who drive to San Diego and San Francisco Expositions in 1915 by the Southern route, will find in Southern Arizona the telephone linemen using the giant cacti in lieu of poles," says Dr. C. G. Percival, editor of Health Magazine of New York City, in his new book, "The Trail of the Bulldog." The cacti are from 20 to 40 feet high and frequent. Miles of telephone wires are strung on them without the expense of putting up poles. In other stretches, poles are scattered between these giant growths. The only drawback to the extensive use of the cacti is due to the fact that the soft, pulpy structure acts as a good conductor to electricity, and the wires sometimes catch fire from lightning and set fire to the growth, so that poles have to be erected in their place. The cross-arms are fastened onto the growing cacti and sections free from electrical storms are receiving good service from these unique poles."

Punctures 90% Less

Investigations prove that with "Nobby Tread" Tires punctures are 90% less than with the average tire.

The big, thick "nobs" on "Nobby Tread" Tires stand out so far from the shoe that nails, glass, sharp stones, etc., hardly ever reach the shoe.

Study the "nobs," their size, their thickness, and the way they are placed, and you will understand why.

And remember this—you have got to wear out these big, thick, tough "nobs" before you even start to wear out the extra strong tire underneath—that is one reason why experts call "Nobby Treads"

Two Tires in One

The original wear-resisting quality, the quantity of rubber, the methods of construction—all have been rigidly maintained in "Nobby Tread" Tires, and maintained regardless of cost and regardless of price competition.

"Nobby Tread" Tires are the largest selling high-grade anti-skid tires in the world, and they are REAL anti-skid Tires.

At a meeting of the Motor Accessory Association of St. Louis, to be held the second week in April, each dealer who belongs to the association will have delivered to him the association's "credit book" a compilation which has just been completed and put in print. The credit book will be a guide for the members of the association in opening new accounts as well as in pushing collections on those already on the books.

President John F. Shuford says that the book will remain the property of the association and A. N. Stanley, who is chairman of the Credit Bureau, will personally take the signature and pledge of confidential handling as each book is delivered.

High-Priced Tires
Since Our Reductions, 16 Makes Cost You More Than Goodyears

The facts are these:

No-Rim-Cut tires, because of costly features, used to cost one-fifth more than other standard tires.

Yet they excelled so far that they soon outsold any other tire in the world, as they do today.

With mammoth output came lower factory cost. Our overhead cost dropped 24 per cent. New factories, new machinery, new efficiency brought costs down and down.

And we dropped our profits until last year they averaged 6½ per cent.

During 1913 No-Rim-Cut prices dropped 28 per cent. Largely, of course, because of rubber reductions. They reached a point which other makers of good tires do not care to reach.

Now 16 makes sell higher than Goodyear prices—some almost one-half higher. And every tire user wants to know what justifies these prices.

Those higher prices can't be justified in any way whatever.

We have had scores of experts working for years to find ways to better No-Rim-Cut tires. And they all agree that better tires are impossible.

Then No-Rim-Cut tires have four costly features found in no other tire. One makes rim-cutting impossible. One saves countless blow-outs, and it adds to our tire cost $1,500 daily.

One lessens by 60 per cent the danger of loose treads. And one is our double-thick All-Weather tread.

Mark this. Not another tire at any price has one of these costly features.

Lower prices are easily explained. Higher prices lack a single shred of basis, save smaller output or a larger profit.

Those are the facts. You don't care to pay for chimerical advantage, and extra price buys nothing else.

MANY BUYERS GET NEW MOTOR CARS FOR SPRING USE

Demonstrators Were Busy Last Week and Dealers Look for Unusual Number of Sales in Next Two Weeks.

The week which has just closed was a busy one in local motor car circles. Nearly every demonstrating car in the city was kept in constant commission and a number of sales were closed and others brought to the point of closing. Some of those reported are as follows:

The St. Louis Stearns Auto Co. reports the following sales closed: E. B. Pryor of the State National Bank, 6-passenger Royal Blue Stearns Knight; L. M. Tom Kautt, travelling representative of the General Motor Car Co., reports a very cheerful outlook for business in the "territory." He has just returned from Caruthersville, Cape Girardeau and Marley, Mo., where he placed six Hupmobiles.

The Franklin Auto Supply Co. is making deliveries on the New Franklin Six. The builders claim that this is the lightest six cylinder car on the market, and that the gasoline consumption will show 20 miles to the gallon, that one gallon of lubricating oil will suffice for from 400 to 600 miles, and that each set of tires will average 8000 to 10,000 miles. One of these new models was delivered Thursday to Mrs. H. Conrad of Labadie street.

AUTO TAX LAW HELD INVALID IN MICHIGAN

Dispatches from Lansing, Mich., say that the State motor car tax law passed at the last session of the Legislature, providing a tax of 50 cents per horsepower on motor vehicles, was declared unconstitutional by the State Supreme Court. It was said in the Secretary of State's office, that approximately $226,000 has been collected under the new law and this money will now be returned to automobile owners, with the exception of $3 which was the tax under the provisions of the old law.

The court held that the act was unconstitutional in that the title of the law was not sufficiently broad to cover the body of the bill, and that "it was a license title on a tax law."

Twice Around The World

OUR 1914 output of 50,000 cars if placed but a mile apart would reach twice around the world.

If placed end to end they would cover a distance of over 720,000 feet which would make an unbroken string of Overlands from New York City to Springfield, Mass.

Some cars!

And the point we wish to hammer home is the enormous economy of producing automobiles in such vast quantities.

No other manufacturer in the business can produce a car to duplicate the $950 Overland for less than $1200.

Every time our production goes up our price comes down.

That is why we are selling more cars of this type than any other manufacturer in the world.

It is certain that if we did not give more value we could not sell more cars, and the sooner you find this out the quicker you can save yourself considerable money.

The Overland has power, speed, beauty, grace, strength and everlasting ability.

The 1914 Overland costs you 30% less than any other similar car made.

There is an Overland dealer near you. See this car today.

AUTO NEWS AND GOSSIP

T. L. Hausmann, president of the Overland Automobile Co., has just been elected a director in the Aero Club of St. Louis. Hausmann wants to try the elimination for the international balloon races July 4 here.

N. E. Dale has been appointed local representative of the Automatic Jack and Tire Rest. For the present he will be at 5181 Cates avenue.

The agency in St. Louis and surrounding territory for the Westcott car has been placed with the Auto Clearing House of 3952 Olive street.

H. A. Bonnell has been elected secretary of the Manufacturers and Dealers' Motor Underwriters, New York, a subsidiary of the Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Fred W. Warner has just been appointed general sales manager of the Oakland Motor Car Co. of Pontiac. His success in the automobile business has been meteoric. He graduated from the implement and vehicle trade.

From the Hupp Motor Car Co. of Detroit comes a new booklet, the Hupmobile Year Book, one of the most interesting motoring books yet published.

W. O. Rutherford has just been made assistant general sales manager of the B. F. Goodrich Co., Akron, O. He has had long service with the company and for the past four years has practically been filling the position to which he now receives the title and remuneration.

The Guenther-Methudy Co., 3533 Lindell avenue, has taken the St. Louis agency for Ajax tires.

Earl J. Moon, formerly Eastern sales manager for the Moon Motor Car Co., has been made manager of the Moon factory branch at 2612 Michigan avenue, Chicago. Mr. Moon is the son of the president of the company, Joseph W. Moon.

J. V. Hall, sales manager of the Olds Motor Works, Lansing, Mich., was in St. Louis Thursday and Friday, planning to place the agency for the Oldsmobile or to reopen a factory branch here.

Information that the Packard Motor Car Co. is going to be short of 1914 output will put a quietus to many calamity howlers who are still in the land of the living. As far as is known this is the first report of a manufacture of a shortage of output, but that it will not be the last is the concensus of opinion of the better-posted men of the trade.

BAD WEATHER BOOSTED MOTOR TRUCK SALES

"The unusual severity of the past winter has, in my opinion, been one of the largest factors in the big increase over any similar period in the number of motor trucks that were bought and placed in operation in this country," says G. W. Edwards, manager of the General Motors Truck Co., St. Louis branch.

"It seems that these two things have largely run parallel—severe weather and motor truck sales. In fact, business concerns in many instances simply had to buy motor trucks in order to get their goods delivered on time, keep their customers satisfied and meet competition of other concerns in the same line of business.

"The contrast between horse efficiency and motor truck efficiency in transportation work was never before so clearly demonstrated as during recent winter months. Concerns that used horses found their delivery department often crippled, while the users of motor trucks kept their goods moving on schedule, practically the same as in other months of the year. The best evidence, of course, has been furnished by those concerns that employ both motor trucks and horses. Investigations made and statistics compiled show that trucks working side by side with horses—the ideal way, after all, to make comparisons—gave far better service at a ruch less delivery cost than the horses.

"While horses slipped down on icy streets and horse vehicles were stuck in the deep snows, motor trucks ran along as usual, adhering to their schedule. Storms and blizards made no difference in the performances of trucks, as is shown by reports coming from New York, New England and other sections where transportation facilities were hard hit and, in some respects, were completely paralyzed."

CHICAGO CLUB REVIVES

President Charles M. Hayes, recently elected by the Chicago Motor Club, is about to instill new life into this organization. On its birthday the club will remove to its former quarters in the New Southern Hotel, having for the last two years been located at the Lexington Hotel. The chairman of the Contest Board and of the Runs and Tours Committee, respectively, have practically announced an intention of placing the Chicago Motor Club in the list of promoting organizations in every field and it is not improbable that the Algonquin hill climb and around Lake Michigan tour will be revived with road racing, which may be scheduled for July 4, over the Elgin course, and be an addition to the regular Elgin road races, which take place later. In past years the Chicago Motor Club was most active in the promotion of racing and touring events, and its success was of the utmost value to the organization in the way of advertising, while its promotions proved of the greatest value to the trade in general and to Chicago trades people in general.

CONTROL AT WHEEL

One of the distinctive features of the Stearns-Knight line this year is the steering column control of carburetor, ignition system, electric lights and Klaxon horn. The novelty of the Stearns-Knight arrangement is not so much in the idea—although the feature is not a common one—but in the neatness and compactness with which it has been worked out.

There is nothing clumsy or unsightly about the control arrangement to detract from the appearance of the car. Outwardly it consists of a small cylindrically shaped box with slightly conical top and bottom, surrounding the steering column just under the wheel. From opposite sides of this box project two small, flat levers and from the bottom four small buttons.

One of the levers controls the amount of air in the carburetor mixture, while the other controls the ignition system. These levers operate through rods located between the outer casing and the steering column proper, in which space the wires of the lighting circuits are also enclosed, the latter being securely held by bushings to obviate any possibility of chafing.

The small pull-and-push buttons control the four principal lighting circuits—head, side, tail and cowl-lights.

FIRM HAS TWO WINNERS

"Two winners" is the way the Trenton Motor Car Co., 5195 Delmar avenue, terms its combination, consisting of the Mercer car and the Braender tire. The company, of which Julian Nugent is president, has taken the agency for this market for the Braender tire. This tire, on the Mercer, won the Grand Prix at Santa Monica, won the Elgin trophy and 22 of the cars entered for the Indianapolis speedway are to be equipped with it. De Palma won the Vanderbilt race in them and did so without a change.

CHICAGO'S SPEEDWAY READY THIS FALL

Chicago is to have a two-mile motor speedway located along the lines of the Lincoln highway, west of the city, and it is proposed to open the speedway in the fall of 1914. It will be located near a town named Flossmoor and David Reed and J. H. Palmer have announced the purchase of the property. The surface will be concrete and the banks will be equal to those of the famous Brooklands racetrack near London. Two long distance international events will be held yearly and immense purses will be offered.

COLE FOR GRADUATION

Charles A. Stix of the Grand-Leader purchased a Cole "six" touring car, which he will present to his daughter Winnifred as a graduation present. This is the second Cole to be delivered in this family, Mrs. Ernest Stix also being the possessor of a Cole "four" coupe, which she drives.

The Cole Motor Co. of Missouri also delivered the past week to S. H. Jacobson of 120 North Main street a seven-passenger Cole "six;" to Henry Cohn of 3919 West Pine a five-passenger Cole "six," and to E. W. Dolch of 455 Pierce Building a four-cylinder Cole.

PISTON DISPLACEMENT IS NOT POWER

When Edwin Pullen, the youthful aspirant for the automobile road racing championship of the country, piloted his Mercer car across the line a winner in the recent Grand Prize race at Santa Monica, he demonstrated forcibly that the most important factor in the construction of an automobile, either for racing or for general utility purposes, is power rather than piston displacement. The Mercer that Pullen drove in the great international classic was of much smaller motor piston displacement than the cars of foreign manufacturers which have been victors in the Grand Prize contests of former years.

It was for the purpose of admitting the gigantic speed creations that the race promoters lifted the restriction of the piston displacement and made it possible for cars of over 600 cubic inches piston displacement to participate. By admitting these cars it was thought that a higher speed race would be produced. That this was unnecessary was evidenced by the performance of not only Pullen's Mercer, but also for the cars of the same make driven by Wishart and Oldfield, all of which were much below the 600 cubic inch mark.

As shown b ythe official chart of the Automobile Club of America, it was a Mercer car that set the pace throughout the race, except for the short time that a foreign machine was in front. The performances of the Mercers provided a new chapter in the time-developing proof that power and speed are obtain other factors than piston displacement.

Clearing Sale of Used Motor-Cars

We have on hand a few used cars taken in part payment for new HUDSON Six cars. We want to turn these used cars into cash at once.

Advance-season shipments of new stock are arriving daily, and we want both the space and the cash to enable us to handle them. This is merely a matter of good merchandising.

Alert motor-car buyers profit by such an opportunity as this. Many fine cars—practically as good as new—are picked up at such times. The saving over later-season prices is large. You practically make your own price, within reasonable limits.

Save $100 to $500

Here are cars on which the today buyer makes a thirty-day profit of $100 to $500. On others the same percentage is had. In all cases the saving is very decided.

At the asking price of lower quality, less efficient cars, you can now secure high-grade materials, finest workmanship, handsome design. These cars—rebuilt—are as satisfactory in nearly all respects as a brand new car.

If You Wait You Lose

When everyone wants cars prices rise. There are more buyers than sellers when the Spring season opens.

Thirty days hence we will not have enough of these cars to supply the demand. New cars also will be moving fast. The reason and the necessity for pushing sales will have vanished.

Today is your day of opportunity!

Hupmobile
The car of The American Family
Why?

Winter travelers returning from the West Indies, the South Seas, and the Antipodes—

European tourists back from the Continent—

Care-free adventurers exploring the remotest corners of the earth—

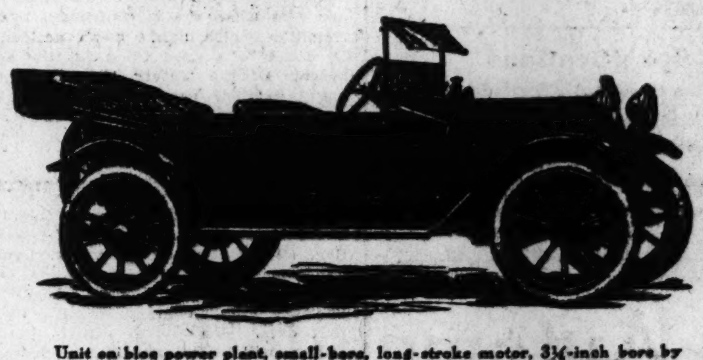
All come back with the same good story—Hupmobiles everywhere!

"It did my heart good," they all say, and one of them wrote: "I was so hungry in Moscow for the sight of something American, that when my startled eyes saw the first of a succession of Hupmobiles in front of the Church Kazan (with an ex-droshky-driver at the wheel, who looked, in his furs, like a Newfoundland dog) it was all I could do to hold back a good old-fashioned eagle-scream of exultation."

This man afterward learned, to his amazement, that the Hupmobile had just been awarded a silver cup for winning the first Russian Grand Prize Contest—a 200-mile race with much larger cars.

In Australia the wandering American finds Hupmobile ownership mounting into the thousands.

He finds, likewise, that it is not classed with the cars of low price, and that it sells for approximately $2,000.



Unit en bloc power plant, small-bore, long-stroke motor, 3¼-inch bore by 5½-inch stroke; trouble-proof carburetor; full-floating rear axle. With regular equipment, touring car or roadster type, $1050; with electric starting and lighting, demountable rims, oversize tires and tire carrier, $1200, f. o. b. Detroit. Six-passenger has regular equipment of oversize tires, demountable rims and tire carrier, price $1200; with electric lighting and starting $1300, f. o. b. Detroit

HUPP MOTOR CAR COMPANY DETROIT, MICHIGAN

In South Africa the story is the same—the same high price, the same remarkable growth in sales and, in quality—reputation of the first class.

France has found the Hupmobile distinctly French in its tendencies of design—some are friendly enough to say, in advance of French tendencies.

In England, Hupmobiles are thoroughly distributed and cared for through an organization of over 150 dealers, covering every important trade center in the United Kingdom.

So it goes, everywhere—a growth great in numbers, but particularly great and impressive in esteem and admiration.

The whole world is learning what every American Hupmobilist has long known, to wit:

That the Hupmobile is not moderate in quality though it is moderate in price.

That it separates itself automatically from cars whose chief appeal is price.

That it justifies, both at home and abroad, the well-founded belief that it is "the best car of its class in the world."

RECORD IN PRODUCTION

More records in shipments of Saxon cars were smashed this week when carload lots of Saxons went forward from the Detroit factory to distributors in 18 leading cities in the country, including the Park Automobile Co. in St. Louis.

Along with information to this effect, President H. W. Ford of the Saxon Motor Co. announces that all the Saxon dealers have by now been taken care of, those in the smaller towns having demonstrators with the prospect of more cars shortly.

These speed records of the Saxon Company have created as great a sensation as was made by the first announcmnt of this car. Automobile men declare that there is no other instancc on record where a manufacturer has got under way with quantity production so soon after a car was placed on the market.

Which do You Prefer—Specifications or Performance?

Here is how one owner decided it. To him there was a similarity in the catalog specifications of several cars—the dimensions and general appearance were somewhat alike—so he said: "Where does the difference come in?"
He found it in the National's unseen specifications.

Judge a Motor Car by It's Performances

Today the man in the market for a car does not want to buy specifications—what he wants is results—and the National is willing to stand or fall on its performances, past and present.

In the NATIONAL every part operates in perfect harmony for maximum pleasure and service. The mechanical features work so smoothly, so satisfactorily, that the owner's attention is neyer attracted to them.

While the NATIONAL'S published list of specifications is superior, it's the UNSEEN specifications that are most important to the user.

NATIONAL MOTOR VEHICLE COMPANY, Indianapolis, Ind.

A certain wise man owned a car, a Jupiter '12 let us say, that had provided much comfort and pleasure in ownership—and at the commencement of the year, when the salesmen sang their Swan songs, marking him a hot prospect he took counsel with himself reasoning thus:

> "The old bus is shabby looking, the top is worn and faded, the nickel is gone, and its general appearance is way below par—so that it's little wonder Smith of the Radium Co., won't allow much on it in trade—
> "But it runs just as good, in fact, better than the day I got it, and it cost many shekels—I ought to get several years, service and much more mileage out of it."

Thus reflecting he drove down the Avenue to a certain big shop where having specified

—a full paint job—the top recovered
—Fore doors installed—a set of seat covers
—Demountable rims—a new shield and bumper and several other things needing attention, he found that the difference between their cost and salesman's allowance, would provide for much gasoline, many tires, numerous rides to "good places" and plenteous eats and drinks—

And it was so ordered, the man departing content—ahead of the game in dollars and sense.

This is no fable, it's a fact, and it happens over and over in our big shop where we so completely re-furbish (get that) old cars, and the cost is surprisingly low. We are willing to demonstrate on the slightest indication of your wants—telephone and we will go to your garage and furnish an accurate estimate. May we?

WOMEN DRIVERS WITH CONFIDENCE AT HOME IN AUTO

Simplification of Control, Self Starters and Other Improvements Make Her Mistress of Gasoline Car.

According to Miss Frances J. Thornton of Brooklyn, who is one of the few women instructors of automobile driving in the United States, the main factor which makes a skillful driver is confidence in oneself and knowledge of the car. Miss Thornton is a very young woman who has been brought up practically in the seat of an automobile and her experiences gained through close observation of her pupils are interesting. She says:

"In the early days of automobiling there was much opposition to the idea of women driving motor cars because it was thought that they were too frail to drive a 'devil wagon'. Despite the opposition, however, there were a few women drivers, and these were looked upon as being mannish because they undertook to do what at that time was believed to be a 'man's job'. In many respects it was a 'man's job,' because the automobile then was no easy matter for a woman to drive. It was the hardest kind of work not only to crank a car, but also to manipulate the steering apparatus and to shift the gears.

"Today there are a great many women driving motor cars, but there would be many more if women could throw aside the fear which seems to overtake a beginner when at the wheel of a car. The ease with which the present day automobiles can be driven, due to self-starters, electric lighting systems, etc., ought to add as many women to the ranks of automobile drivers as there are men drivers.

"Aside from being beneficial to health and social standing, the fact that a woman can drive a car means a great saving in chauffeur hire as well as in carfares. She is not dependent then on a chauffeur whenever she wishes to make a social call or a shopping tour. The main thing that I impress upon my pupils is confidence in driving, and I have noticed the good results this point has accomplished. By being confident a woman does not lose her wits when she is confronted by a condition which might mean accident. It would be a good thing for the adherents of the 'Safety First' idea to instill in their minds the meaning of the word confidence."

MAY BE OPPOSITION AT DEALERS' ELECTION

The annual meeting of the Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, an important event in St. Louis motoring circles, will be held at the Washington Hotel, Monday, April 13. The association's charter arbitrarily fixes that date. The annual report of the officers will be followed by the election of nine directors, three of whom will be the president, vice-president and treasurer.

A nominating committee has selected a "regular" ticket, and the secretary transmitted that officially to the members Friday. The ticket is as follows: Samuel Breadon of the Western Automile Co., for president; T. L. Hausmann of the Overland Automobile Co., for vice-president; Joseph A. Schlecht of the Mound City Buggy Co., for treasurer, and these directors, W. C. Anderson, Ford Motor Co.; Nelson S. Gottshall, Cole Motor Co.; Ralph C. Doak, Woods Vehicle Co.; O. L. Halsey, Halsey Automobile Co.; H. B. Krenning, Dorris Motor Car Co.; John H. Phillips, Hudson-Phillips Motor Car Co. The secretary is elected by the directors.

Refreshments will be served after the meeting. Intimation of an opposition ticket has been heard.

CANADIANS BUYING AMERICAN CARS

Last year 7212 American cars, representing a value of $9,233,561, were sold in Canada, as compared with 385 cars valued at $700,504 disposed of in 1908. Statistics for 1913 bear evidence of an increase of 934 cars over the figures of 1912.

It is interesting to note that Canadians show a partial favor to American made cars. It is natural that conditions favor British cars and while these have found a ready market, the better grade of American cars, as well as the medium and low-priced grades, are making rapid strides. A "preferential duty" reduces the cost in the selling price of the European car. All American cars must pay a duty of 35 per cent, which is added to the agent's purchasing price, and the agent's profit is computed with the duty added. Several American manufacturers have established complete factories in Canada in order to avoid the payment of the heavy duty.

REOS FOR RUBBERNECKS

Reo trucks will carry the sightseers of the world at the coming Panama Exposition. It was a truck in Tahiti that brought about this decision. Last summer a cocoanut grower in that mid-Pacific island decided to buy a Reo, equipped with a special body, and start a "rubberneck" service in Tahiti. This special body was constructed in Frisco. The maker of it was struck with the originality of the design, and put together a replica of it for a Frisco sight-seeing company. As a result of the performance of that rubberneck during the past few months, the Frisco corporation is ordering a complete fleet of Reos to serve during the coming summer.

REBELS USE ARMORED CARS

Three six-cylinder cars, seized by Villa's rebels from refugees fleeing from Monterey, are among the fleet of 50 or more high-powered automobiles used to wonderful advantage in the Mexican war. These cars have been armored like battleships and equipped with rapid-fire guns. They make formidable fighting machines and nearly all the Constitutionalist officers use them in preference to horses. Villa personally is said to have 12 cars at his disposal.

MOTOR TESTED 300 HOURS

Now comes Chief Engineer Benner of the Maxwell Co., with details of a recent 300-hour trial given a Maxwell "25" motor in the Detroit laboratory of the company.

Placed on the dynamometer stand on Tuesday, the motor was put in operation at 7 p. m. and ran continuously until the following Monday morning. When stopped at 9 a. m. on Monday, the motor had run 307 hours or an equivalent of 7675 miles. During this period the motor was subjected to a load of 10 horsepower and operated at a speed of 1000 R. P. M.. Expressed in terms more intelligible to the layman, this would pull the car with its full load of five passengers at 25 miles per hour for 307 hours.

For the first three days of the test, the only adjustment needd was the replacement of two spark plugs. On the third day the gasoline line became clogged and the motor was kept running for several hours by hand feeding of gasoline into the carburetor. The gasoline pipe was taken down, cleaned and replaced, but again clogged after 12 hours running due to impurities in the fuel. This time the cleaning of the pipe was effected in five minutes' time without affecting the readings. On Saturday another spark plug was replaced, and from then until Monday morning no further adjustments were necessary.

Following the long run, Chief Engineer Benner had the motor taken down for examination. Despite the fact that the motor had been run longer than an average year in the service of an owner, the wear was imperceptible. Tool marks still showed in the cylinders and the greatest actual wear amounted to seven ten-thousands.

FIGURES ARE STAGGERING

The fact that an automobile factory is turning out 1000 complete cars per day, which is the present manufacturing program in the Ford factory, is enough in itself, but it grows in bigness when contributing facts are given.

Figuring on the basis of an eight-hour day, 120 cars must be completed each working hour; and as 25 men are employed on the assembling job, each man completes four cars per day.

In completing the 1000-car daily quota these 250 men handle a total of 800 tons of material. This quantity is made up of 4000 tires, 1000 gallons of gasoline, 1000 pints of oil, 5000 pounds of grease, 3000 gallons of water in the cars' radiators, 2000 springs, 5000 lamps, 48,000 wheel spokes and no less than 200,000 cotter pins.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

UNCERTAIN POLITICAL AND TRADE OUTLOOK RESTRICTS BUYING IN STOCK MARKET

Week's Range of Prices Is Lower on Professional Selling.

LONDON LIST IS FIRM

Foreign Traders Ignore the Ulster Controversy on Easy Money Outlook.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 28.—The Evening Post, in its weekly financial review today says:

"It is sometimes the case that financial markets cease to move because nothing seems to be happening in the outside world, and because, therefore, there is nothing for the markets to reflect.

"That will hardly be assigned as the explanation for the market's present attitude; of which it might more plausibly be said that things are happening in rapid succession, in the world at large, but that the Stock Exchange seems unable to make up its mind just what they mean.

"No clear opinion, as to the clash between the British ministry and the British army officers, can be read from the action of the London market. The Paris Bourse passed no intelligible judgment on the unquestionable change in the cabinet program, which was bound to follow the sensational Caillaux matter.

"Perhaps it was not to be expected that the fight in Congress over the Panama Toll exemptions should stir up the market; for that is a question of principle rather than policy. But the Stock Exchange has seemed to be equally indifferent to the conservative attitude of the House of Representatives on the "trust bills"—which was certainly a change of front from what had been gloomily predicted in the business community only a few weeks before.

Market Is a Puzzle.

"Whether the explanation is that the market, like the community at large, is puzzled as to what the outcome of any of these various occurrences is to be, or whether it feels that their influence on the financial situation is as yet too obscure to warrant positive inferences—at all events it makes no intelligible response, and, in the instance of the New York market, makes no response at all.

"Sooner or later, such response is reasonably to be expected, though its character will undoubtedly be affected by the course of events outside of politics. At the moment, such developments are not such as to inspire cheerfulness.

"The renewed shrinkage in forward orders in the steel trade, the continued decrease in railway earnings and the laying off of employes by the railways, serve necessarily to emphasize doubts as to the immediate future, and to perplex the financial mind.

"That these several phenomena are at least associated with the controversy over railway rates, cannot readily be doubted. It would not be correct to assume that the 5 per cent increase for which the railways ask authority, is vitally necessary to the continuance of a profitable business. But, in the more recent stages of the discussion, there has been a tendency to lose sight of the argument, which at the start was generally recognized as the most forcible of all—namely, that continued and very large expenditure for improved railway facilities (luxuries of the traveling public, they might perhaps be called) is demanded by patrons of the railways, yet that available capital for such outlay has undoubtedly been restricted, first, through the increased working expenses and the consequent narrowing margin of surplus income, but second, through the difficulty with which the railways are confronted in placing new securities, while those conditions continue to prevail in revenues.

Public Opinion Mixed.

"Perhaps the most important aspect of the matter is the extent to which the railways and the investing public have accepted the present 'rate case,' as an indication of general policy in the matter of Government regulation.

"That the tendency of working expenses—notably wages of employes—is continuously upward, seems to be undeniable, and now the issue is presented, at least to the general public's mind, as to whether, on a reasonably convincing presentation of the requirements of the railways, only the closest and narrowest construction of earning possibilities will be considered by the Interstate Commission.

"Such an attitude, even if based on earning capacity under wholly normal circumstances, would be to this extent manifestly unfair and wrong, that it would leave the railways with no continuing margin on which to draw, in the event of such circumstances as harvest shortage, trade reaction, or accidents of the season, such as would necessitate, as even the recent snow blockade has done, a wholly abnormal ratio of expenditure to keep the traffic moving.

"Undoubtedly, it is in large measure such considerations as this railway rate controversy, which are the immediate dominant influences on our own financial markets. Even so, a rather interesting paradox must present itself, especially to the large number of people in Wall street and in Lombard street, who have for years been insisting that the question of politics was the one dominant adverse influence on the markets.

"In England, this week has seen the political situation rise to an undoubted crisis; yet the London Stock Exchange ends the week higher than at its opening.

Market Is Irregular.

"In the United States, the course of legislation thus far has been such as to allay misgivings lately entertained, as to the temper of the legislators; yet the New York Stock Exchange, when it does not stand absolutely motionless, declines.

"If this is one of the curious inconsistencies of the day, another, and of much larger significance, is embodied in both countries, in the drift of political affairs away from previous accepted traditions.

"England, which most of us were brought up in our school days to regard as the embodiment of steady conservatism, is preeminently the theater of events and tendencies, previously unheard of, which sweep over the whole community.

"The United States, to which the world at large has habitually looked for novelties and experiments of the sort, has meantime pursued so calm and deliberate a course in relation to the various agitations of the day, as to entitle it, thus far, to a place among the very conservative communities of the day.

"Prices of the leading Wall street stocks closed 1 to 2 points lower on the week. The final session was quiet with a bearish drift.

LONDON STOCKS SHOW STEADY PRICE RANGE

Ulster Conditions Are Ignored in the Face of Easy Money Markets.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, March 28.—There are two reasons why our stock markets have not been shaken by this week's sensational developments in the Ulster controversy. One is the offsetting influence of really favorable factors, such as the return of distinctly easy money, the improvement in Brazil's financial affairs, and the reviving hopes regarding Mexico.

The second reason is the market's underlying hope that the Government's deplorable blunder of last week, in connection with the army officers, may result in the absolute exclusion of Ulster from the home rule measure.

Barring a further and distinctly alarming turn in our political situation, the outlook favors extreme ease in money after the turn of the month. This should affect London, Berlin, and, possibly, even Paris.

Brazilian Outlook Better.

The recent Brazilian developments are also of the highest importance. Reports that Brazil is actually arranging for a loan of £20,000,000 are premature; the real improvement consists in the fact that powerful financial houses in Paris and London have consolidated their interests, and are now presenting a united front in dealing with the Brazilian complications, and with a maximum prospect of success.

Certain very necessary requirements will be stipulated regarding the financial administration of the Brazilian Government itself; with these conceded, effective financial assistance from Europe will follow.

As regards Mexico, the strongly hopeful view, which now exists, is caused by the belief that Huerta is really gaining ground in his campaign to restore order in Mexico, and is also encouraged by the feeling that, if it were to be proved to Wilson that negotiations with the Huerta faction present the real solution of the problem, your President is sufficiently strong to reverse his previous policy and acknowledge that it was a mistake.

There is a highly interesting unanimity, in financial circles here, of respectful recognition of Wilson's character, even in quarters where his particular policies are entirely opposed.

A moderately favorable judgment is expressed regarding the outlook on the Stock Exchange, its basis being primarily the comfortable money market situation. It rests, however, more on the idea that investors will be driven into securities to employ their capital, than on expectation of an early restoration of confidence. The political atmosphere is still unfavorable to that.

Sugar Market Steady.

NEW YORK, March 28.—Raw sugar, steady; molasses, 2.30c; centrifugal, 2.95c; refined, steady.

PLANTING DELAY BEGINS TO WORRY COTTON DEALERS

Some Cultivation Experts, However, Contend Late Start Is Best for the Crop.

Complaints of backwardness in preparation for planting cotton are heard from several quarters of the South. While it may be a little too early to speak of actual damage on account of this delay, these complaints are getting a little too frequent to be ignored. It is asserted that too much rain has fallen in many sections and that fields have been too wet to be worked or, where plowing has already been done, that rains have washed the soil.

The cold weather which has prevailed of late has worked no harm to the planter, but it probably has prevented him from planting too early, to his own loss. The necessity of replanting this year would be a misfortune, as there is so much complaint of bad seed that it is very likely that the more fortunate sections will have to furnish seed for all, and a shortage of seed might result from the failure of the first planting to germinate.

A report from Texas says that in a test of seed fertility, 70 per cent was bad. While this is extreme and hardly to be relied upon as a fair test for even a part of the State, it is the kind of a report that may cause a demand for seed before the first planting from farmers who deem it a useless expense to experiment with doubtful seed.

Planting Probably Late.

In Southern Texas planting is begun on the average about March 15. In most other sections of the belt about the first week in April. Reports say that plowing has been completed in only a very limited section of the cotton belt and this means that the crop is already a little late.

Again, however, let us remember that many persons who are regarded as cotton cultivation experts contend that our average date of planting would better be at least a week later than the present ruling date and so be nearer the safety line so far as freezes are concerned.

The cotton trade waits on these weather reports. Opinions are being formed that will make prices for months hence and for this reason it cannot be too often repeated that traders should keep their minds free from premature judgment based on reports of a crop that is not yet in the ground.

Present prices, as far as may be seen, are based on supply and demand. This is said without regard to the New York contract market, but with all regard to the spot markets where the sales are made to satisfy a legitimate demand. Sales for the purpose of raising money are not being made, nor are purchases being made for speculative purposes. Some buyers, whose policy it is to carry stocks at all times, buy as they ship, and that is the nearest approach to buying without orders at present.

The fact that prices are maintained during a slack period is a sign of strength in the market. How far prices have been affected by the big India crop is not easy to say, but it is significant that the greatest demand for American cotton has come from England, the greatest user of India cotton.

Exports are increasing daily in comparison with last season. After this time last year about 1,500,000 bales were exported. At the present rate, this will be greatly exceeded. If, however, the export movement from now on only keeps pace with last season, the total will be well above 9,000,000 bales. Stock of American in Europe is slightly under the stock of last season. The stock afloat is some 200,000 bales larger.

Manufacturers Satisfied.

Reports from Manchester are a little more cheerful. American spinners are doing a good business and manufacturers, as a rule, seem satisfied with the business being done.

Reports from the export dry goods market are about the same as last week, as far as prices go. Some better inquiry from China and the Red Sea countries is reported. Manufacturers are not inclined to shade prices, although doing so would effect sales of some considerable volume.

The stocks of cotton in spinners' hands are not large and they will need cotton from time to time to fill in the gaps.

While just at the present time prices are not affected except in that market, the situation in New York commands attention of the trade. The situation there has provoked legislators to frame bills which, although aimed to correct abuses in New York, will affect the whole method of cotton trading now in vogue. Like most troubles of this kind, to some people the remedy seems worse than the disease. Such, however, is not the case. Great changes have been made, and can be made again, in methods of trading without any dire results except to those who have offended. Efforts are being made to bring this trade back to its legitimate use. If this is successful, the benefit will be to the whole trade; if unsuccessful, further legislation is probable and that may mean abolition of any except cotton exchanges which are bona fide cotton markets.

BEEF PRICES IN SHARP SLUMP ON LIBERAL SUPPLY

Prime Quality Steers Were Lacking in Desired Quantity—Decline Is General.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	11,509	10,407	10,872
Hogs	45,000	51,206	37,709
Sheep	8,500	10,192	10,831
Horses and mules	3,200	3,174	2,215

Receipts of cattle the past week were fairly generous, as compared with the runs of a week ago and the corresponding time last year. Beef steers were in generous supply throughout the period. Prime quality, however, was lacking, as the big end of each day's showing was of medium to good grade. Aside from the initial session the week was one of declines. Monday's market was strong to a dime higher. Dating from Tuesday, however, as the runs continued fairly generous, market became weaker and prices on best steers were a dime lower and medium grades 15@25c lower. Bulk of the week's steer showing went at $7.50@8.65.

Trade in butcher cattle was also on a slow, uneven basis all week. The supply was of right fair volume and, as the demand was not very heavy, some of the losses were due to this cause. Choice, yearling heifers were in request at all stages of the week and sold strong. Bulk of medium heifers, however, were mostly 10@15c lower. Best heifers sold at $8@8.75, medium kinds at $7@7.90 and fair grades at $6@6.75.

Cows, Too, Closed Lower.

Cows were strong during the forepart of the week, but closed 10@15c lower. Best cows made $6.75@7.50, medium kinds $5.75@6.50, cutters at $4.75@5.25 and canners at $4.25@4.50.

Bulls reflected no change during the week.

Vealers opened on a steady basis, but later in the week declined 25@50c. The early top was $9 and late summit $8.75.

Stock steers of good grade were in demand all during the week and sold steady, best kinds bringing $7@7.85. Feeders were largely 10@15c lower, declining in sympathy with medium grade killing steers.

Receipts in the quarantine division were of good volume all week. It was a toss-up between Texas and Southeastern states as to which contributed the bulk of the supply. Steers predominated in each day's run. The first complete trainload of South Texas grass steers, of 17 cars, was received last week. There was a narrow demand for steers all during the week and prices were off in most cases 15c. The grass steers from Texas brought $6.60@7.25. A load of Mississippi corn and meal fed steers made $7.80, a new year's record. There were hardly enough canners on hand to test the strength of the market and prices were unchanged. The same was true of yearlings and heretics.

Hog Market Highest in West.

The hog trade, while not materially higher, averaged a little better than the week previous and was the highest in the West, most days the top being 5@10c above the top in Chicago. It was the outside demand that gave the market its strength, as the packers were bearish and hard to deal with all week and paid the higher prices only when compelled to do so in order to get any hogs at all.

The top ranged between $8.80@8.95 all week, which shows but little fluctuations, while the bulk of the hogs went at $8.65@8.80. Good grade hogs weighing around 200 pounds, and some under that figure, were best sellers and brought top prices right along, but still the good heavy hogs were ready sale at good high figures. Light mixed hogs were slow sale at all times.

Best shipping and butcher hogs found sale at $8.80 and upwards, while the plain and mixed grades went at $8.60@8.80 as a rule and the rough heavy packers at $8.25@8.60. Best lights under 165 pounds sold at $8.50@8.85; fair grades, $8@8.40; best pigs under 125 pounds brought $7.90@8.40; fair to medium kinds, $7.35@7.85, and the poor grades, $6.50@7.25, with some of the real common ones selling under $6.50.

Sheep in Brisk Demand.

The supply of sheep was pretty light each day. However, this is no more than what is to beexpected at this season, when native offerings are very scarce and the supply must rely entirely on arrivals from Colorado or on Western fed in local territory or Nebraska and Iowa. The demand was good all week and as a result prices were slightly on the gain most of the time.

Lambs made a gain during the week of around 25c, the best selling at $7.65@8. However, it was the middle of the week before any reached $8. Fair to medium lambs sold largely at $7.25@7.60, and the culls and other common kinds $6@7. Yearlings were very scarce all week and sold at $6.50@7 as a rule. A few heavy ones that were not as fat as they should have been went at $6.25@6.50.

Most of the mutton sheep sold at $5.50@5.75, while a few real good ones went around $6, but they were wethers as a rule. Best fat wethers sold at $6.25. Clipped Western wethers sold at $5.75. Stockers and good choppers brought $4@4.40, fair stockers $3.50@4, and bucks $5@5.25.

Horses Sell Well; Mules Pick Up.

Last week was one of the best all-around weeks the horse market has witnessed in some time. There was a good supply of the right kinds and prices were on a shade higher basis. Eastern buyers were plentiful and they took good quality kinds of chunks and drafters at prices satisfactory to shippers. The Southern trade was very good, as there was a large attendance of buyers on the market each day and they purchased large supplies at values quoted as being higher than they have been in some time. More of this class of material would have been disposed of had it been available.

The mule trade showed a little sign of strength and a few more were disposed of than there has been in some time. The trade, although it seems low, is up to the usual standard for this period of the year and values are on the right order when the good quality kinds are put on the market. Nothing but the best quality kinds will find steady sales.

The current ebbed and flowed in the wheat market last week, but final prices slightly favored the bears.

Back of the sentiment for lower prices was a crop outlook for winter wheat that has seldom if ever been equaled at this season of the year, and on a record breaking acreage that assures a record yield, if the present prospect is maintained until harvest.

Of course the trade will have to contend with reports of bug damage, dry weather reports and wet harvests, but these occur every year, and outside of dry weather may be classified as commission house ammunition for speculators, rather than actual crop making price factors.

In Kansas and the Southwest there have been reports of a lack of spring moisture, but in the late week, the weather map was more favorable and Kansas and Nebraska had seasonable showers. A general rain in the Southwest, however, would greatly benefit the crop, although so far there are no indications that the wheat plant has been actually damaged by lack of moisture.

From the statistical position wheat, especially the May delivery, looks to be in a strong position. The domestic visible supply is well under a year ago, and from this time forward the supply should deminish rapidly, if movements of past years are to be considered. The European visible also is well under last year's, and stocks in domestic primary markets are small.

Chicago has a supply considerable under last year, and St. Louis stocks are practically nil. Kansas City stocks are over last year, but the demand is such that the Southwestern market may be the only center with wheat to sell in the near future, and if so a scramble for holdings at that point may result.

Export demands are fair, but the small exportable surplus of wheat in the Argentine, may at any time cause a better inquiry for American wheat, and if so supplies in elevators and second-hands would run down very quickly.

In Chicago the wheat supplies are held by interests that in the past have made a market for their holdings, especially when the statistical position of the market is strong, as it is at present.

"This raises the question of what the outcome of the May option will be, as the trade admits there is a large sleeping short interest in the delivery, caused by the perfect "scenery" over the winter wheat belt.

Corn Market Irregular.

Corn shorts run to cover, despite easy cables, and prices jumped over 1 cent in Monday's market. A strong cash demand caused the upturn. Later, prices were irregular on shipments of Argentine corn to the United States.

Liverpool weekly stocks of wheat increased 175,000 bu and corn decreased 78,000 bu. Wheat stocks this week are 2,605,000 bu and corn 2,268,000 bu.

The domestic wheat visible decreased 1,677,000 bu for the week; corn 187,000 bu, oats 145,000 bu.

News and Features of the POULTRY WORLD

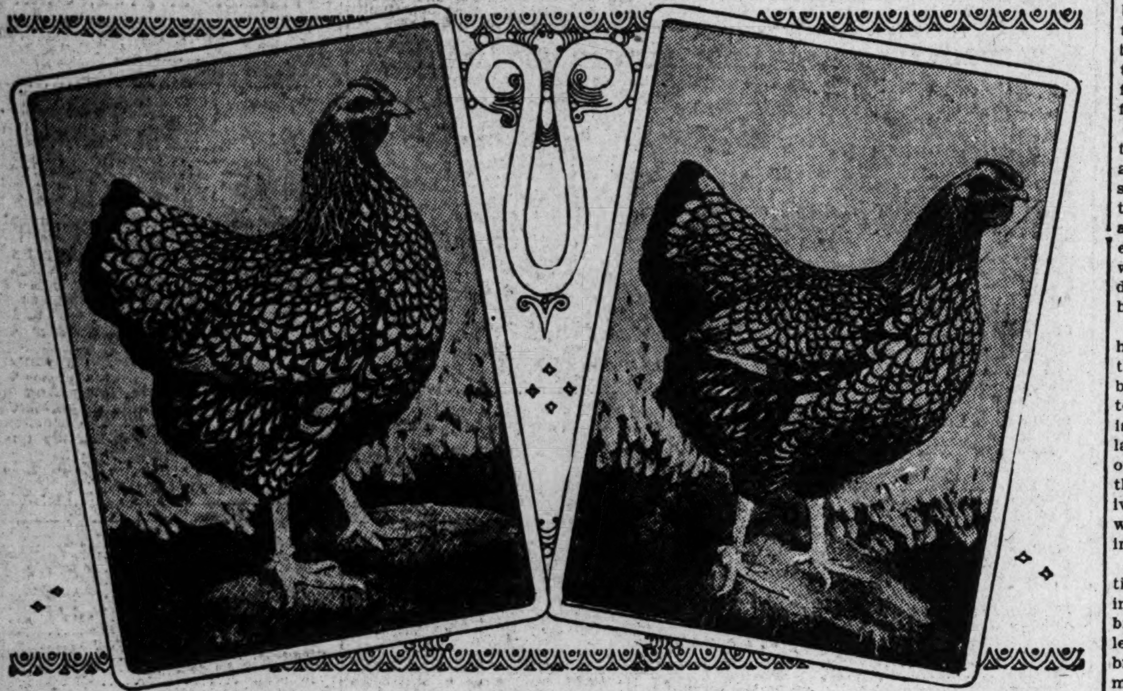
Former Secretary St. Louis Poultry Association.

American and English Types of the Splendid Laying Silver Wyandottes



SILVER WYANDOTTES are the most difficult variety of Wyandottes to breed to conform with the standard. The English breeders have been very successful in perfecting the color and markings of the plumage, but have sacrificed type in doing it. The specimen on the left is American bred and shows the necessary curves in the different sections of the body. The specimen on the left was imported from England and has excellent color and markings, but lacks in Wyandotte type as compared with the American bird. High-class exhibition specimens of this breed are very difficult to produce and command high prices, single birds often selling for $100. They are excellent layers, especially in winter. A pen of Silver Wyandottes won the national egg-laying contest in 1912, was second in 1913, and won the Australian contest in 1904.

Make Chicks Scratch, It Means Good Health

As exercise is essential to the health of chickens, everything possible should be done to induce activity from the time they are 3 days old. Their quarters should be littered to a depth of two inches with short cut clover or alfalfa, and in this litter most of their food should be scattered or buried.

Soft food should always be fed in troughs, not scattered in the litter, but all foods that are fed in a dry state should be thoroughly mixed in the litter. When this is done, the chickens are forced to scratch for their food and exert themselves or remain hungry, which overcomes one of the greatest drawbacks in the artificial methods of brooding chickens.

The chicks without a natural mother have a tendency to remain inactive—they will crouch in a corner of the brooder, drink too much water and eat too much soft food when no exercise is provided. The lack of exercise is largely responsible for the vast number of chicks that are lost every year, and the breeder who keeps his chicks active from morning until night is the one who makes a success of artificial rearing.

Many brooders are made in two sections without an outside run, which is indispensable in successful rearing. A brood of 50 chicks should have a run at least four feet square attached to the brooder, and in this run they should be made to scratch in litter for all of the dry food they get.

Poultry Problems Solved

Pigeon Papers.

Can you give me the names and addresses of two or three pigeon journals?—Subscriber.

Write to E. C. Moody, secretary of the Missouri Pigeon Association, 1316 Sidney street, St. Louis, Mo.

Egg Eating.

I have several sitting hens that are eating their eggs. Is it because they are not getting the proper food? Please tell me what to do.—T. F. B., Elvins, Mo.

Hens learn to eat their eggs when they are accidentally broken in the nest, or when they fall on the floor and break. Trim the ends of the beaks almost to the quick. This will prevent the hens from pecking the eggs. Darken the nests as much as possible and the hens will forget the habit.

Duty and Brokerage.

I am advised by the express company here that duty and brokerage is assessable on poultry shipments into the United States from Canada, not only on poultry for market, but for fancy purposes. Please advise if this is correct and what rate of duty and brokerage applies on fancy poultry and eggs for hatching?—J. H. W., Fort Wayne, Ind.

No duty is assessed on fancy poultry for breeding purposes or eggs for hatching that are imported into this country and no brokerage is necessary when shipments are consigned to a port of entry. As Fort Wayne is not a port of entry, it will be necessary for you to pay a brokerage charge to have your shipment cleared at the port of entry and forwarded to its final destination.

Large Eggs.

I would like to know if you have any record of the largest hen egg. I have a Minorca hen that layed an egg March 5 that weighed 5 ounces and measured 7 inches in circumference. I think this is a record egg for size.—F. T., Benton, Ill.

Minorcas lay the largest eggs of any variety of poultry. Abnormal eggs have been reported from time to time by different breeders but we have kept no record of the sizes.

Feather Eating Hens.

Will you kindly let me know what is wrong with my hens? They are losing the feathers under their necks. They seem to pick them off themselves.—E. A. W., St. Louis.

Lack of animal matter in the food and no exercise will cause chickens to eat feathers from one another. Trim the sides of their necks until you can see through from one side to the other. Feed them a little beef scrap twice a week and make them scratch all the grain they get and they will discontinue this habit very soon.

Cold Eggs.

I have a hen that had been sitting for 10 days when she escaped from her nest and went back to her original nest. When I discovered it the eggs were cold. Do you think the eggs will be spoiled?—R. F. S., St. Louis.

It depends on how long the eggs were left uncovered and what the temperature was. Would suggest that you keep the eggs covered for 11 days longer. It might be possible that the germs are not killed.

C. M. W., Webster Groves, Mo.: Your hen was ruptured and died from the loss of blood. Laying hens often do this when confined without exercise.

Mark the cockerel that crows first this spring. He will be early maturing and is likely to be the strongest breeder you'll get.

HIS BACKYARD FLOCK PAYS HIM IN SATISFACTION

Man Who "Has Not Lost Anything" Warns Against Dreams of Wealthy.

By E. W. DETERMANN
Of Vincennes, Ind.

Have you ever read advertisements to the effect that hundreds of dollars can be made raising poultry, right at your home, in your back yard? (Like the mushroom and ginseng promises.)

I believe I speak for hundreds who have tried the venture, that big money cannot be made in poultry raising on a small scale, special cases excepted. With me it is a fancy and at least I have not lost any money in the venture and it is nice to have a fresh-laid egg and a springer that you raised, according to your own notion, and the whole is worth while to raise poultry of your own.

The main thing, however, is to run the hennery on a scientific basis. First, get standard-bred birds that were hatched in March and if possible from hens that are 2 years old, mated with a male 1 year old. As for myself, I like the barred Plymouth Rock the best, as it seems, taking many points in consideration, to be the best for a back yard.

Feeding is expensive if you have to buy the ready-mixed poultry food or grain. Table scraps are good, especially if it contains a little meat; this will lessen the expense. An especially good food is sprouted oats, especially in winter time. This is relished by young and old and the hen will compensate you by laying an extra egg when they cost 5 cents each.

Variety of food is the essence of success. Housing is another point worthy of consideration. The more snugly they are housed, especially in winter, the better for them, although the house should have good front ventilation toward the south. Do not forget to give plenty of fresh water. Cleanliness is important, especially where chickens are confined.

Chicks should not be fed for the first 40 or 48 hours, as enough yolk is retained in them for nourishment for that period. Then I feed them hard-boiled eggs, crumbled up with shell, for the first three days, with a little dry bread crumbs, then ordinary good chick feed, containing less than 3 per cent of corn. Later a little lettuce, cabbage, sprouted oats, ground bone, shorts, bran, charcoal and grit.

The point is not to feed them soft or sloppy food, as so many do, or use to do, as this often causes white diarrhea that is contagious and often destroys an entire flock.

Success can be attained by close application, by keeping poultry in a back yard. It is a venture like any other business, the closer you watch it the more success you will achieve. Neglect means ruin.

OUSTED CHICAGO SCHOOL DIRECTORS WIN POINT

New Members Appointed by Mayor Yield to Ouster Order Pending Appeal.

CHICAGO, March 28.—Chicago's educational system came before the courts today when the four members of the Board of Education recently appointed by Mayor Harrison assured Judge Foell that they would make no further attempt to participate in board meetings until their appeal from his adverse decision was determined. Because of their yielding a contempt rule against them was suspended. The four old trustees ousted by Mayor Harrison because they voted against the retention of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young as Superintendent of Schools, then announced that they would take their old places at the next meeting of the board.

Recently Judge Foell ruled that the Mayor had no right to accept resignations which were filed by the four board members before they took office. The terms of the old members may expire before the appeal from Judge Foell is decided.

SUB-CONTRACT FOR CHICAGOANS OK'D BY CAPITOL BOARD

Long Fight Over Equipment For New Building Causes Stormy Meeting.

ONE MEMBER DISSENTS

Commission Will Approve Materials, and Missouri Products Will Likely Be Used.

After a long-drawn-out discussion among the members, the Capitol Commission of Missouri yesterday approved the subcontract of the Hanley-Casey Co. of Chicago for installation of the mechanical equipment in the new Capitol building at Jefferson City.

The approval of the subcontract was strongly opposed by J. A. C. Hiller, one of the commission. His principal objection was that it was going to outsiders, in violation of the spirit of the law which provides that Missouri materials be used in construction of the building wherever possible.

The subcontract was let to the Hanley-Casey Co. by K. C. Gill of Cleveland, successful bidder on the general contract. He has authority to let all subcontracts, subject to approval of the commission.

Fight Is Bitter.

The four members of the commission, E. W. Stephens, Theodore Lacoff, A. A. Speer and Mr. Hiller, met at the Planters Hotel Thursday night to pass on the Hanley-Casey subcontract. Owing to the bitterness of the fight over the approval of the contract, it was not until 4:30 p. m. yesterday that the commission finished its work and adjourned to meet next Wednesday in Jefferson City. No statement will be given out relative to the St. Louis meeting, but the minutes will speak for themselves as soon as they are entered.

The minutes will show who voted for the contract, and who against it. As Hiller announced before the meeting that he would oppose the approval of the contract, it is apparent that the remainder of the members voted in favor of it. The contract will amount, in round figures, to about $245,000.

Has Power to Specify.

The impression prevails, from statements dropped by different members of the commission and contractors soliciting orders for materials, that the Hanley-Casey Co. will be required to purchase most of the materials from Missouri manufacturers or jobbers. The commission intends to require that all materials used in fulfilling the contract shall be approved before they are installed. In this way the commission will have the power practically to specify Missouri materials.

There was no discussion of the stone to be used in the building. The commission had previously declared that it would not accept stone from the Ste. Genevieve quarries, from which Gill had made arrangements to get it.

MOTHERS TO BE TAUGHT HOW TO REAR BABIES

Visiting Nurse Association Instructing Parents and Their Older Children.

A new and interesting department of work recently has been entered into by the Visiting Nurse Association, through an auxiliary board, which takes care of babies.

The object of the board is to educate mothers to care for babies in the right way. This includes instruction in how to bathe a baby, how to feed him and the kind of food to give, and how to use the scales in weighing.

In connection with the educational work done with the parents, "Little Mothers' Clubs" are formed in the neighborhoods. These are made up of young children in the families where there are babies. They are instructed in caring for the baby much in the same way as the mothers, and made efficient helpers in the households.

Daily visits by the trained nurses of the association are made to the homes where there are new babies.

The officers of the board are Mrs. Edmund Brown, chairman; Mrs. John W. Day, first vice-president; Miss Elizabeth Moore, secretary; Mrs. F. W. Shipley, treasurer. Mrs. J. B. Shapleigh, 4950 Berlin avenue, president of the association states that the board is seriously handicapped in its undertaking in behalf of the child life of the poor communities, by lack of necessary funds.

DEATH SENTENCE ASKED FOR SLAYER OF WOMAN

Attorney Says John B. Koetters Lured Mrs. Kraft to Chicago.

CHICAGO, March 28.—The death penalty was demanded for John B. Koetters by Stephen Malato, assistant State's Attorney, today. Malato declared that it had been proved that Koetters lured Mrs. Emma Kraft of Cincinnati, here and that he killed her, and that there had been no extenuation of the crime.

The case is expected to go to the jury Tuesday.

Malato began his argument for the prosecution today. He declared that Koetters had admitted having robbed Mrs. Kraft of $1700 which she had intrusted to him and that he lured her and killed her with a hammer to get rid of her and to obtain whatever she had left of $2000 for which she sold her property a few days before.

WHAT SHALL I give her? A diamond ring, of course, from Loftis Bros. & Co., 2d floor 308 N. 6th st. Eight months to pay.

WIFE, A WAINWRIGHT, HAS MARQUIS EJECTED

Paris Court Also Gives Custody of Children to Woman Sued by Papal Nobleman.

By Associated Press.

PARIS, March 28.—The Civil Tribunal of the Seine today ejected de Amoapartment here the Marquis de Amodio, whose wife was Miss Josephine Wainwright, who says she is a distant cousin of Ellis Wainwright, former St. Louis brewer. He was ordered also to give the three children of the marriage into the custody of the Marchioness.

There have been domestic difficulties in the family of the Marquis and Marchioness for some time. Recently when the Marchioness was away on a visit the Marquis applied to the courts for a judicial separation. On her return to her apartment on the Avenue Henri Martin, the Marchioness found that her husband had installed himself there. She immediately brought proceedings to obtain possession of her home and charge of her three children. This was today ordered by the Judge.

The title of the Marquis in a papal one. The marriage took place 11 years ago.

Ellis Wainwright, who lived in Paris nine years while a bribery indictment against him was pending in St. Louis, had a fight on the Boulevard des Italiens with the Marquis in 1909. It was said to be over $2800 which the Maruis owed the American brewer. Wainwright, it was learned today, has been trying unsuccessfully of late to collect this debt.

St. Louis relatives of Ellis Wainwright have said several times they never heard of a Josephine Wainwright who married a papal marquis.

FRIENDS THINK COTTON FUTURES BILL WILL PASS

Measure Is Carried in Senate After Striking Out of Pooling Agreement Clause.

WASHINGTON, March 28.—Friends of the cotton futures bill, re-passed by the Senate today with the amendment legalizing cotton pools stricken out, predicted tonight it would pass the House before adjournment. Its course in the House had been smoothed, it was claimed, by the action of the Senate in striking out the pooling agreement clause upon request of Senator Smith of South Carolina, author of the original measure.

Senator Smith said today he would seek in the agricultural appropriation bill to obtain $100,000 to place upon every primary market in the South samples of the Government grades established by the bill, and also samples of the yarn spun from the various grades.

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear son, Albert Donohue, who departed this life March 8, 1911.

When all things else decay,
Our love for you will keep green
And never fade away.

Sadly missed by

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear beloved son and brother, Joseph Vasterling, who departed this life March 28, 1911.

Three sad years have passed away,
And time brings no relief,
Joseph, how we miss you more and more,
With sad and bitter grief.

Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER AND BROTHERS.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Mary A. Crump (nee Poial), who departed this life March 24, 1914.

Silently the shades of evening
Gather around our lonely door,
Silently they bring before us
The dear face we see no more.

So often we go to your grave,
Lingering there, trying to be brave,
But oh, 'tis hard to bear
To go away and leave you there.

Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dearly beloved daughter and sister, Mathilda Merkel, who departed this life March 29, 1913.

The moon and stars are shining
Upon a lonely grave,
Where sleeps our dear good daughter,
Whom we loved but could not save.

One year ago she passed away,
We grieved when she departed;
Time was too short to say farewell
To the ones she thought of and loved so well.

We miss her coming footsteps,
We miss her everywhere;
Home is not what it used to be
Since our dear Mathilda is not there.

Sadly missed by
PARENTS, BROTHERS, SISTER AND THOSE WHO LOVED HER.

A HIGH PRICE FOR "CERTAINTY"

WHY NOT PAY A REASONABLE PRICE FOR A REASONABLE PROBABILITY?

If you were guaranteed that 10 insertions of a classified "ad" would find a buyer for your real estate, at a fair price, you'd be willing to pay the highest advertising rate for these 10 insertions ever paid anywhere for like publicity—wouldn't you?

You can't buy CERTAINTY in classified advertising. Life, business, bothersome problems, would be too simple to be interesting—if you could buy a result at a stipulated price.

But in using classified advertising as your "salesman" for real estate, you are as near to "certainty" as to results as you can possibly get when the right medium is used—the Post-Dispatch in St. Louis and suburbs.

With such borrowing arrangements you can confidently tackle the lifting of your mortgage and know positively that at a certain fixed period your home will be entirely free from debt.

National Types of Young Womanhood in St. Louis

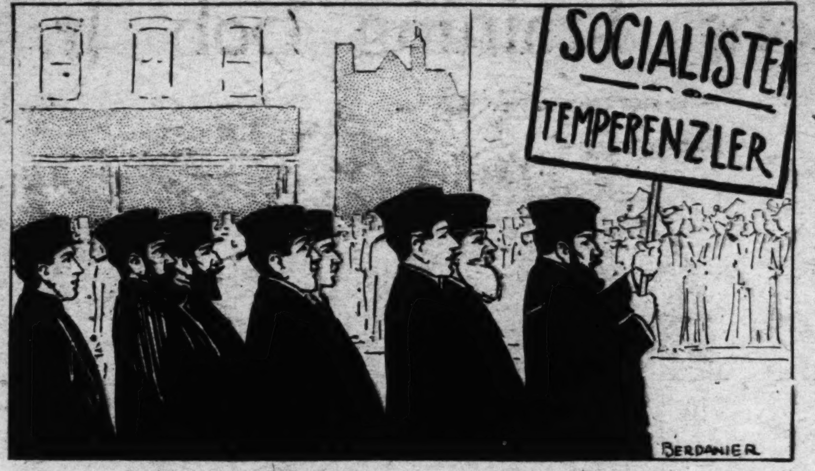
RUSSIAN

Like all other great American cities, St. Louis has its fair daughters representing most of the races of Europe. Although they have become loyal Americans, they still, in many cases, are typical of the beauty of the lands from which they are derived. This photograph was found in a St. Louis photograph gallery.

WHAT EUROPE IS DOING TO ALCOHOL

Scandinavians are pronounced prohibitionists and only the veto power of Russia saves the liquor traffic in Finland; England's gradual prohibitory law, passed by the Commons, defeated by the brewing Lords

France is teaching soldiers to avoid alcoholic drinks, which caused rejection for unfitness of 55,093 recruits out of 275,234 in one year; Kaiser issues warnings to his army on the growth of intemperance

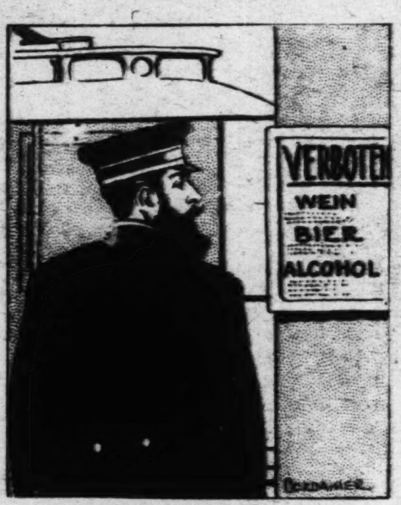


Socialists in several European countries are advocates of total abstinence and in parades have called for a general boycott on spiritous liquors.

AMERICANS who have believed that virile prohibition sentiment exists almost exclusively in the United States, doubtless will be amazed at the astounding growth of that sentiment in Europe. Regardless of the merits of the opposing theories, not even the most zealous pro-alcohol advocate can deny that the total abstinence movement is growing with wonderful rapidity throughout the civilized world.

That the liquor interests are alive to their danger is made evident by a corresponding rapid growth of national, international, sectional and local organizations, prepared to battle against propaganda that threatens the very life of the business. The struggle has resolved itself into campaigns of publicity, each side doing the best it can to gain proselytes by the persuasiveness of its reasoning.

The latest broadside in the literary struggle on behalf of the prohibitionists is a book by Ernest Gordon, called "The Anti-Alcohol Movement in Europe." Gordon has written various prohibitionist brochures. He has lived in Europe for many years. In this book he gives what purports to be a scientific history of recent European anti-alcohol events. As a challenge to persons who might question his allegations of fact, he tells the sources from which he derived important bits of information. These sources include Government statistical reports as well as generous citations to the bibliography of the question.



Berlin street railway company has posted placards forbidding the use of alcoholic beverages during work hours.

For a disinterested study of the book, allowance must be made for the writer's personal bias. Outside of that, however, there is an abundance of abstract data revealing the magnitude of the movement.

These citations show that in Germany, France, Austria, Italy, England, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland and even in Russia, where the Government derives an enormous profit from the spirits monopoly, the prohibition sentiment has grown amazingly within the last few years. The author declares that in Germany alone, where in 1893 there was but one known abstainer south of the Elder, in 1912 a local option petition was sent to the Reichstag with 500,000 names, filling 19 bound volumes.

The Scandinavians, it is shown, lead the way. In 1909 Iceland passed a general prohibition law. The Faroes have prohibited the public sale of liquor. In Denmark a local option law has passed the popular assembly, only to be killed in the upper house. The Finnish Legislature twice has passed prohibition laws which were vetoed by the Russian Government. In both Sweden and Norway Government commissions are drafting prohibitory laws.

In Belgium, Holland and Switzerland, the sale of absinthe has been prohibited in spite of the opposition of the liquor interests. In France, the home of absinthe, a petition for its prohibition had more than half a million signers. In Italy leading scientists have been investigating the alcohol question. Two Italian scientists of high repute, but of philosophical views as wide apart as the earth's poles, have gone on record as opposed to the use of alcohol. One is Dr. Marchiafava, the Pope's chief physician, and the other is Dr. Paolo Amaldi of Florence, a noted Socialist.

In Germany several health insurance socities are writing policies at higher rates for drinkers than for non-drinkers and have begun systematic campaigns against liquor indulgence among the workingmen. One of them, the Krankhassen of Westphalia, prints anti-alcohol matter on the backs of its receipts.

In all the Berlin street railway stations, Gordon points out, the street car company has posted placards forbidding the use of all alcoholic beverages, including beer, during work hours. Similar orders are published in the railroad stations of Saxony. The Vienna street railway company gives to each employe a pamphlet: "What Railway Men Should Know About Alcohol." The directors of the Alsace and Lorraine railroads have forbidden the use of alcohol by their employes. The Bavarian State Railways have permitted anti-alcohol placards to be placed in all railway stations and similar placards are posted in 150 Wurtemburg depots.

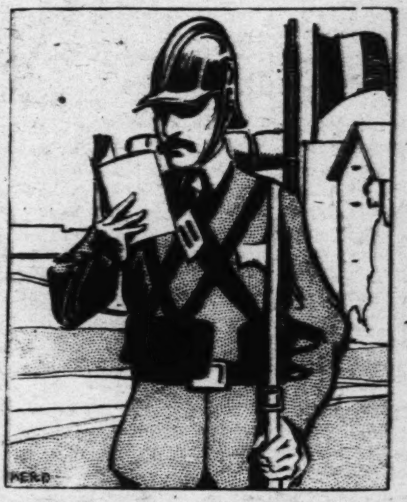
A congress for the Alcohol Free Education of the Youth was held in the hall of the Prussian House of Deputies, Berlin, in March, 1913. The honorary president was the German Chancellor himself, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg. Kaiser Wilhelm, in a speech to military students at Muerwik, declared: "A question which lies very much on my heart for my nation is the question of alcohol and of drinking." The great Bebel, the German Socialist, favored abstention from alcohol.

The Princes in the German military school are permitted to have only drinks that are free of alcohol.

The English House of Commons in 1908 passed a bill which would have closed 30,000 saloons within fourteen years. The measure passed the lower house by a vote of 650 to 113. Every member of the Labor party voted for it. It was defeated, however, by the House of Lords. To vote on this bill many Lords appeared in their hall for the first time in several years. Gordon declares that, of the Lords, 130 were either themselves brewers or held shares in brewing or distilling enterprises. The writer adds the further astonishing information 1250 English clergymen hold brewery stock, of a total value of $8,000,000.

The writer admits that the actual consumption of liquor in Europe is still enormous and is even increasing. Of all of Germany's expenditures for food and drink in one year, 27.74 per cent goes for alcohol. According to Dr. von Strauss und Torney, president of the Higher Administrative Court, Berlin has one drink-selling place to every 229 persons or one for every 52 adult men.

Of all the civilized countries, France probably has the largest total alcohol consumption. Gordon estimates one drink shop for 82 persons in the country as a whole. Rouen has one for every 60. There were 447,000 saloons in France in 1907. The author gives figures which, he avers, show that the number of insane persons in France has increased in direct ratio to the increase in the number of saloons.



In the French army the Government has issued an anti-alcoholic catechism to each soldier and has forbidden the sale of liquor in canteens.

The attention of the civilized world has long been turned towards the army-building race between France and Germany which has been going on for almost three decades. Each nation is equipping itself for a great struggle which they expect some day. The question of military efficiency is a vital one in both lands. And, according to Gordon, the army authorities in both countries are giving the closest attention to the alcohol question. Both have been busily engaged for several years in testing the relative efficiency of drinkers and abstainers.

In 1907 the French army rejected as unfit 55,093 out of 275,234 recruits. In the department of the Orne 57 per cent of all recruits were rejected, and, in the Vallee des Voges, 60 per cent. The military authorities of France reckon, according to a prohibitionist journal, that France loses an army corps each year through unfitness traced to alcohol. Gen. Gallifet, "in an interview, after remarking that all serious wounds meant death to a drinking soldier, affirmed that the French race was losing in height, physical force and morale," because of its over-indulgence in alcohol.

The result has been that the French army has seriously undertaken the task of instructing the soldiers on the influence of alcohol on heredity, predisposition to disease and its effects in retarding the healing of wounds. This has been done under direct orders of the Minister of War. Temperance groups are being organized in all regiments, with lectures and anti-alcohol literature provided.

Schools have been organized at the various departmental headquarters. They are attended by officers and enlisted men. Lectures and object lessons are given by Captains and Lieutenants. Placards are posted about the camp warning the men of the evil effects of alcohol. The Government issues an anti-alcohol catechism to each soldier. The book was written by an army officer. In addition, the Government has prohibited the sale of distilled liquors in army canteens.

German officials of the Baltic fleet have issued orders that no more grog shall be issued to the crews. Count von Haeseler, commander of the Sixteenth German Army Corps at Metz and Gen. von Lindequist, commandante of the Eighteenth Corps, have prohibited the sale of spirits in the canteens. Sixty-eight officers and two Admirals in the navy have joined the total abstinence league. Gen. von Deimling, hero of the Herrero African campaign, has joined a similar league. Admiral von Mueller, member of the Emperor's Naval Cabinet, is another total abstainer.

The Princes in the military school at Ploen, the German West Point, are permitted to drink only wine that is alcohol free. The Emperor's address to the students at Muervik has been distributed in 164 regiments of the army. The Ministry of War has ordered distributed to recruits a pamphlet similar to the one issued by the French War Department. This pamphlet does not specifically advocate total abstinence, but it contains such sentences as "What devastation this poison has caused among the German people and still causes!"

In the Swedish army half the regiments have temperance societies. The Swedish Government has prohibited the sale of beer in army canteens. The Austrian War Office was officially represented at the "Third Austrian Anti-Alcohol Day" in 1912. Admiral Montecuculi has announced that wine was to be refused to students of the Marine Academy. The Chief of Staff of the Austrian army, Count von Hotzendorf, is an abstainer. Denmark has suppressed the sale of beer in its army and Russia in its navy.

In Germany, France, Austria, Italy, England, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Finland and Russia, where the Government derives profit from the spirits monopoly, prohibition sentiment has grown amazingly. Where in 1893 there was but one known abstainer south of the Elder, in 1912 a local option petition was sent to the Reichstag with 500,000 names, filling 19 bound volumes.

JUST LIKE JACK LONDON'S NOVEL "THE ABYSMAL BRUTE"

Bob Fitzsimmons Training Bob Jr. to Be the ..White Hope..

Provides first test of eugenics, because boy's mother was an athlete herself while the father was once the world's champion fighter . . .

READERS of the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine will recall Jack London's red-corpuscled novel, "The Abysmal Brute." They will remember the thrilling story of how Pat Glendon, former champion pugilist, reared his son, "Young Pat," in the seclusion of the California mountains, and in the fulness of time sent him forth, a boy with the equipment of a veteran, to battle his way to the heavyweight championship of the world

Whether London relied entirely upon his prolific imagination, or whether he was one of the few acquainted with the facts, his plot has a striking duplicate in real life, with the role of "Old Pat" taken by the famous Bob Fitzsimmons, former champion of the world, and that of "Young Pat" by his son, "Young Bob," a husky youth of 19.

In the little New Jersey hamlet of Dunellen, "Old Bob," as he must now be called, is industriously training his lanky offspring in all the cunning and science of the ring which in 1897 enabled the Australian fighter to win his world-renowned victory over Corbett at Carson City, Nev. "Young Bob," it is reported, has taken to his pugilistic education like a duck to water, and has already acquired a wallop which is said to have accomplished more than once a feat which many famous "pugs" suffered severe punishment in trying to do—the feat of flooring Bob Fitzsimmons.

"The big surprise" is what the proud father predicts will prove the debut of his son in the prize ring. The old fellow's ambition is for the championship belt to be restored once more to the Fitzsimmons family, where he is convinced it rightfully belongs. So firm is this belief that "Old Bob," despising the current crop of "white hopes," recently wished to sally out in his fifty-second year to have one more try at the belt. This undertaking was forbidden, however, by the Boxing Commissioners of New York State.

So that "Old Bob," unable to "come back" himself, will attempt to accomplish the process in the person of his son. The boy already weighs 160 pounds, or two pounds more than his father weighed in the battle in which he overthrew the pride of "Gentleman Jim." The youth also has his father's height: 5 feet 11 3-4 inches. He likewise has the build which won "Old Bob" the nickname of "Lanky Bob"—the stork-like stilts of legs overhung by massive torso, broad chest and mighty arms and shoulders.

The news that "Lanky Bob" is rearing his son to attempt a ring career reduplicating his own will surprise most of the fight fans, to whom the name of Fitzsimmons still has a heroic sound. For the fact was kept secret by the father, who hoped to spring a sensation on the world with "the big surprise," but the cat is now out of the bag, and the public will look forward with a sentimental interest to "Young Bob's" first ring battle.

If ever a man was reared by eugenics for a given career, then "Young Bob" was clearly destined by the new science of well-birth for the prize ring.

"Old Fitz" was one of the most remarkable men, physically, that ever appeared in the world. His gorilla-like arms and shoulders were built at the blacksmith's forge, and with either hand, as numbers of boxers learned to their sorrow, he could deal a blow like that of a piston rod.

His stamina was as wonderful as his strength. At the age of 35 years most ballplayers, whose life is far less strenuous than that of a pugilist, are considered "through," but at that age, Fitzsimmons, after taking a thrashing at the hands of Corbett which would have killed most fighters, outgamed and outfought his taller, heavier and cleverer opponent, and still had vitality enough after 14 terrible rounds, to smash the champion down for the count with his famous solar-plexus stroke. Fitzsimmons was 37 when he in turn lost the championship to Jim Jeffries. Even today, Fitz could undoubtedly give most of our "white hopes" the battle of their lives.

To his marvelous physique and endurance, Fitzsimmons added a pluck and grit which were indomitable. The frightful battering administered to him by Corbett would have taken the heart out of a man as game as a lion. But the more savagely he was beaten, the higher his courage and determination arose. In defeat, at the hands of the gigantic Jeffries, he displayed to the desperate end the same bulldog gameness.

"Young Bob's" mother was, in her way, as remarkable an example of physique and courage as her husband. She was Rose Julian, a trapeze performer, with a figure of robust and perfect proportions. It was said that, like "Lanky Bob," she carried a dangerous wallop in either hand.

The sporting world still remembers how she sat in Fritzsimmons' corner at Carson City throughout the gruelling battle with Corbett, and how, when her husband seemed hopelessly beaten, she spurred him on with Amazonian cries, the most frequent of which was, "Bang him in the slats, Bob!" This was expert advice to the prize fighter to administer his deadly solar-plexus stroke, which was the blow that ended the conflict.

"The most prominent spectator at the ringside," writes Henry Sayers in his somewhat misnamed book, "Fights Forgotten," was Mrs. Fitzsimmons, "who seemed to unite the stoicism of the Spartan mother to the fire of a French revolutionary Amazon." He adds later:

"Mrs. Fitzsimmons, with face flushed but nerves steady, after terrible crises of excitement, yelled to Bob to 'Smash the dandy!'"

There is little doubt that some of the fierce determination which carried "Lanky Bob" through the punishing battle to victory was derived from the encouragement of his termagant wife.

ROBERT FITZSIMMONS SR.

MRS. ROSE JULIAN FITZSIMMONS, former circus athlete, mother of "Young Bob."

Such are the parents of "Young Bob." They chose each other by natural selection, and eugenics was then almost an unknown word; but Galton himself, if he had decided to rear a perfect pugilist, could not have picked "Young Bob's" father and mother more admirably. From both he inherits exceptional bodily strength and stamina, and from both indomitable gameness. The son of the woman who helped Fitzsimmons whip Corbett could scarcely have a "yelllow streak."

Will "Young Bob" complete the parallel with the life of "Young Pat," in London's romance, by achieving as wonderful a ring career as did that youthful hero? It will be remembered that "Young Pat," from his habit of knocking out his opponent with the first blow, gained the nickname of "One-Punch" Glendon.

Some such sobriquet may in time attach itself to "Young Bob," for his father's specialty was his knockout punch.

"He was not a great boxer, in the orthodox sense," writes Sayers, "but his experience of the ring had made him a very tricky fighter, full of surprises and able to use his natural advantages to the utmost. His forte was the knockout blow. He had several deadly hits, and his great play in the ring was to watch the chance of delivering one of these."

"Young Bob's" reach of arm is unusually long, like that of his father. With this advantage of nature, and with the sage advice "Old Bob" can give him, the son should develop a terrible punching power.

At any rate, the sporting fraternity will look forward with unusual attention to "the big surprise," when "Young Bob" makes his first bow in the squared circle, and many will hope that he will be able to repeat, as if in a second edition, the famous ring triumphs of his dad.

Diseases That Kill Doctors

ACCORDING to records compiled by the Journal of the American Medical Association, 2196 physicians died in the United States and Canada in 1913. This mortality rate was lower than for 1912, however.

The percentage is 14.64 per thousand, as against 15.82 figured for the year from 1912 to the beginning of last year. Most of the physicians died from heart disease, pneumonia and senility. Nineteen were murdered. All but two of those who were killed were victims of firearms, and the others clubbed and beaten to death.

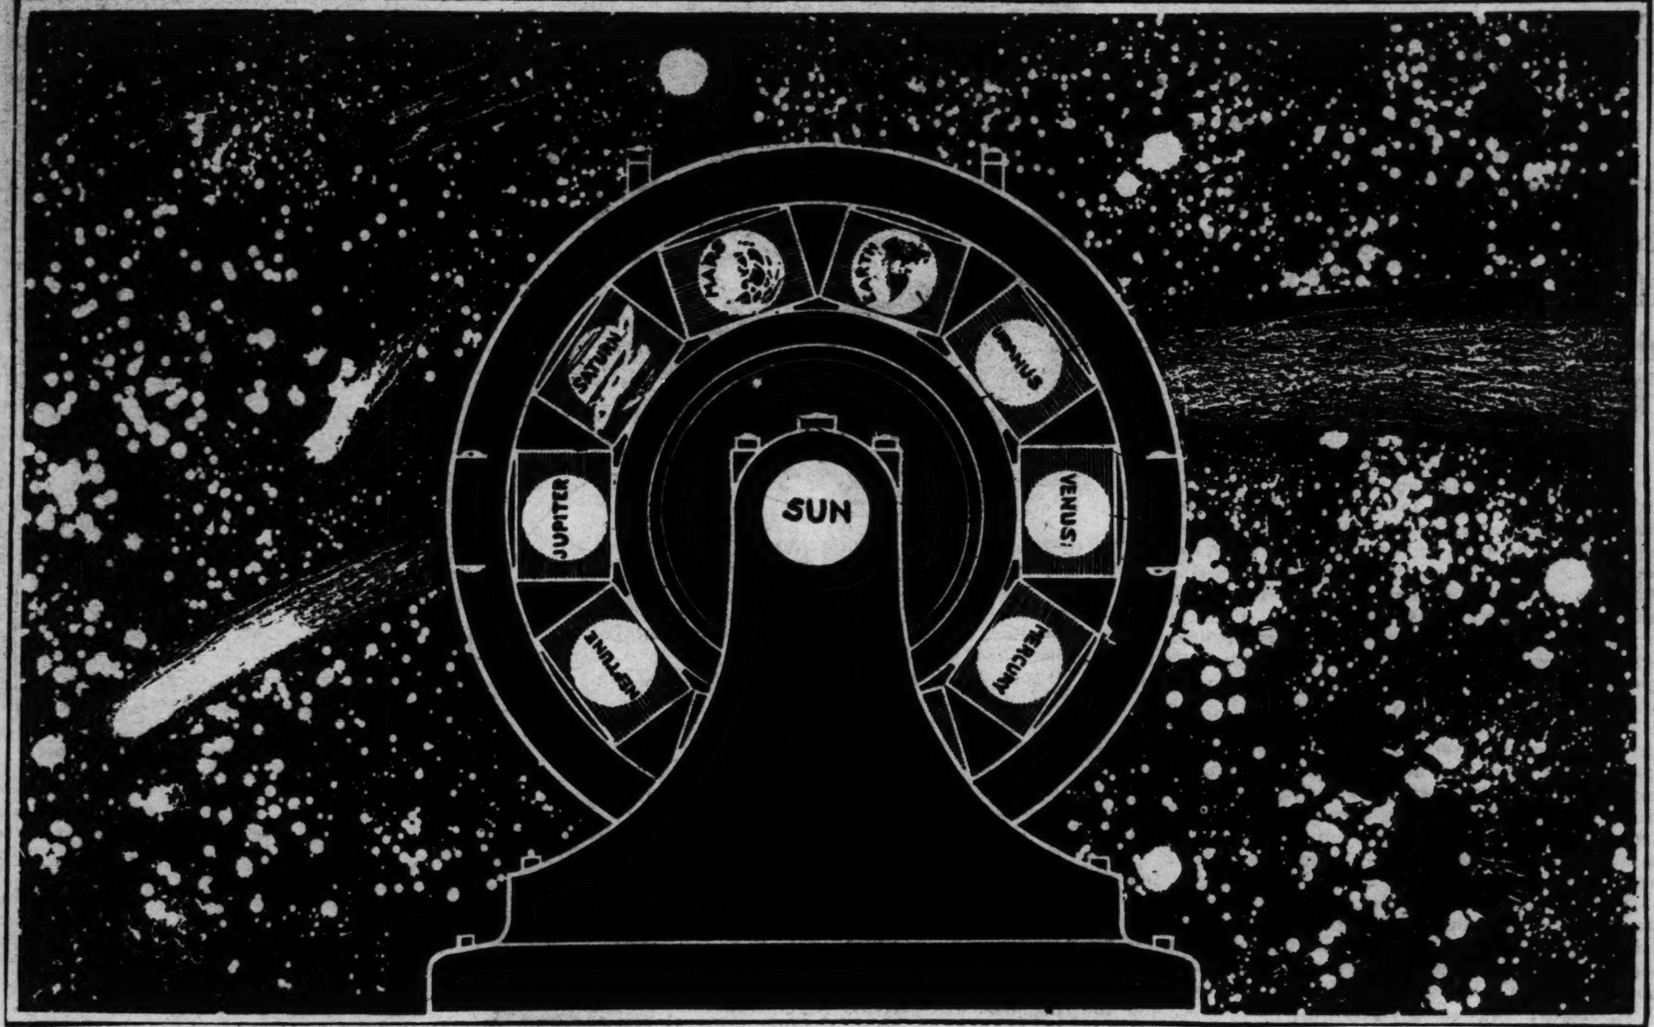
Forty-three were suicides, and eighty-two met their death from unknown causes. Poison took nine lives and automobiles claimed thirty-four. One-hundred and one died from injuries resulting from accidents, not including those killed in automobiles. An explosion and shock from electricity each took one physician; two died from strangulation, and drowning was responsible for the death of eight.

Affections of the respiratory system were among the leading causes that brought the percentage up to 14.64 166 dying from pneumonia and kindred ills.

The average age of those who died last year was 59 years and 7 months. One man had been practising for 73 years and several had had their shingles out for only a few months. In the United States Census Report on mortality in 1911 the death rate for all classes in that part of the country which has registration is given at 14.2 per 1000. This is the lowest rate ever recorded, but the rate has declined since 1880, when it was 19.8.

STARS AND PLANETS ONE GREAT DYNAMO

Scientists Getting Clews to the Mystery of Electricity



And another thing: Investigators are beginning to doubt that the sun is a molten globe radiating enormous heat by combustion—Conditions which seem to show that it may be cold

ONE of the world's great unsolved mysteries is this: What is electricity? We know it will give us light, run machinery and do scores of other things. But we cannot see it nor weigh it. It is as invisible as a thought. It exists—but how? We know the earth is a magnet—but why? The following article tells what several investigators have concluded after years of study and research.

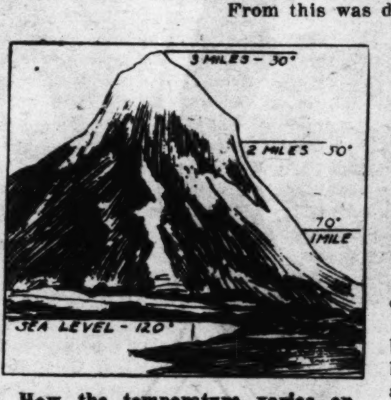
And incidentally, the theory generally accepted that the sun is a molten, burning globe is in danger of demolition.

THE attitude of the scientific world has, for several months, been turned toward the great American observatory on Mount Wilson, where George E. Hale, the director, has been making a series of experiments.

Already the results have been such as to warrant Hale in declaring he has apparently discovered that the sun, the greatest orb in our heavens, source of heat and light, is also the greatest single magnet. While the evidence upon which his conclusions are based seems to be complete, he is continuing the investigation to make sure there is no error.

The work has been done at enormous expense for special apparatus. Scientists are a unit, however, in the belief that the results have more than justified the expenditure, as the answer to one of the greatest riddles of the universe has been brought much nearer.

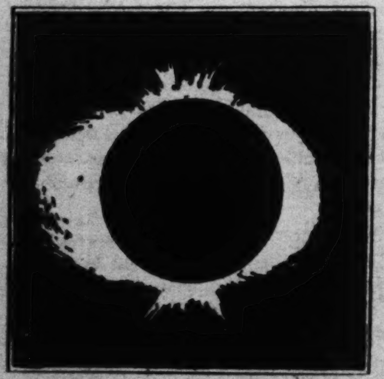
It has long been believed that there has been a connection between the earth's rotation and its magnetism. With the sun proven a magnet, there seems to be no reason to doubt that all the planets are also magnets and that they may derive their magnetic power from their rotation. Once this is accepted as fact, it will open up infinite new fields of philosophic speculation.



How the temperature varies on a mountain peak three miles high at the equator.

This opens to the imagination a picture of the universe as a huge dynamo, the various planets swinging around their suns, each wrapped about its own magnetizing and magnetized coil and generating an all-pervading electric fluid. Thus the world, Saturn, Venus, Mercury, Mars, and the rest of them, transforming force into the terms of electricity, find within themselves sources of energy, heat and light. And this, repeated in hundreds of other solar systems, each group consisting of a great sun and many satellites, makes of space a never-ending source of supply of that most mysterious thing in the world—electricity.

Vagarists have already gone far into pure speculation. One man has evolved a theory in which he reasons that the sun derives its heat and light from electricity and is not itself hot. Another has evolved a whole doctrine of what might be called electric pantheism. To be sure, neither of these men relies much on the accepted principles of physics, but no one ever knows when the accepted theories will be no longer accepted.



The solar corona seen during the total eclipse of the sun on May 28, 1900. Compare with opposite diagram.

Just exactly what magnetic force is, nobody is really sure. In the beginnings of science, it was known that certain metals had the power of attracting or repelling others. Next the mariner's compass was discovered. Then it was found that one bit of magnetic metal would impart its power of magnetism to another which, in turn, became a magnet for a greater or less time.

Then it was discovered that if one took a bar of soft iron, wrapped an insulated wire around it in a given direction, and turned on an electric current, the bar of iron became a magnet. It lost its power of attraction and repulsion soon after the current was turned off. This established beyond dispute that there was some connection between magnetism and electricity, but just what, nobody has been able to discover.

One of the earliest of the magnetic phenomena a student discovers, is what is called "polarization." That is, if you take a bar magnet, one end of it will attract iron particles and the other will then repel the same particles. The poles, were for convenience named North and South, and usually designated as N and S. It was discovered that two N poles have no attraction for each other and that two S poles have no attraction for each other, but that an N pole always has an attraction for an S pole.

Unless deflected by some other magnetic force, the point of a compass will always point approximately north. The north magnetic pole is not identical with the north geographic pole. But the proximity has led scientists to believe that there is some connection between the two. North of the equator, the compass needle dips slightly towards the earth, the dip increasing the further north one goes. South of the equator the reverse occurs until, close to the south magnetic pole, the needle is almost standing on one end, the point away from the earth.

From this was deduced a conclusion that the entire earth was a magnetic field, one theory being that the whole earth-field was the total of all the earth's small magnetic fields. Whether this condition was peculiar to our own planet or was shared by the other planets was not, of course, known.

The recent field of solar investigation was opened up by one of those "scientific accidents," which, apparently trivial in themselves, have often led to the most important discoveries. This particular accident was that a scientist who picked up a photograph of a solar eclipse taken at the Yerkes observatory, May 28, 1900, found something in the sun's corona that reminded him of a picture of magnetized iron filings.

To learn what happens to filings when they are magnetized, one has only to try a simple little experiment. Let him scatter a spoonful of filings on a piece of cardboard and then hold the board over a bar magnet. If he will tap the bar with his finger, he will observe that they seem to have grouped themselves into a series of whorls around a center. While the curves will be much involved, they will seem to follow some general system.

Now when the sun was in total eclipse, a nebulous white cloud was seen around the edges of the shadow. This is what is called the corona, or irregular, radial streams of light. In the Yerkes photograph such a striking resemblance between their whorls and those of the iron filings was noticed, as to lead astronomers into wondering whether they were not produced by the same general cause.

Already a theory had been advanced, in the earth's case, that magnetism might be accounted for as the effect of rapid revolution of electrons within a molecule of matter. From this it was argued that every molecule, therefore, would tend, by gyrostatic action, to set itself with its axis parallel to the earth's axis and that the earth's magnetic field would result from the combined effect of all the molecules.

To test this theory fully by experiments would have required the construction of a body big enough and that could be rotated fast enough. It sounds simple, when put that way, but it is not so simple after all. There isn't a laboratory anywhere on earth that could accommodate such a body at such a velocity.

In such things as this, scientists have the advantage over the rest of humanity. When what they want can't be found on earth, they look for it in the heavens. This time, they determined to make use of the sun.

Their first requirement was an adequate spectrograph, such was not then in existence. It was the construction of this instrument at Mount Wilson that cost so much money and took so much time. The basic principles of the machine are those of the spectrum and the telescope.

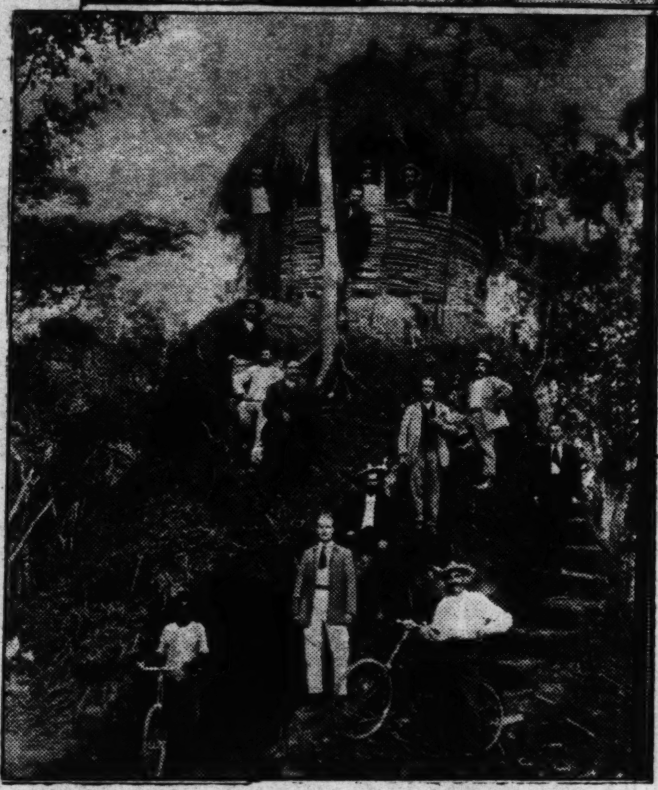
"ALL ABOARD FOR CAPE TOWN!" IN 1916

World's Greatest Undertaking, Next to the Panama Canal

IN two yea[illegible]ists may take train at C[illegible]t, and travel over all - Briti[illegible] of rails and steamers 694[illegible]sing through jungles inf[illegible] fierce beasts and behol[illegible]s like Pyramids, the[illegible] at Zambezi, gold mou[illegible]ns [illegible]nesburg and diamond fields at Kimberley — Gap of only 682 miles still to be bridged.

Blazing the trail of the railroad through a dense jungle infested by savage beasts.



Giant anthill, used as lookout station by surveyors. Thousands of these, 20 to 60 feet high, had to be cleared from the right of way.

WITH the Panama Canal practically completed, the center of the world's engineering stage will now be taken by the Cape-to-Cairo railway in Africa, the only project at present which may compare with the American ditch in grandeur and audacity of undertaking. It is announced that, in the vast distance of 6944 miles between the northeast and southwest corners of the second largest continent only a small gap of 682 miles remains to be bridged. Within two years the traveler may hear in Alexandria the cry of "All aboard for Cape Town!" and climbing in his compartment may begin, over a single system of rails and steamboats, a continuous journey from the Mediterranean to the Cape of Good Hope.

The Panama Canal is a romance of the conquest of tropical disease and of machinery of giant power and hugeness. The Cape-to-Cairo railroad has also its warfare on sleeping sickness, but it is a romance of civilized man's victory over the most savage country now left on the globe. a country still infested by the strongest and fiercest of wild beasts.

On one occasion a construction train was puffing along with a heavy trainload of material near Gwelo, when a full-grown lion was sighted stretched across the tracks and basking comfortably in the sun.

The engine whistled, but the brute only looked up lazily and did not move. The engineer and fireman attempted to drive him away by pelting him with billets of wood, but in vain. The engine had come almost to a standstill when the lion lost his temper. He took a sudden spring at the engine, no doubt regarding it as some new species of enemy, and scratched viciously at its smooth surface, seeking to find a place in which to sink his claws. Again and again the beast sprang, but slipped snarling each time to the ground.

The engineer then realized that the best thing to do was to put on full steam ahead. He did so, with the result that the lion—a magnificent specimen—was cut to pieces under the wheels.

Marauding elephants, as if they had the sagacity to recognize that the coming of the parallel lines of steel spells the end of their wild reign, have torn up the rails, pulled down telegraph wires and upset the telegraph poles. The engineers have frequently come along, only to find all of their workmen up trees, where they had sought shelter from wild beasts.

In Rhodesia, particularly, lions were the cause of anxiety to both workmen and engineers, and strong palisades had to be built about the construction camps to prevent the men from being carried off in their sleep.

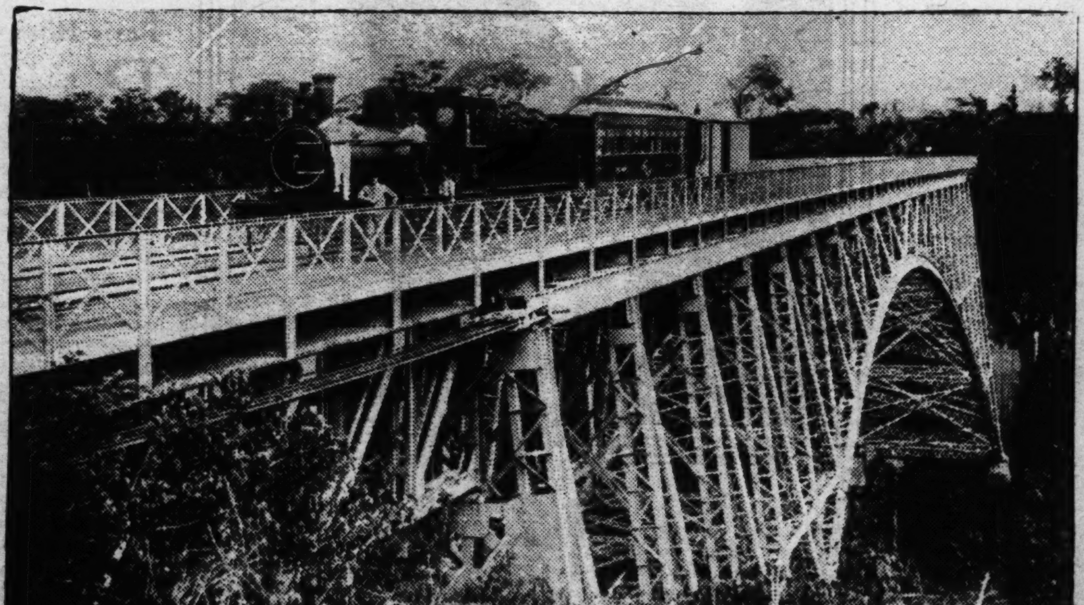
Cattle, also, had to be protected with specially constructed corrals. One engineer, it is related, grew tired of venison from the bush and longed for that British reliance, a mutton chop. So he brought up, at much expense, a flock of 16 sheep and placed them in what was thought to be a lion-proof stockade. That very night two lions broke into the corral and killed every one of the sheep, growling and roaring with a noise that could be heard for miles.

At one place, on the Kafu River, the railroad crosses on a bridge 1900 feet long. The bridge is beside a ford, where the natives still drive their cattle over. From locomotives on the bridge crocodiles, with which the river is infested, have been seen to drag down cattle and even men, and to disappear beneath the surface with their prey.

Four workmen were spiking down rails in broad daylight, when two lions sallied from the surrounding jungle and attacked them. Fortunately, an engineer armed with a rifle was close at hand and dispatched the two animals.

In the Congo hundreds of anthills, from twenty to sixty feet in height had to be removed from the pathway of the rails. As white ants destroy everything but iron and steel, in this region the crossties had to be made of steel, and the telegraph posts were armored with iron sheeting.

While passing through Rhodesia, a traveler relates, the engine struck a bull elephant that had decided to contest the right of way. As the train was running at full speed, both locomotive and elephant were derailed. A few days later the local station master had scraped the gigantic skull, filled it with earth and set it on the station platform as a sort of jardiniere to hold geraniums.



Steel bridge, highest in the world, over Zambezi River at Victoria Falls.

"The trip through Barotseland," the same traveler tells, "is more enlivening than any circus that ever put up canvas. All along the lines are fields of corn, with rude towers, on top of which natives constantly sit on guard to drive off the herds of wild pigs which raid the crops by night, and the troops of baboons which descend upon them by day. Many of these baboons are six feet tall and weigh 200 pounds. There are few more extraordinary sights than seeing a score or more of them slipping away after raiding a farmer's cornfield and sweet potato patch, their spoils tucked under their arms, for all the world like so many naughty schoolboys."

Stroll three miles up or down the Zambezi from the railroad bridge, and one can see hippos as easily as if in a zoological garden. In Northwest Rhodesia, herds of bush buck and zebras and flocks of ostriches, scamper away at sight of the train. Lying in his up-to-date sleeping berth at night, the traveler may hear the nearby roaring of lions, and see the big bonfires with which the construction gangs protect themselves.

A dining car conductor, while the train was halted on a lonely siding, cried excitedly: "Look over there!" From over a screen of bushes, scarcely a biscuit's throw away, five giraffes craned their necks and stared at the diners curiously.

Through such primeval surroundings the Cape-to-Cairo railway has forced its irresistible way—through jungles and forests, over mountains and rivers, through lairs of wild beasts and of men scarcely less wild—for the project was driven, even after his death, by one of the strongest wills ever bestowed upon man—by the will of Cecil John Rhodes, in whose imperial vision arose the dream of a trunkline railroad from Cairo to Cape Town, under the British flag all the way.

The trail of steel rails, which his imagination blazed, passes through regions romantic and picturesque enough to arouse a thrill in even a dull man. One may begin his journey in 1916 at Alexandria, founded by Alexander the Great. As he approaches Cairo he will see the misty outlines of the Pyramids. At Luxor he will pass beneath the shadow of ruined Thebes, an ancient city before Athens and Rome were born.

At Khartoum, peering through the blue-glass windows which protect the eyes from the glare of the tropical sun, he may see the statue of Gordon, looking northwards across the desert in search of the white helmets that came too late.

At the Zambezi River he will witness one of the wonders of the world, the Victoria Falls, almost as long as from Broadway to Jefferson avenue, St. Louis, and two and a half times as high as Niagara Falls. There Rhodes built his bridge, the highest in the world, "to cross the river so close to the falls," he directed his engineers, "that the travelers will have the spray in their faces." His English engineers declared that the thing could not be done. Rhodes employed Americans and travelers have to close the train windows to keep from being drenched by the spray.

At Kimberley the tourist will see the pits from which the women of the earth are supplied with diamonds, and at Johannesburg the mountains from which comes one-third of the world's gold supply.

And finally, after his train has come to a halt under the glass roof of the Victoria Terminal in Cape Town, the traveler may make a pilgrimage to the slope of Table Mountains, known as "World's View," and there bare his head before a bronze statue of a bulky, thickset and shabbily dressed man, guarded by British lions and staring northwards over Africa. It is the statue of Cecil Rhodes.

When Rhodes conceived his vision of a "railway which would cut Africa lengthwise through the center, picking up trade all the way," the only railroads in Africa were, in the north, a line from Alexandria to Assuan, and in the south, another from Cape Town to Kimberley. Diverse events gradually added other stretches of track. In the north Kitchener, in order to subdue the Sudan, turned his soldiers into railroad builders and pushed twin lines of steel across the desert to Khartoum at the rate of two miles a day. The Mrs. Astor To Be

Here is MISS HELEN HUNTINGTON who is to marry Vincent Astor, richest young man in the United States, next month — Musical, fond of sport, "with few fads," as young Astor proudly says, her charms and tact are expected to bring luster to the family name.

Miss Helen Huntington as she appeared while shopping for her trousseau.

IT is to be a country wedding. The invitations are out and April 30 set as the date for the marriage of Vincent Astor and Miss Helen Huntington.

And right here let it be said that these plans were accepted rather than made by the bridegroom or the bride. Neither has had much to say in the arrangements, for had they been consulted the wedding details would probably be far different from what they really will be.

"I can't possibly walk up the aisle of that church or any church," declared Vincent Astor to his father-in-law-to-be, referring to St. Margaret's at Staatsburg-on-the-Hudson, where the ceremony will be performed.

"You'll have to," replied Mr. Huntington.

"I can't," persisted the bridegroom.

"Oh, yes, you can," insisted Mr. Huntington.

And thereupon Miss Huntington put in her special pleas. She wanted a quiet little house wedding with only some thirty relatives of both families present. Her father and mother argued that if such a thing were done it might hurt the feelings of hundreds of friends who have been looking forward to the event for a long time.

So a compromise was arranged. About 250 very intimate friends are bidden, and announcements will be sent out to the many other hundreds who would have received invitations had the wedding been in one of the big city churches. The reception, according to present plans, is to be at Hopeland House, the home of the bride. A special train will take the guests from New York, and everybody who is invited to the church is also to be invited to the house.

From the moment when the clergyman repeats the words of the Episcopalian marriage service—"I pronounce thee man and wife"—there will be three Mrs. Astors, but only one who will need no qualifying first name to designate her. The first wife of the late John Jacob Astor, to whose son went the $65,000,000 estate on his twenty-first birthday, is Mrs. John Astor, and always will be unless she marries again. The second wife, the widow of the Titanic, is Mrs. John Jacob Astor. Miss Helen Dinsmore Huntington will be just Mrs. Astor—THE Mrs. Astor—wife of the head of the house and mistress of the homes of this boyish master of multi-millions.

And what of this girl who is to share the responsibilities of such wealth?

Two years ago Helen Huntington was a schoolgirl, known to no one outside her own little set. Her name never appeared in the newspapers beyond the mention of the fact that she had made her debut in society. With her small sister and her smaller brother, her parents brought up the girl in the quietude of the country.

Now, harking back a bit—

Robert Palmer Huntington and Helen Gray Dinsmore were married on June 1, 1892, the father just out of Yale the summer before with the class of '91 and the mother one of the debutante heiresses of the Dinsmore estate, which comes from the earnings of the Adams Express Co. Bob Huntington had some passing prestige then as a tennis player; he had been champion at the university and was "runner-up" at Newport for the national championship. He possessed a modest income, but no great means. So the handsome, happy pair drove away in a buckboard for their honeymoon, leaving a cheering company of guests at The Locusts, the Dinsmore home at Staatsburg. Their first child, Helen, was born on April 9, 1893.

Now, at this time Vincent Astor was a baby of 17 months. But the country homes of the Astors and the Huntingtons were barely seven miles apart. Ferncliffe, the Astor estate at Rhinebeck, lies to the north of Hopeland House. And the families knew each other, as Hudson River families do. So one fine afternoon, some few years later, came Vincent Astor with his mother to visit Helen Huntington and her mother.

Vincent was really rude to little Helen. It was all over the treelet, which had escaped but a few months before from the imprisoning folds of the acorn. It was now a brave, young oak which Helen Huntington herself had planted.

So when Mrs. Astor called and left Vincent to his own devices—and to Helen—the two children walked out to visit the new tree.

"Isn't it fine and hasn't it grown a lot?" she demanded, expecting a prompt, appreciative answer.

"Oh, I don't know," he replied with true boyish candor. "I don't think it's much of a tree. It won't be big enough to climb for years and years, and what else is a tree good for, anyway?"

Whereupon Helen slapped Vincent's face, if the tale be true. And there followed tears and the business of a small boy being taken home and making faces backward out of a phaeton.

A few days later small Helen was summoned to the phone.

"Did the frost last night hurt that tree very much?" queried a small voice over the wire—Vincent's again, but this time in mollifying accents.

And Helen was quite won over. The friendship grew from that time, and it has been preserved to this day. Since then the two have been meeting constantly—at children's parties up the river, in the homes of their parents at Christmas time and during the long summer holidays.

And now—the girl herself, as she is today.

"She'll be the making of Vincent Astor," declared one woman in society when she learned of the engagement. "Helen's a most sensible girl and she knows Vincent like a book."

That of late Vincent has needed such a guiding hand is a fact, for he is in a fair way to become spoiled. No young man ever came to such great wealth at his boyish age—just 22. And people won't let him forget it.

There has been criticism in social circles more than once because the young man has been placed at the right of the host or hostess at many a dinner, where men of more age and attainments have been seated further down the table. At some dances he has been treated almost as if the entire function were in his honor.

Helen Huntington is tall and lissome. She has the clear skin which comes of open-air exercise, and rippling bronze hair, almost golden in some lights. Her eyes are blue-gray, very large and frank, and her nose just a bit tiptilted.

Healthy sports take up a fair share of her leisure time. Daughter of a tennis expert, she early learned the game, and she plays a good set of singles or doubles. Vincent Astor has a hard time holding his own against her, and when they team up for a go at mixed doubles it takes some real tennis to beat them.

Then Miss Huntington golfs some, and she can also handle a power boat. Sometimes she takes the helm of her father's speedy buzzabout, and last autumn she was often seen steering her fiance's hydroplane, which he keeps at the water's edge at Ferncliffe. She drives a motor car with the confidence of an expert.

But ice-boating is her joy. Her father is one of the crack amateurs of the Hudson, and many a race he has won with Miss Helen as mate, crew and ballast. Muffled in toque and sweater, she is a pretty picture as she hangs to the sheet or tiller, only her tiptoes touching the boat as it whisks over the black ice in the teeth of a half-gale that sweeps them along at lightning speed.

But life has not been all sport and pleasure for Helen Huntington. Work has come her way, too. Kept steadfastly at her music all her girlish years, she is now a clever performer at the piano, due mainly, perhaps to the talent which she has inherited from her mother.

Of girl friends she has many, but three or four she keeps for her intimates—Miss Lita Wright and Miss Anne Rogers and Miss Katherine Miller. Of this little set Miss Huntington is leader.

With almost schoolboy frankness young Astor admits that Miss Huntington is pretty, and if one asks more about her he adds that she has no foolish notions and few fads.

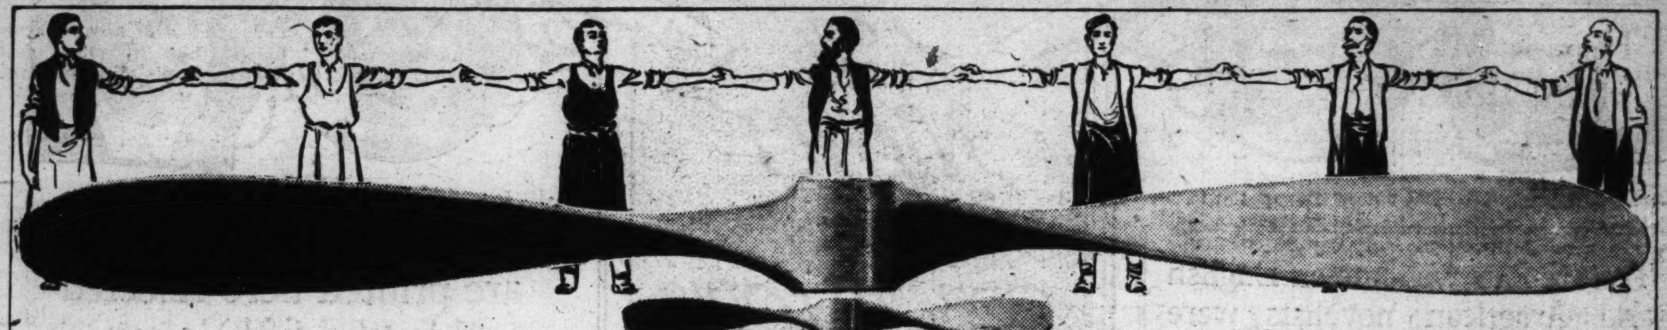
Paris Hoax Is Statue to Unknown

PAUL BIRAULT, a writer on the Paris Eclair, contended that too many statues were being erected all over France to obscure heroes; too many official speeches made to celebrate intellectual nonentities, and Radical politicians generally are the blindest leaders of the blind. To prove his theory that this was due to the fact that the living were delighted by public posing, he invented a celebrity to glorify, and called him Hegesippe Simon. No such man ever existed, but he described him in his letter as a most wonderful precurser of modern light and progress. To give his letter a certain importance he headed it with a motto, to the following effect: "Darkness fades when the sun rises," representing it as the most remarkable dictum of the remarkable Hegesippe Simon. Under this glorious motto he placed the title of his bogus committee, which he dubbed, "Public Committee for the Celebration of the Centenary of Hegesippe Simon." He selected the names of 100 Radical Deputies in alphabetical order, and sent them each a letter, in which he said: "Thanks to the liberality of a generous donor, the disciples of Hegesippe Simon are now enabled to erect a statue in his honor. We desire to inscribe your name as an honorary member of the committee to celebrate the centenary of this great educator of democracy."

Birault received letters of acceptance from a large number, Deputies, Senators and Ministers.

Russia's Giant Aeroplane Carries Twenty Men

FIRST PICTURES OF MYSTERIOUS DREADNOUGHT OF THE AIR



One of the Russian aircraft's propellers. It is 24 feet long and weighs 240 pounds. In front of it is a propeller used on the ordinary aeroplane.—From photo.

Has flown over St. Petersburg 90 minutes with full crew ❧ Has four engines, each of 100 horsepower, and each propeller weighs 240 pounds

THE first great dreadnought of the air has been completed in Russia and is making daily flights over St. Petersburg, its four big engines driving two 24-foot propellers that enable the machine to carry 16 persons at a high rate of speed. The whole machine weighs two tons.

The significance of this is in more than that a giant aeroplane has been made. It lies principally in the fact that inventors have apparently overcome one of the arguments of those who said the aeroplane could never be more than a rich man's toy, because it could carry only two or three persons at a time.

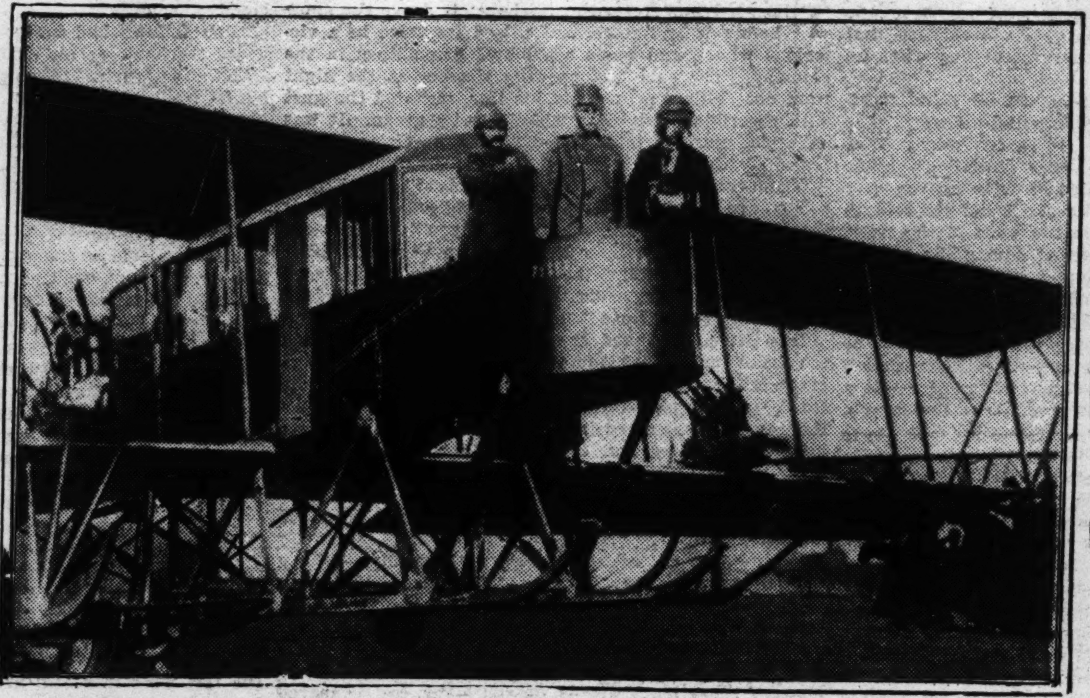
All the details of the new machine are not easily obtainable. For a long time the greatest secrecy has been maintained in St. Petersburg by orders, it is believed, of the War Department. Until recently no pictures of any part of the mechanism were permitted to leave the country. Naturally this mystery has heightened world-wide interest in the dreadnought.

The builder is a Russian named Sikorski. Before the present model was completed, he made a slightly smaller one that carried 11 persons. Announcement of its exploits were received with wild enthusiasm by the Russian people, who believed their nation had outstripped the world in aviation and that it had invented a war machine that would make its armies invincible.

The first model, at its try-out, lifted 11 persons 110 feet in the air and circled them around an airdome at a height of 100 feet. Its four engines made a tremendous roaring.

Encouraged by this success, Sikorski went to work immediately upon an even bigger model, in which some of the defects of the first one were to be corrected. It was not only to have seats for 20 persons, but was to have sleeping cabins in which part of its crew might rest while the other half was running the machine.

The new model was even more successful than the first one. It was named the Ilya Mourementz. It had four motors of 100 horsepower each, two in front and two behind. The inventor declares that any two of the motors will keep the aeroplane aloft at a fair rate of speed. It is known to have run on three motors while some disorder of the fourth was being repaired by its crew.



Cabin, with accommodations for sixteen men. Twenty can be crowded into its space.

Public interest, increased doubtless by the air of secrecy, focused the attention of the whole of St. Petersburg upon the floating car. It is watched by thousands on its almost daily flights over the city. Sikorski has declared he will soon be able to make a 2000 mile flight from St. Petersburg to Sebastopol, by way of Moscow, with a full quota of 20 passengers.

A special workshop had to be constructed for the manufacture of the parts. Of these, the most remarkable single piece is the propeller. It is 24 feet long—so long, indeed, that it takes seven men, each stretching out his hands until the finger tips touch the fingers of the next man, to measure its length. It weighs about 240 pounds and is capable of withstanding a pressure of 2000 horsepower.

In comparison with this machine, the biggest aeroplane elsewhere in use is nothing but a toy. The motor of the average American biplane has but 40 horsepower, while each of the four motors of the Russian dreadnought weighs two and a half times as much. Each wing is 60 feet long, or about three times the length of the average American biplane wing. Its total plane surface is about 185 square yards.

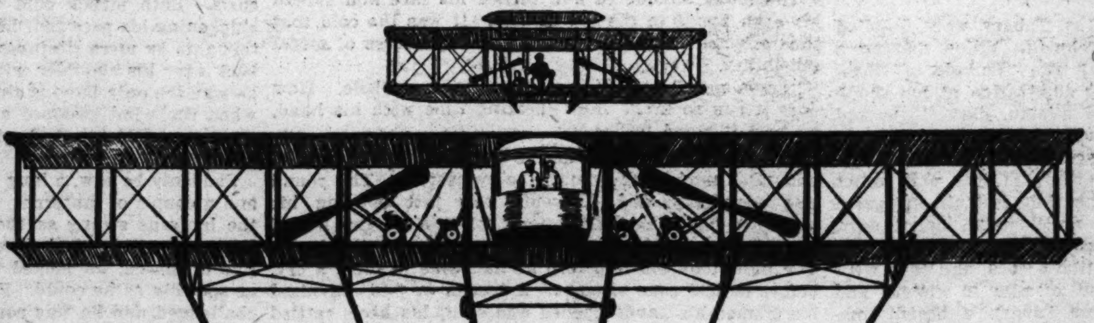
The complete independence of each of the motors was shown in a recent flight of Sikorski's airship. As it soared over St. Petersburg, one of the engines became frozen and stopped. The aviators did not think of ending the flight just on that account. They calmly thawed out the engine as they flew and, when it was in working order again, started it up as if nothing had happened. This flight lasted more than an hour and a half.

In common with all other European countries, Russia is perhaps more interested in the aeroplane as a war machine than anything else. Russia is actively increasing its aerial fleet and is sparing no expense. Only recently the Government appropriated $2,000,000 for building and equipping small aeroplanes. It is regarded as significant elsewhere that its subsidies towards Sikorski's machine have not been made public but, on the contrary, have been wrapped in all the secrecy that has characterized other matters relating to the big sky boat.

Germany, France and England are watching the Sikorski experiment with great interest. It is not at all unlikely that France wishes to promote a series of flights between St. Petersburg and Paris; but the German Government persistently refuses to allow any alien air craft to fly over its territory.

An English paper recently said of Sikorski's aeroplane that it was a matter for the British War Department to investigate carefully. It pointed out that 100 such machines could transport 2000 men quickly to any point in a military emergency. In the wide extent of modern battlefields, usually many miles, such a thing would be of inestimable value. If 2000 men could be carried, say 60 miles, in a single flight and if a dozen or more flights could be made in a single day, it would mean that a very large military force—enough to decide a battle—could be transported in an incredibly short time.

Outside of any question of transport service, it would be an invaluable aid to mining and sapping operations. A squad of eight or ten men and a store of powerful explosives could be carried. Such a squad might operate far into the enemy's lines, blowing up bridges, mining embankments, destroying food and ammunition stores, and in various other ways harassing an army. One such ship with one such squad, if the men were experts, might in a few hours undo the labor of thousands of men.



Comparative size of the Russian dreadnought of the air and Wright biplane.

Nor would a squad need to suffer serious inconvenience from being absent from its base of supplies. In addition to the cabin and sleeping quarters, the skyboat has a small kitchen and cooking arrangements. Fortified by enough emergency rations to carry them for a few days, the squad could do its work almost at its own leisure, if it kept the proper lookout as to where it were going. And if any general could achieve the victory of an important campaign through the sacrifice of such a small number of men and equipment, the cost would not be considered excessive.

Outside of the military value, Sikorski's machine, which already has been called fancifully an "aerobus," has industrial potentialities. If it can carry 20 men it can carry their equivalent in dead weight. That is, it may be useful both as a carrier of freight and of passengers, once the cost of construction and operation can be reduced to figures which will enable the transportation to be done at a profit. That these problems will be worked out in the not very distant future seems highly probable. Already a St. Petersburg suburban passenger service is being talked of.

Saving Time and Trouble in Offices

AMERICA has for many years led all other nations in the variety and scope of machines designed for office efficiency, and the year 1913 has brought forth some novelties in this line.

A new adding machine has an adding capacity of 10,000,000 and a weight of 16 1-2 pounds. It is a nonlisting machine, retailed at $35; it adds, substracts and multiplies; is portable and can be placed close to books and papers. It has seven keys, an error-correcting device and can be locked.

Another adding machine has a "mezzanine" attachment, a keyboard on runways above the regular keyboard, which is said to make easy the solution of intricate arithmetical operations.

An electric calculating machine, automatic after the necessary key has been depressed, multiplies, divides, and subtracts with astonishing speed. Errors are said to be preventable by means of a result-meter and a proof-meter.

Another calculating machine computes pay rolls, total time and total pay, based on wages per week, per day or per year.

Still another, when set for a given wage scale, will at once show the wages for any desired time.

An addressing machine about the size and weight of a typewriter, prepares an address on a metal plate almost as quickly as it could be written on paper with a typewriter.

A special paper for the stencil addressing machines, can be placed in any typewriter and written on in the usual way. The striking of the type makes the necessary perforations in the paper, which can then be placed in an ordinary stencil addressing machine and invoices, wrappers, cards and other matter can be addressed by the thousand in exact facsimile of typewriting.

Presses for baling waste paper effect great savings in offices and large buildings, as every scrap of waste paper is utilized and sold.

A new carbon paper has an uncarbonized strip five-eighths of an inch long, running lengthwise on the surface edge. This obviates soiling the hands and the paper.

A check machine writes a word at a stroke, impressing the same in indelible characters in the body of the check. It is impossible to remove the letters to raise the amount.

A coin counter will count hundreds of coins in a few minutes and deposit them in tubular containers.

A coin-handling machine will deliver a given amount of change in any variety desired, from one cent to $206.

In duplicating machines the process of reproduction has been much simplified by the introduction of a new kind of stencil sheet, which after it has been written on in a typewriter, may be crumpled up and trodden upon without injury. It is only necessary to wash it, smooth it out and re-ink it and it is ready for use again. It is claimed for this sheet that it permits the making of many thousands of copies of any typewritten matter from one original.

There are several new envelope-sealing machines with capacities for sealing from 1000 to 10,000 per hour. They range in price from $10 upward.

A LODGING FOR THE NIGHT

by ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

Jack London. Booth Tarkington.

The authors whose portraits are printed here selected this (the fifth) story

Twenty-four well-known English and American novelists were asked to name the stories that each considered the "best" in the language. They selected forty-five stories as of the very first rank. This Magazine is publishing the pick of those chosen.

IT was late in November, 1456. The snow fell over Paris with rigorous, relentless persistence; sometimes the wind made a sally and scattered it in flying vortices; sometimes there was a lull, and flake after flake descended out of the black night air, silent, circuitous, interminable. To poor people, looking up under moist eyebrows, it seemed a wonder where it all came from. Master Francis Villon had propounded an alternative that afternoon at a tavern window: was it only Pagan Jupiter plucking geese upon Olympus? or were the holy angels moulting? He was only a poor Master of Arts, he went on; and as the question somewhat touched upon divinity he durst not venture to conclude. A silly old priest from Montergis, who was among the company, treated the young rascal to a bottle of wine in honor of the jest and grimaces with which it was accompanied, and swore on his own white beard that he had been just such another irreverent dog when he was Villon's age.

The air was raw and pointed, but not far below freezing, and the flakes were large, damp and adhesive. The whole city was sheeted up. An army might have marched from end to end and not a footfall given the alarm. If there were any belated birds in heaven they saw the island like a large white patch and the bridges like slim white spars on the black ground of the river. High up overhead the snow settled among the tracery of the cathedral towers. Many a niche was drifted full; many a statue wore a long white bonnet on its grotesque or sainted head. The gargoyles had been transformed into great false noses, drooping toward the point. The crockets were like upright pillows swollen on one side. In the intervals of the wind there was a dull sound of dripping about the precincts of the church.

The cemetery of St. John had taken its own share of the snow. All the graves were decently covered; tall, white housetops stood around in grave array; worthy burghers were long ago in bed, benightcapped like their domiciles; there was no light in all the neighborhood but a little peep from a lamp that hung swinging in the church choir and tossed the shadows to and fro in time to its oscillations. The clock was hard on 10 when the patrol went by with halberds and a lantern, beating their hands; and they saw nothing suspicious about the cemetery of St. John.

YET there was a small house, backed up against the cemetery wall, which was still awake and awake to evil purpose, in that snoring district. There was not much to betray it from without—only a stream of warm vapor from the chimney-top, a patch where the snow melted on the roof and a few half-obliterated footprints at the door. But within, behind the shuttered windows, Master Francis Villon the poet, and some of the thievish crew with whom he consorted, were keeping the night alive and passing around the bottle.

A great pile of living embers diffused a strong and ruddy glow from the arched chimney. Before this straddled Dom Nicolas, the Picardy monk, with his skirts picked up and his fat legs bared to the comfortable warmth. His dilated shadow cut the room in half, and the firelight only escaped on either side of his broad person and in a little pool between his outspread feet. His face had the beery, bruised appearance of the continual drinker's; it was covered with a network of congested veins, purple in ordinary circumstances, but now pale violet, for even with his back to the fire the cold pinched him on the other side. His cowl had half fallen back and made a strange excrescence on either side of his bull neck. So he straddled, grumbling, and cut the room in half with the shadow of his portly frame.

On the right Villon and Guy Tabary were huddled together over a scrap of parchment, Villon making a ballade which he was to call the "Ballade of Roast Fish," and Tabary spluttering admiration at his shoulder. The poet was a rag of a man, dark, little and lean, with hollow cheeks and thin, black locks. He carried his four and twenty years with feverish animation. Greed had made folds about his eyes, evil smiles had puckered his mouth. The wolf and pig struggled together in his face. It was an eloquent, sharp, ugly, earthly countenance. His hands were small and prehensile, with fingers knotted like a cord, and they were continually flickering in front of him in violent and expressive pantomime. As for Tabary, a broad, complacent, admiring imbecility breathed from his squash nose and slobbering lips; he had become a thief just as he might have become the most decent of burgesses, by the imperious chance that rules the lives of human geese and human donkeys.

At the monk's other hand Montigny and Thevenin Pensete played a game of chance. About the first there clung some flavor of good birth and training as about a fallen angel—something long, lithe and courtly in the person, something aquiline and darkling in the face. Thevenin, poor soul, was in great feather; he had done a good stroke of knavery that afternoon in the Faubourg St. Jacques, and all night he had been gaining from Montigny. A flat smile illuminated his face; his bald head shone rosily in a garland of red curls; his little protuberant stomach shook with silent chucklings as he swept in his gains.

"Doubles or quits?" said Thevenin.

Montigny nodded grimly.

"Some may prefer to dine in state," wrote Villon, "On bread and cheese on silver plate. Or, or—help me out, Guido!"

Tabary giggled.

"Or parsley on a golden dish," scribbled the poet.

THE wind was freshening without; it drove the snow before it and sometimes raised its voice in a victorious whoop and made sepulchral grumblings in the chimney. The cold was growing sharper as the night went on. Villon, protruding his lips, imitated the gust with something between a whistle and a groan. It was an eerie, uncomfortable talent of the poet's, much detested by the Picardy monk.

"Can't you hear it rattle in the gibbet?" said Villon. "They are all dancing the devil's jig on nothing up there. You may dance, my gallants, you'll be none the warmer! Whew! what a gust! Down went somebody just now! A medlar the fewer on the three-legged medlar tree! I say, Dom Nicolas, it'll be cold tonight on the St. Denis Road?" he asked.

Dom Nicolas winked both his big eyes and seemed to choke upon his Adam's apple. Montfaucon, the great, grisly Paris gibbet, stood hard by the St. Denis Road, and the pleasantry touched him on the raw. As for Tabary, he laughed immoderately over the medlars; he held his sides and crowed. Villon fetched him a fillip on the nose, which turned his mirth into an attack of coughing.

"Oh, stop that row," said Villon, "and think of rhymes to 'fish.'"

"Doubles or quits," said Montigny doggedly.

"With all my heart," quoth Thevenin.

"Is there any more in that bottle?" asked the monk.

"Open another," said Villon. "How do you ever hope to fill that big hogshead, your body, with little things like bottles? And how do you expect to get to heaven? How many angels, do you fancy, can be spared to carry up a single monk from Picardy? Or do you think yourself another Elias—and they'll send the coach for you?"

"Hominibus impossible," replied the monk as he filled his glass.

Tabary was in ecstasies.

Villon filliped his nose again.

"Laugh at my jokes, if you like," he said.

"It was very good," objected Tabary.

Villon made a face at him. "Think of rhymes to 'fish,'" he said. "What have you to do with Latin? You'll wish you knew none of it at the great assizes, when the devil calls for Guido Tabary, clericus—the devil with the humpback and red-hot finger nails. Talking of the devil," he added in a whisper, "look at Montigny!"

ALL three peered covertly at the gamester. He did not seem to be enjoying his luck. His mouth was a little to a side, one nostril nearly shut and the other much inflated. The black dog was on his back, as people say in terrifying nursery metaphor, and he breathed hard under the grewsome burthen.

"He looks as if he could knife him," whispered Tabary with round eyes.

The monk shuddered and turned his face and spread his open hands to the red embers. It was the cold that thus affected Dom Nicolas and not any excess of moral sensibility.

"Come now," said Villon—"about this ballade. How does it run so far?" And beating time with his hand, he read it aloud to Tabary.

They were interrupted at the fourth rhyme by a brief and fatal movement among the gamesters. The round was completed, and Thevenin was just opening his mouth to claim another victory, when Montigny leaped up, swift as an adder, and stabbed him to the heart. The blow took effect before he had time to utter a cry, before he had time to move. A tremor or two convulsed his frame; his hands opened and shut, his heels rattled on the floor; then his head rolled backward over one shoulder with the eyes wide open, and Thevenin Pensete's spirit had returned to Him who made it.

Every one sprang to his feet, but the business was over in two twos. The four living fellows looked at each other in rather a ghastly fashion, the dead man contemplating a corner of the roof with a singular and ugly leer.

"My God!" said Tabary, and he began to pray in Latin.

Villon broke out into hysterical laughter. He came a step forward and ducked a ridiculous bow at Thevenin and laughed still louder. Then he sat down suddenly, all of a heap, upon a stool, and continued laughing bitterly, as though he would shake himself to pieces.

Montigny recovered his composure first.

"Let's see what he has about him," he remarked, and he picked the dead man's pockets with a practiced hand and divided the money into four equal portions on the table. "There's for you," he said.

The monk received his share with a deep sigh and a single stealthy glance at the dead Thevenin, who was beginning to sink into himself and topple sideways off the chair.

"We're all in for it," cried Villon, swallowing his mirth. "It's a hanging job for every man jack of us that's here—not to speak of those who aren't." He made a shocking gesture in the air with his raised right hand and put out his tongue and threw his head on one side, so as to counterfeit the appearance of one who has been hanged. Then he pocketed his share of the spoil and executed a shuffle with his feet as if to restore the circulation.

TABARY was the last to help himself; he made a dash at the money and retired to the other end of the apartment.

Montigny stuck Thevenin upright in the chair and drew out the dagger, which was followed by a jet of blood.

"You fellows had better be moving," he said as he wiped the blade on his victim's doublet.

"I think we had," returned Villon with a gulp. "Damn his fat head!" he broke out. "It sticks in my throat like phlegm. What right has a man to have red hair when he is dead?" And he fell all of a heap again upon the stool and fairly covered his face with his hands.

Montigny and Dom Nicolas laughed aloud, even Tabary feebly chiming in.

"Cry baby," said the monk.

"I always said he was a woman," added Montigny with a sneer. "Sit up, can't you?" he went on, giving another shake to the murdered body. "Tread out that fire, Nick!"

But Nick was better employed; he was quietly taking Villon's purse as the poet sat, limp and trembling, on the stool where he had been making a ballade not three minutes before. Montigny and Tabary dumbly demanded a share of the booty, which the monk silently promised as he passed the little bag into the bosom of his gown. In many ways an artistic nature unfits a man for practical existence.

No sooner had the theft been accomplished than Villon shook himself, jumped to his feet and began helping to scatter and extinguish the embers. Meanwhile Montigny opened the door and cautiously peered into the street. The coast was clear; there was no meddlesome patrol in sight. Still it was judged wiser to slip out severally; and as Villon was himself in a hurry to escape from the neighborhood of the dead Thevenin, and the rest were in a still greater hurry to get rid of him before he should discover the loss of his money, he was the first by general consent to issue forth into the street.

THE wind had triumphed and swept all the clouds from heaven. Only a few vapors, as thin as moonlight, fleeted rapidly across the stars. It was bitter cold, and by a common optical effect, things seemed almost more definite than in the broadest daylight. The sleeping city was absolutely still; a company of white hoods, a field full of little Alps, below the twinkling stars. Villon cursed his fortune. Would it were still snowing! Now, wherever he went he left an indelible trail behind him on the flittering streets; wherever he went he was still tethered to the house by the cemetery of St. John; wherever he went he must weave, with his own plodding feet, the rope that bound him to the crime and would bind him to the gallows. The leer of the dead man came back to him with a new significance. He snapped his fingers as if to pluck up his own spirits, and, choosing a street at random, stepped boldly forward in the snow.

Two things preoccupied him as he went; the aspect of the gallows at Montfaucon in this bright, windy phase of the night existence, for one; and for another, the look of the dead man with his bald head and garland of red curls. Both struck cold upon his heart, and he kept quickening his pace as if he could escape from unpleasant thoughts by mere fleetness of foot. Sometimes he looked back over his shoulder with a sudden nervous jerk; but he was the only moving thing in the white streets except when the wind swooped around a corner and threw up the snow, which was beginning to freeze, in spouts of glittering dust.

Suddenly he saw, a long way before him, a black clump and a couple of lanterns. The clump was in motion and the lanterns swung as though carried by men walking. It was a patrol. And though it was merely crossing his line of march, he judged it wiser to get out of eyeshot as speedily as he could. He was not in the humor to be challenged and he was conscious of making a very conspicuous mark upon the snow. Just on his left hand there stood a great hotel, with some turrets and a large porch before the door; it was half ruinous, he remembered, and had long stood empty; and so he made three steps of it and jumped into the shelter of the porch. It was pretty dark inside, after the glimmer of the snowy streets, and he was groping forward with outspread hands when he stumbled over some substance which offered an indescribable mixture of resistances, hard and soft, firm and loose. His heart gave a leap and he sprang two steps back and stared dreadfully at the ob-

"No sooner was his host gone than Villon leaped from the chair on which he had just seated himself and began examining the room with the stealth and passion of a cat.

"'Seven pieces of plate,' he said. 'If there had been ten I would have risked it. A fine house and a fine old master, so help me all the saints.'" stacle. Then he gave a little laugh of relief. It was only a woman, and she dead. He knelt beside her to make sure upon this point. She was freezing cold and rigid like a stick. A little ragged finery fluttered in the wind about her hair, and her cheeks had been heavily rouged that same afternoon. Her pockets were quite empty, but in her stocking, underneath the garter, Villon found two of the small coins that went by the name of whites. It was little enough, but it was always something, and the poet was moved with a deep sense of pathos that she should have died before she had spent her money. That seemed to him a dark and pitiable mystery; and he looked from the coins in his hand to the dead woman, and back again to the coins, shaking his head over the riddle of man's life. Henry V of England, dying at Vincennes just after he had conquered France, and this poor jade cut off by a cold draught in a great man's doorway before she had time to spend her couple of whites—it seemed a cruel way to carry on the world. Two whites would have taken such a little while to squander; and yet it would have been one more good taste in the mouth, one more smack of the lips before the devil got the soul and the body was left to birds and vermin. He would like to use all his tallow before the light was blown out and the lantern broken.

WHILE these thoughts were passing through his mind he was feeling half mechanically for his purse. Suddenly his heart stopped beating; a feeling of cold scales passed up the back of his legs and a cold blow seemed to fall upon his scalp. He stood petrified for a moment; then he felt again with one feverish movement; and then his loss burst upon him, and he was covered at once with perspiration. To spendthrifts money is so living and actual—it is such a thin veil between them and their pleasures! There is only one limit to their fortune—that of time; and a spendthrift with only a few crowns is the Emperor of Rome until they are spent. For such a person to lose his money is to suffer the most shocking reverse, and fall from heaven to hell, from all to nothing, in a breath. And all the more if he has put his head in the halter for it, if he may be hanged tomorrow for that same purse, so dearly earned, so foolishly departed! Villon stood and cursed; he threw the two whites into the street; he shook his fist at heaven. Then he began rapidly to retrace his steps toward the house beside the cemetery. He had forgotten all fear of the patrol, which was long gone by at any rate, and had no idea but that of his lost purse. It was in vain that he looked right and left upon the snow; nothing was to be seen. He had not dropped it in the streets. Had it fallen in the house? He would have liked dearly to go in and see, but the idea of the grisly occupant unmanned him. And he saw besides, as he [illegible] near, that their efforts to put out the fire [illegible]ssful; on the contrary, it had broke[illegible] changeful light played in the [illegible] and revived his terr[illegible]bet.

He ran [illegible]midly. There was no ans[illegible] again, taking heart with every [illegible] last steps were heard approaching from within. A barred wicket fell open in the iron-studded door and emitted a gush of yellow light.

"Hold up your face to the wicket," said the chaplain from within.

"It's only me," whimpered Villon.

"Oh, it's only you, is it?" returned the chaplain, and he cursed him with foul, unpriestly oaths for disturbing him at such an hour, and bade him be off to hell, where he came from.

"My hands are blue to the wrist," pleaded Villon; "my feet are dead and full of twinges; my nose aches with the sharp air; the cold lies at my heart. I may be dead before morning. Only this once, father, and before God, I will never ask again!"

"You should have come earlier," said the ecclesiastic cooly. "Young men require a lesson now and then." He shut the wicket and retired deliberately into the interior of the house.

Villon was beside himself; he beat upon the door with his hands and feet and shouted hoarsely after the chaplain.

"Wormy old fox!" he cried. "If I had my hand under your twist I would send you flying headlong into the bottomless pit."

A door shut in the interior, faintly audible to the poet down long passages. He passed his hand over his mouth with an oath. And then the humor of the situation struck him, and he laughed and looked lightly up to heaven, where the stars seemed to be winking over his discomfiture.

WHAT was to be done? It looked like a night in the frosty streets. The idea of the dead woman popped into his imagination and gave him a hearty fright; what had happened to her in the early night might very well happen to him before morning. And he so young! and with such immense possibilities of disorderly amusement before him! He felt quite pathetic over the notion of his own fate, as if it had been some one's else, and made a little imaginative vignette of the scene in the morning when they should find his body.

He passed all his chances under review, turning the white between his thumb and forefinger. Unfortunately he was on bad terms with some old friends who would once have taken pity on him in such a plight. He had lampooned them in verses; he had beaten and cheated them; and yet now, when he was in so close a pinch, he thought there was at least one who might perhaps relent. It was a chance. It was worth trying at least, and he would go and see.

On the way two little accidents happened to him which colored his musings in a very different manner. For, first, he fell in with the track of a patrol and walked in it for some hundred yards, although it lay out of his direction. And this spirited him up; at least he had confused his train, for he was still possessed with the idea of people tracking him all about Paris over the snow and collaring him next morning before he was awake. The other matter affected him quite differently. He passed a street corner where, not so long before, a woman and her child had been devoured by wolves. This was just the kind of weather, he reflected, when wolves might take it into their heads to enter Paris again; and a lone man in these deserted streets would run the chance of something worse than a mere scare. He stopped and looked upon the place with an unpleasant interest—it was a center where several lanes intersected each other; and he looked down them all, one after another, and held his breath to listen, lest he should detect some galloping black things on the snow or hear the sound of howling between him and the river. He remembered his mother telling him the story and pointing out the spot, while he was yet a child. His mother! If he only knew where she lived he might make sure at least of shelter. He determined he would inquire upon the morrow; nay, he would go and see her too, poor old girl! So thinking, he arrived at his destination—his last hope for the night.

The house was quite dark, like its neighbors; and yet, after a few taps, he heard a movement overhead, a door opening and a cautious voice asking who was there. The poet named himself in a loud whisper and waited, not without some trepidation, the result. Nor had he to wait long. A window was suddenly opened and a pailful of slops splashed down upon the doorstep. Villon had not been unprepared for something of the sort and had put himself as much in shelter as the nature of the porch admitted; but for all that, he was deplorably drenched below the waist. His hose began to freeze almost at once. Death from cold and exposure stared him in the face; he remembered he was of phthisical tendency, and began coughing tentatively. But the gravity of the danger steadied his nerves. He stopped a few hundred yards from the door where he had been so rudely used and reflected with his finger to his nose. He could only see one way of getting a lodging, and that was to take it. He had noticed a house not far away which looked as if it might be easily broken into, and thither he betook himself promptly, entertaining himself on the way with the idea of a room still hot, with a table still loaded with the remains of supper, where he might pass the rest of the black hours and whence he should issue, on the morrow, with an armful of valuable plate. He even considered on what viands and what wines he should prefer; and as he was calling the roll of his favorite dainties, roast fish presented itself to his mind with an odd mixture of amusement and horror.

"I shall never finish that ballade," he thought to himself; and then, with another shudder at the recollection, "Oh, curse his fat head!" he repeated fervently and spat upon the snow.

THE house in question looked dark at first sight, but as Villon made a preliminary inspection in search of the handiest point of attack a little twinkle of light caught his eye from behind a curtained window.

"The devil!" he thought. "People awake! Some student or some saint, confound the crew! Can't they get drunk and lie in bed snoring like their neighbors? What's the good of curfew and poor devils of bell-ringers jumping at a rope's end in bell towers? What's the use of day if people sit up all night? The gripes to them!" He grinned as he saw where his logic was leading him. "Every man to his business, after all," added he, "and if they're awake, by the Lord, I may come by a supper honestly for once and cheat the devil."

He went boldly to the door and knocked with an assured hand. On both previous occasions he had knocked timidly and with some dread of attracting notice; but now when he had just discarded the thought of a burglarious entry, knocking at a door seemed a mighty simple and innocent proceeding. The sound of his blows echoed through the house with thin, phantasmal reverberations as though it were quite empty; but these had scarcely died away before a measured tread drew near, a couple of bolts were withdrawn and one wing was opened broadly, as though no guile or fear of guile were known to those within. A tall figure of a man, muscular and spare, but little bent, confronted Villon. The head was massive in bulk, but finely sculptured; the nose blunt at the bottom, but refining upward to where it joined a pair of strong and honest eyebrows; the mouth and eyes surrounded with delicate markings, and the whole face based upon a thick, white beard, boldly and squarely trimmed. Seen as it was by the light of a flickering hand lamp, it looked perhaps nobler than it had a right to be; but it was a fine face, honorable rather than intelligent, strong, simple and righteous.

"You knock late, sir," said the old man in resonant, courteous tones.

Villon cringed and brought up many servile words of apology; at a crisis of this sort the beggar was uppermost in him and the man of genius hid his head with confusion.

"You are cold," repeated the old man, "and hungry? Well, step in." And he ordered him into the house with a noble enough gesture.

"Some great seigneur," thought Villon as his host, setting down the lamp on the flagged pavement of the entry, shot the bolts once more into their places.

"You will pardon me if I go in front," he said when this was done; and he preceded the poet upstairs into a large apartment warmed with a pan of charcoal and lit by a great lamp hanging from the roof. It was very bare of furniture—only some gold plate on a sideboard, some folios and a stand of armor between the windows. Some smart tapestry hung upon the walls, representing the crucifixion of our Lord in one piece, and in another a scene of shepherds and shepherdesses by a running stream. Over the chimney was a shield of arms.

"Will you seat yourself," said the old man, "and forgive me if I leave you? I am alone in my house tonight, and if you are to eat I must forage for you myself."

No sooner was his host gone than Villon leaped from the chair on which he had just seated himself and began examining the room with the stealth and passion of a cat. He weighed the gold flagons in his hand, opened all the folios and investigated the arms upon the shield and the stuff with which the seats were lined. He raised the window curtains and saw that the windows were set with rich stained glass in figures, so far as he could see, of martial import. Then he stood in the middle of the room, drew a long breath and, retaining it with puffed cheeks, looked around and around him, turning on his heels, as if to impress every feature of the apartment on his memory.

"Seven pieces of plate," he said. "If there had been 10 I would have risked it. A fine house and a fine old master, so help me all the saints!"

And just then, hearing the old man's tread returning along the corridor, he stole back to his chair and began humbly toasting his wet legs before the charcoal pan.

HIS entertainer had a plate of meat in one hand and a jug of wine in the other. He set down the plate upon the table, motioning Villon to draw in his chair and going to the sideboard, brought back two goblets which he filled.

"I drink to your better fortune," he said, gravely touching Villon's cup with his own.

"To our better acquaintance," said the poet, growing bold. A mere man of the people would have been awed by the courtesy of the old seigneur, but Villon was hardened in that matter; he had made mirth for great lords before now, and found them as black rascals as himself. And so he devoted himself to the viands with a ravenous gusto, while the old man, leaning backward, watched him with steady, curious eyes.

"You have blood on your shoulder, my man," he said.

Montigny must have laid his wet right hand upon him as he left the house. He cursed Montigny in his heart.

"It is none of my shedding," he stammered.

"I had not supposed so," returned his host quietly. "A brawl?"

"Well, something of that sort," Villon admitted with a quaver.

"Perhaps a fellow murdered?"

"Oh, no, not murdered," said the poet, more and more confused. "It was all fair play—murdered by accident. I had no hand in it, God strike me dead!" he added fervently.

"One rogue the fewer, I dare say," observed the master of the house.

"You may dare say that," agreed Villon, infinitely relieved. "As big a rogue as there is between here and Jerusalem. He turned up his toes like a lamb. But it was a nasty thing to look at. I dare say you've seen dead men in your time, my lord?" he added, glancing at the armor.

"Many," said the old man. "I have followed the wars, as you imagine."

Villon laid down his knife and fork, which he had just taken up again.

"Were any of them bald?" he asked.

"Oh, yes, and with hair as white as mine."

"I don't think I should mind the white so much," said Villon. "His was red." And he had a return of his shuddering and tendency to laughter, which he drowned with a great draught of wine. "I'm a little put out when I think of it," he went on. "I knew him—curse him! And then the cold gives a man fancies—or the fancies give a man cold, I don't know which."

"Have you any money?" asked the old man.

"I have one white," returned the poet, laughing. "I got it out of a dead jade's stocking in a porch. She was as dead as Caesar, poor wench, and as cold as a church, with bits of ribbon sticking in her hair. This is a hard world in winter for wolves and wenches and poor rogues like me."

"I," said the old man, "am Enguerrand de la Feuillee, seigneur de Brisetout, bailly du Patatrac. Who and what may you be?"

Villon rose and made a suitable reverence. "I am called Francis Villon," he said, "a poor Master of Arts of this university. I know some Latin, and a deal of vice. I can make chansons, ballades, lais, virelais and roundels, and I am very fond of wine. I was born in a garret, and I shall not improbably die upon the gallows. I may add, my lord, that from this night forward I am your lordship's very obsequious servant to command."

"No servant of mine," said the knight; "my guest for this evening, and no more."

"A very grateful guest," said Villon politely, and he drank in dumb show to his entertainer.

"You are shrewd," began the old man, tapping his forehead, "very shrewd; you have learning; you are a clerk and yet you take a small piece of money off a dead woman in the street. Is it not a kind of theft?"

"It is a kind of theft much practiced in the wars, my lord."

"The wars are the field of honor," returned the old man proudly. "There a man plays his life upon the cast; he fights in the name of his lord the king, his Lord God, and all their lordships the holy saints and angels."

"Put it," said Villon, "that I were really a thief, should I not play my life also, and against heavier odds?"

"For gain but not for honor."

"Gain?" repeated Villon with a shrug. "Gain! The poor fellow wants supper, and takes it. So does the soldier in a campaign. Why, what are all these requisitions we hear so much about? If they are not gain to those who take them, they are loss enough to the others. The men-at-arms drink by a good fire while the burgher bites his nails to buy them wine and wood. I have seen a good many plowmen swinging on trees about the coun-

THE BATTLE OF ST. LOUIS

The whole future of this city trembled in the balance one May day in 1780 when a handful of English and 1500 Indians attacked the small garrison of the colony. Behind a rough stockade the French St. Louisans fought valiantly, although the French military commander urged them to surrender. The Indians were unacquainted with cannon, and the roaring of the big guns frightened them away and saved the day.

If the allies had come the day before, which was a holiday, they would have found the citizens unprepared and would have had an easy victory. The drawing is by L. F. Conrey, the New York illustrator, who is giving exclusively to the Post-Dispatch his interpretations of scenes which will be depicted in the Forest Park pageant in May.

THE DAY OF DAYS

BY LOUIS
JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS.

P. SYBARITE, at 3 p. m., is a bookkeeper for a hide and leather firm at $15 a week. In the following 24 hours he has a day of days, rivaling Hadji in Knobloch's play, "Kismet," which Sybarite sees in company with Marian Blessington. She is a wealthy heiress, whom he meets while she is in hiding from her guardian, Brian Shaynon, who wants to force her into marriage with his son, Bayard. Brian dies in apoplexy and Sybarite trails Red November to Bayard's rooms. The guardian had employed November to kidnap Marian; the police are surrounding November's garage, in which Sybarite suspects Marian is a prisoner.

CHAPTER XX (Continued)

Red November.

SOFT footfalls became audible in the private hall, shuffling back toward the dining room.

Instinctively the little man drew back—regretful now that he had yielded to Peter's prejudices against loaded pistols—retreating sideways along the wall until he had put the bulk of a massive buffet between him and the door; and in the small space between the article of furniture and the corner of the room waited with every nerve taut and muscle tense in full anticipation of incontinent detection.

In line with these apprehensions, the footsteps came no farther than the dining room door; then died out for what seemed full two minutes—a pause as illegible to his understanding as their manifest stealth.

Why need Shaynon take such elaborate precautions against noises in his own lodgings?

Suddenly and more confidently the footfalls turned into the dining room, and without glance right or left a man strode directly to the open window. There for an instant he delayed with an eye to the crack between the curtains; then, reassured, thrust one aside and stepped into the embrasure, there to linger with his head out of the window, intently reconnoitering long enough to enable P. Sybarite to make an amazing discovery: the man was not Bayard Shaynon.

In silhouette against the light, his slight and supple form was unmistakable to one who had seen it before, even though his face was disfigured by a scant black vizor across his eyes and the bridge of his nose.

This man was Red November.

What P. Sybarite would have done had he been armed is problematical. What he did was to remain moveless, even as he was breathless and powerless, but for his naked hands, either for offense or defense. For that November was armed was as unquestionable as his mastery of the long-barreled revolver of blue steel, favored by gunmen of the underworld, which he held at poise all the while he carefully surveyed his line of retreat.

At length, releasing the curtain, the gang-leader hopped lightly out upon the grating and disappeared.

In another breath P. Sybarite himself was at the window. A single glance through the curtains showed the grating untenanted; and, boldly poking his head forth, he looked down to see the figure of the gunman, fore-shorted unrecognizably, moving swiftly, noiselessly, down the iron tangle already several flights below—singularly resembling a spider in some extraordinary web.

Incontinently the little man ran back through the dining room and down the private hall, abandoning every effort to avoid a noise.

No need now for caution if his premonition wasn't worthless—if the vengeful spirit of Mrs. Inche had not stopped short of embroiling son with father; but had gone on to the end, ominously shadowed forth by the appearance of the gunman in those rooms.

What he saw from the threshold of the lighted room was Bayard Shaynon still in death upon the floor, one temple shattered by a shot fired at close range from a revolver that lay with butt close to his right hand—carefully disposed with evident intent to indicate a case of suicide rather than of murder.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Sortie.

AT pains not to stir across the threshold, with quick glances P. Sybarite reviewed scrupulously the scene of November's crime.

Eventually his nod indicated a contemptuous conclusion: that it should not prove difficult to convict November on the evidence afforded by the condition of the apartment alone. A most superficial inspection should suffice to convince even one prone to precipitate conclusions that Bayard Shaynon had never died by his own hand.

If November, in depositing the instrument of his crime close to the hand of its victim, had meant to mislead, to create an inference of felo de se, he had ordered all his other actions with a carelessness arguing one of three things: cynical indifference to the actual outcome of his false clew, sublime faith in the stupidity of the police, or a stupidity of his own as crass as that said to be characteristic of the average criminal in all ages.

The rooms, in short, had been most thoroughly, if hastily, ransacked—in searth, P. Sybarite didn't for an instant doubt, of evidence as to the relations between Shaynon and Mrs. Inche calculated to prove incriminating at an inquest; though the little man entertained even less doubt that lust for loot had likewise been a potent motive to influence November.

He found proof enough of this in the turned-out pockets of the murdered man; in the abstraction from the bosom of his shirt of pearl studs which P. Sybarite had noticed there within the hour; in the abraded knuckles of a finger from which a conspicuous solitaire diamond in massive antique setting was missing; in a pigskin bill-fold, empty, ripped, turned inside out, and thrown upon the floor not far from the corpse.

Then, too, in one corner stood a fine old mahogany desk of quaint design, and many drawers and pigeonholes, and all sacked, their contents turned out to litter the floor. In another corner, a curio cabinet had fared as ill. Even a bookcase had not been overlooked, and stood with idle, open doors and disordered shelves.

Not, however, with any notion of concerning himself with the assassin's apprehension and punishment did P. Sybarite waste that moment of hasty survey. His eyes were only keen and eager to decry the yellow Western Union message; and when he had looked everywhere else, his glance dropped to his feet and found it there, a torn and crumpled envelope, with its enclosure flattened out and apart from it.

This last he snatched up, but the envelope he didn't touch, having been quick to remark the print upon it of a dirty thumb, the counterpart of which decorated the face of the message as well.

"And a hundred more of 'em, probably," P. Sybarite surmised as to the number of finger marks left by November; "enough to hang him ten times over—which I hope and pray they don't before I finish with him."

As for the dead man, he read his epitaph in a phrase, accompanied by a meaning nod toward the disfigured and insentient head.

"It was coming to you—and you got it," said P. Sybarite callously, with never a qualm of shame for the apathy with which he contemplated this second tragedy in the house of Bayard Shaynon.

With a shrug he turned back to the hall door, listening an instant, gently opened it—with his handkerchief wrapped round the brass door knob to guard against clews calculated to involve himself, whether as imputed principal or casual witness after the fact. For he felt no desire to report the crime to the police; let them find it out at their leisure, investigate, and take what action they would: P. Sybarite had lost no love for the force that night, and meant to use it only at a pinch—as when, perchance, its services might promise to elicit the information presumably possessed by Red November as to the fate of Marian Blessington.

The public hall was empty, dim with the light of a single electric bulb, and still as the chamber of death that lay behind.

Never a shadow moved more silently or more swiftly than P. Sybarite, when he had closed the door, up the steps to Peter Kenny's rooms. Hardly a conceivable sound could be more circumspect than that which his knuckles drummed on the panels of Peter's door. And Peter earned a heartfelt, instant and ungrudged blessing by opening without delay.

"Well?" he asked, when P. Sybarite, with a gesture enforcing temporary silence, had himself shut the door without making a sound. "Good Lord, man! you look as if you'd seen a ghost."

On the verge of agitated speech, P. Sybarite checked to shake an aggrieved head.

"Bromides are grand for the nerves," he observed cuttingly; "but you're too young to need 'em—and I want one now. Listen to me."

Briefly he told his story.

"Well, but the telegram?" Peter insisted. "Does it help—tell you anything? It's maddening—to think Marian may be in the power of that bloodthirsty"——

"There you go again," P. Sybarite complained; "and not two minutes ago I warned you about that habit. Wait. I've had time only to run an eye through this; let me get the sense of it."

Peter peering over his shoulder, the two conned the message in silence:

> Bayard Shaynon,
> Monastery Ap'ts, W. 43rd, N. Y. C.
> Your wire received, all preparations made; send patient in charge as indicated at convenience; legal formalities can wait as you suggest.
> HAYNES' PRIVATE SANATORIUM.

Blankly Peter Kenny looked at his cousin; with eyes in which deepening understanding mingled with anger as deep, and with profound misgivings as well, P. Sybarite returned his stare.

"It's as plain as the face on you, Peter Kenny. Why, all along I've had an indefinite notion that something of the sort was what they were brewing! Don't you see—'private sanatorium'? What more proof do you need of a plot to railroad Marian to a private institution for the insane? 'Legal formalities can wait, as you suggest'—of course! They hadn't had time to cook up the necessary papers, to suborn medical certificates and purchase a commitment paper of some corrupt Judge. But what of that?" P. Sybarite demanded, slapping the message furiously. "She was in the way—at large—liable at any time to do something that would put her money forever out of their reach. Therefore, she must be put away at once, pending 'legal formalities' to insure her permanent incarceration."

"The dogs!" Peter Kenny growled.

"But consider how they've been served out—thunderbolts—justice from the very skies! All except one; and," said P. Sybarite solemnly, "God do so to me, and more also, if he's alive or outside bars before this sun sets!"

"Who?"

"November!"

"What can you do to him?"

"To begin with, beat him to that damned asylum. Fetch me the suburban telephone directory."

"Telephone directory?"

"Yes!" P. Sybarite raved. "What else? Where is it? And where are your wits?"

"Why here"——

Turning, Peter took the designated volume from its hook beneath the wall instrument at the very elbow of P. Sybarite.

"I thought," he commented mildly, "you had all your wits about you and could see it."

"Don't be impudent," grumbled P. Sybarite, rapidly thumbing the pages. "Westchester," he muttered; adding: "Oscahana—H—Ha—H-a-d"——

"Are you dotty?"

"Look at that telegram. It's dated from Oscahana; that's somewhere in Westchester, if I'm not mistaken. Yes; here we are: H-a-y—Haynes' Private Sanatorium—number, Oscahana one-nine. You call 'em."

"What shall I say?"

"Where the devil's that cartridge clip you took away from me? Give it here. And I want my money."

"But," Peter protested in a daze, handing over the clip and watching P. Sybarite rummage in the buffet drawer wherein he had cached his winnings before setting out for the Bizarre—"but what do you want me to"——

"Call up that sanatorium; find out if Marian has arrived. If she has, threaten with fire and sword, and all that sort of thing, if they don't release her—hand her over to me on demand. If she isn't make 'em understand I'll dynamite the place if they let November bring her there and get away before I show up. Tell 'em to call in the police and pinch November on sight. And then get a lawyer, and send him up there after me. And then set the police after November; tell 'em you heard the shot and went down the fire escape to investigate what the trouble was. I'm off."

In the hall, savagely punching the elevator bell, P. Sybarite employed the first part of an enforced wait to return the clip of cartridges to its chamber in the butt of Mrs. Inche's pistol.

He punched the bell again.

He put his thumb upon the button and held it there.

From the bottom of the twelve-story well a faint, shrill tintinnabulation echoed up to him. But that was all. The car itself never stirred.

Infuriated, he left off that profitless employment and threw himself down the stairs, descending in great bounds from landing to landing, more like a tennis ball than a fairly intelligent specimen of mature humanity in control of his own actions.

Expecting to be met by the ascending car before half way to the bottom, he came to the final flight, not only breathless, but in a towering rage—contemplating nothing less than a murderous assault upon the hall boys—hoping to find them together that he might batter their heads one against the other.

But he gained the ground floor lobby to find it as empty as his own astonishment—its doors wide to the cold air of dawn, its lights dimmed to the likeness of smoldering embers by the stark refulgence of day; but nowhere a sign of a hall boy or anything else in human guise.

As he paused to make sure of the realty of this phenomenon, and incidentally to regain his breath, there sounded from a distance down the street a noise the like of which he had never before heard! a noise resembling more than anything else in his experience the almost simultaneous detonations of something like half a dozen firecrackers of subcannon caliber.

Without understanding this, or even being aware that he had willed his limbs to carry him, P. Sybarite found himself in the street.

At the curb his hired car waited, its motor purring sweetly, but its chauffeur missing.

Subjectively he was aware that the sun was up and high enough to throw a sanguinary glare upon the upper stories of the row of garages across the street—those same from whose number he had chartered his touring car. And momentarily he surmised that perhaps the chauffeur had strolled over to the garage for some purpose.

But no sooner had this thought enhanced his irritation than he had its refutation in the discovery of the chauffeur affectionately embracing a lamppost three or four doors in the direction of Sixth avenue; and so singular seemed this sight that P. Sybarite wondered if, by any chance, the fellow had found time to get drunk during so brief a wait.

At once, blind to all else, and goaded intolerably by his knowledge that the time was short if he were to forestall November at the asylum in Oscahana, he pelted hot-foot after the delinquent; came up with him in a trice; tapped him smartly on the shoulder.

"Here!" he cried indignantly. "What the deuce's the matter with you?"

The man showed him a face pale with excitement; recognized his employer; but made no offer to stir.

"Come!" P. Sybarite insisted irascibly. "I've no time to waste. Get a move on you, man!"

But as he spoke his accents were blotted out by a repetition of that portentous noise which had saluted him in the lobby of the Monastery a moment since.

His eyes, veering inevitably toward the source of that uproar, found it quickly enough to see short, vicious jets of flame licking out against the gloom of an open garage doorway nearly opposite the Hippodrome stage entrance—something like a hundred feet down the street.

"What," he cried, "in hades"——

"Gang fight," his man informed him briefly. "Fly cops cornered a bunch of 'em in November's garage"——

"Whose garage?"

"Red November's! Guess you've heard of him," the man pursued eagerly. "That's right—he runs his own garage—taxis for Dutch House souses, yunno"——

Midway the dark open doorway to November's garage yawned forbiddingly, and in all the space that separated these two gatherings of spectators, there were visible just three human figures: a uniformed patrolman and two plainclothes men—the former at a discret distance, the two latter more boldly stationed and holding revolvers ready for instant employment.

"Fly cops," the chauffeur named the two in citizens' clothing. "I seen 'em stickin' round while you was inside, an' was wonderin' what they was after, when all of a sudden I see November duck up from the basement next door to the Monastery, and they tries to jump him. That ain't two minutes ago. November dodges, pulls a gun and fights 'em off until he can back into the garage."

A hand holding an automatic edged into sight round the corner of the garage door—and the pistol sang like a locust. Instantly one of the detectives fired. The pistol clattered to the walk as the hand disappeared. One shot at least had told for law and order.

"Anybody hurt yet?" P. Sybarite asked.

"Not that I know anythin' about."

"But what do you suppose makes 'em keep that door open? You'd think"——

"The way I figure it," the chauffeur cut in, "Red's planning' to make his getaway in a car. He's just waitin' till the goin' looks good, and then he'll sail outa there like a streak of greased lightnin'. Yuh wanta be ready to duck, too, 'cause he'll come this way, an'

"AGAIN the spiteful drumming of the automatic: P. Sybarite swung round in time to see one of the plain-clothes men return the fire with several brisk shots, then abruptly drop his revolver, clap a hand to his bosom, wheel about-face and fall prone. A cry shrilled up from the bystanders.

" 'They're coming!' he cried wildly. With a shiver P. Sybarite recognized that car. It was not the taxicab that he had been led to expect, but the same maroon limousine into which he had assisted Marian Blessington at the Bizarre."

keep guns goin' to prevent anybody from hinderin' him."

"Why this way? Sixth avenue's nearer."

"Sure it is, but that way he'd have them L pillars to duck, to say nothin' of the crowd, and no tellin' but what a surface car might block him. Yuh watch an' see 'f I ain't doped it out right."

From the dark interior of the besieged garage another automatic fluttered briskly; across the street a window fell in.

"Look here—you come with me," said P. Sybarite suddenly, plucking his chauffeur by the sleeve.

With a reluctant backward glance, the man suffered himself to be drawn apart from the crowd.

"How much nerve have you got?" the little Irishman demanded.

"Who—me? Why?"

"I want to prevent this getaway."

"Not for mine, friend." The chauffeur laughed scornfully. "I ain't lost no Red November gang!"

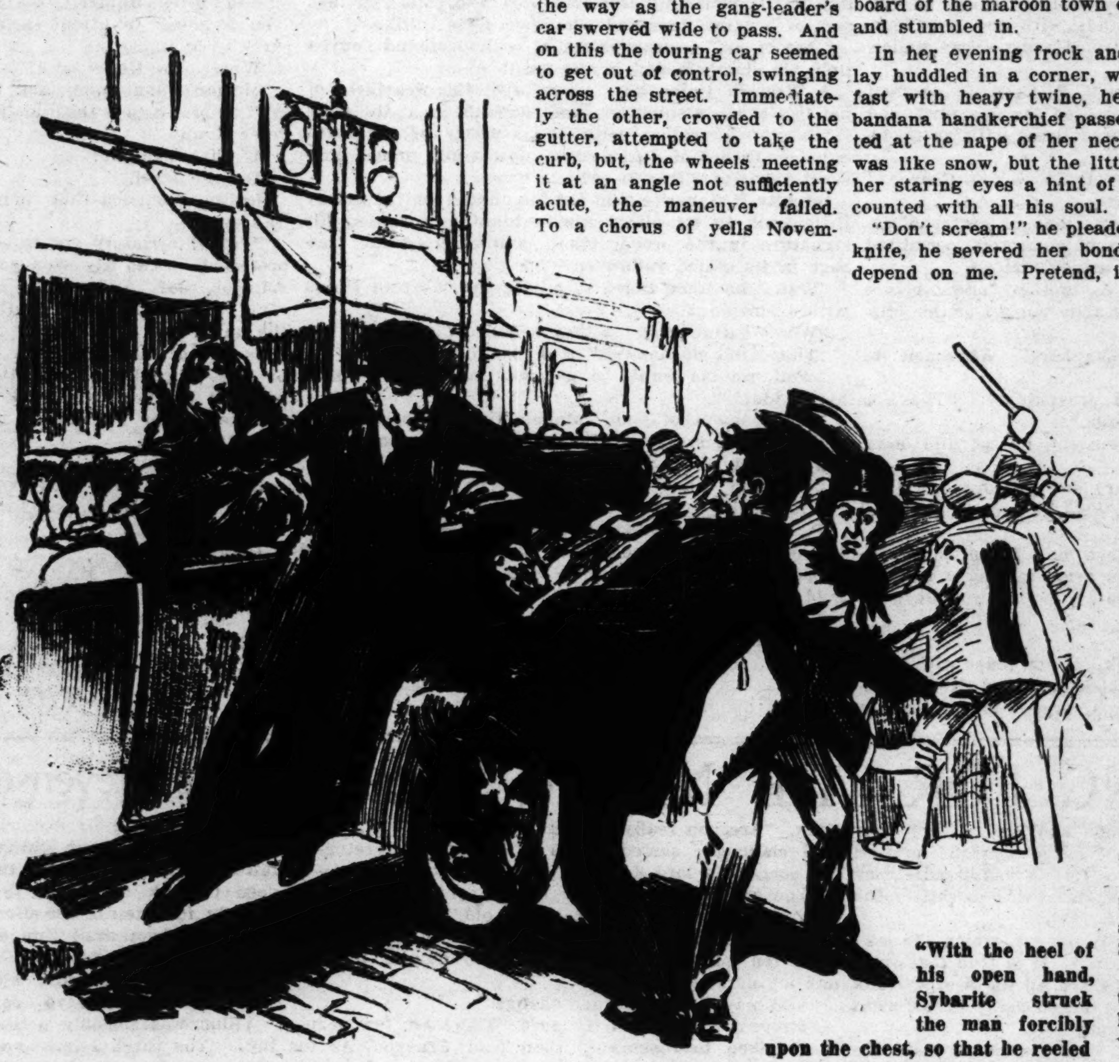
"Will a thousand dollars make you change your mind?"

"Watcha drivin' at? Me—why—I'll take a lotta chances for a thousand."

"Help me—do as I say—and it's yours."

"Lead me to the coin," was the prompt decision.

"Here, then!"



"With the heel of his open hand, Sybarite struck the man forcibly upon the chest, so that he reeled back, tripping over the hapchance foot of an innocent bystander, and went sprawling and blaspheming upon his back."

P. Sybarite delved hastily into a trousers pocket and produced a handful of bills of large denominations.

"There's a five hundred dollar bill to start with," he rattled, stripping off the first that fell to his fingers—"and here's a hundred—no, here's another five."

"In the mitt," the chauffeur stipulated simply, extending his palm. "Either you're crazy or I am—but in the mitt, friend, and I'll run the car right into that garage, 'f you say so."

"Nothing so foolish as that." P. Sybarite handed over the two bills and put away the rest of his wealth. "But jump into that car—and be ready to swing across the street and block 'em as they come."

"You're on!" agreed the chauffeur with emotion—carefully putting his money away.

"And a thousand more"—his courage wrung this tribute from P. Sybarite's admiration—"if you're hurt"——

"You're on there, too—and don't think for a minute I'll letcha fergit, neither."

The chauffeur turned to his car, jumped into the driver's seat and advanced the spark. The purr of the motor deepened to a leonine growl.

"Hello!" he exclaimed in surprise, real or feinged, to see P. Sybarite take the seat by his side. "What t' 'ell? Who's payin' you to be a God-forsaken ass?"

"Did you think I'd ask you to run a risk that frightened me?"

"Dunno's I thought much about it, but 'f yuh wanta know what I think now, I think you oughta get a rebate outa whatcha give me—if you live to apply for it. And I don't mind tellin' you, if you do, you won't get it."

Again the spiteful drumming of the automatic: P. Sybarite swung round in time to see one of the plain-clothes men return the fire with several brisk shots, then abruptly drop his revolver, clap a hand to his bosom, wheel about-face and fall prone.

A cry shrilled up from the bystanders, only to be drowned out by another but fortunately harmless fusillade from the garage.

"Tunin' up!" commented the chauffeur grimly. "Sounds like they was about ready to commence!"

P. Sybarite shut his teeth on a nervous tremor and lost a shade or two of color.

"Ready?" he said with difficulty.

The chauffeur's reply was muffled by another volley, on the echoes of which the little man saw the nose of a car poke diagonally out of the garage doors, pause, swerve a trifle to the right, and pause once again.

"They're coming!" he cried wildly. "Stand by!"

The alarm was taken up and repeated by two score throats, while those dotting the street and sidewalks near by broke in swift panic and began madly to scuttle within doorways and down basement steps.

Like an arrow from the string, November's car broke over at an angle. Ignoring the slanting way from the threshold to the gutter, it took the bump of the curb apparently at full tilt, and skidded to the northern curb before it could be brought under control and its course shaped eastward.

With a shiver P. Sybarite recognized that car.

It was not the taxicab that he had been led to expect, but the same maroon limousine into which he had assisted Marian Blessington at the Bizarre.

On its front seats were two men—Red November himself at the driver's side, a revolver in either hand. Whom the body of the car might contain P. Sybarite could not say; there was one passenger, at least, if he might trust to the most swift of impressions, gained in one hasty glance through the forward windows as the car bore down upon them—November's weapons spitting fire.

He could not say, but he could guess; and guessing, he knew his automatic in his grasp to be useless; he dared not fire upon the gangster for fear of loosing a wild bullet into the body of the car.

Now they were within fifty feet of one another. By contrast with the apparent slowness of the touring car to get in motion, the maroon limousine seemed already to have attained locomotive speed.

A yell and a shot from one of November's revolvers (P. Sybarite saw the bullet score the asphalt not two feet from the forward wheel) warned them to clear the way as the gang-leader's car swerved wide to pass. And on this the touring car seemed to get out of control, swinging across the street. Immediately the other, crowded to the gutter, attempted to take the curb, but, the wheels meeting it at an angle not sufficiently acute, the maneuver failed. To a chorus of yells November's driver shut down the brakes not a thought too soon—not soon enough, indeed, to avoid a collision that crumpled a mudguard as though it had been a thing of pasteboard.

Simultaneously P. Sybarite's chauffeur set the brakes and with the agility of a hounded rabbit seeking its burrow, dived from his seat to the side of the car farthest from the gangsters.

In an instant he was underneath it.

P. Sybarite, on the other hand, had leaped before the cars came together.

Staggering a pace or two—and all the time under fire—he at length found his feet not six feet from the limousine. It had stopped broadside on. In this position he commanded the front seats without great danger of sending a shot through the body.

His weapon rose mechanically and quite deliberately he took aim—making assurance doubly sure throughout what seemed an age made sibilant by the singing past his head of the infuriated gangster's bullets.

But his finger never tightened upon the trigger

November had ceased firing and was plucking nervously at the slide of his automatic. His driver had jumped down and was scuttling madly up the street.

In a breath P. Sybarite realized what was the matter: as automatics will when hot with fast firing, November's had choked on an empty shell.

With a sob of excitement the little man lowered his weapon and flung himself upon the gang-leader.

November rose to meet him, reversing his pistol and aiming at P. Sybarite's head a murderous blow. This, however, the little man was alert to dodge. November came bodily into his arms. Grappling, the two reeled and went down, P. Sybarite's fingers closing on the throat of the assassin just as the latter's head struck the pavement with brutal force.

The man shivered, grunted, and lay still.

P. Sybarite disengaged and got on his feet.

CHAPTER XXII.

Together.

IN a daze, P. Sybarite shook and felt himself all over, unable to credit his escape from that rain of bullets.

But he was apparently unharmed. Kismet!

Then suddenly he quickened to the circumstances; the thing was finished, November stunned and helpless at his feet, November's driver off, the crowd swarming down upon him, the police an imminent menace.

Now if Marian were in the body of the town car, as he believed, he must get her instantly out of it and away before the police and detectives could overtake and apprehend them both.

Instant action, inspired audacity, a little luck—and the thing might possibly be accomplished.

His chauffeur was crawling ignominiously out from beneath the touring car—with a countenance livid with grime and the pallor of fright. Meeting the eye of his employer, he grinned a sheepish grin.

P. Sybarite seized the chauffeur by the arm.

"Are you hurt?"

"Not ten cents' worth—much less a thousand dollars! No such luck!"

"Unhook your license number—throw it in the car—get ready to move on the word—lady in that car—kidnapped—I love her—d'you understand?—we must get her away—another thousand in this for you"——

"Gotcha," the man cut in smartly. "And I'm with you to the last act! Go to it, bo—I like your style!"

Swinging about, P. Sybarite jumped upon the running board of the maroon town car, wrenched the door open, and stumbled in.

In her evening frock and her cloak of furs, Marian lay huddled in a corner, wrists and ankles alike made fast with heavy twine, her mouth closed tight by a bandana handkerchief passed round her jaws and knotted at the nape of her neck. Above its folds her face was like snow, but the little man thought to detect in her staring eyes a hint of intelligence, and on this he counted with all his soul.

"Don't scream!" he pleaded, as, whipping out a pocket knife, he severed her bonds. "Don't do anything but depend on me. Pretend, if you like, you don't know what's happening—likely you don't at that! No matter. Have faith in me; I'll get you clear of this yet!"

He fancied a softening look in her wide and frightened eyes, so like those of a child.

An instant's work loosed her scored and excoriated wrists; in another, the bonds fell from her ankles. Deftly unknotting the bandage that closed her mouth, he asked could she walk. With difficulty, in a husky and painful whisper, but still courageously, she told him yes.

Hoping, rather than counting, he jumped out and offered his hand. She put hers into it (and it was cold as ice) stirred, rose stiffly, tottered to the door and fell into his arms.

A uniformed patrolman, breaking through the crowd about them, seized P. Sybarite and held him fast.

"What's this? Who's this?" he gabbled incoherently, brandishing a vaguely formidable fist.

"A lady, you fool!" P. Sybarite snapped. "Let go and catch that scoundrel over there—if you're worth your salt!"

He waved his free hand in the direction taken by November's driver.

Abruptly and without protest the patrolman released him, butted his way through the crowd, and disappeared

An arm boldly about Marian's waist, P. Sybarite helped her to the step of the touring car—and blessed the prince among chauffeurs who was set and ready in his seat!

But now again he must be hindered: a plain-clothes man dropped a heavy hand upon his shoulder and screwed the muzzle of a revolver into P. Sybarite's ear.

"Under arrest!" he blatted wildly. "Carrying firearms! Causing a crowd to collect"——

"All right—all right!" P. Sybarite told him roughly. "I admit it.. I'm not resisting you, am I? Take that gun out of my ear and help me get this lady into the car before she's trampled and torn to pieces by these staring fools!"

Stupidly enough the man comprehended some part of his admonishment. Staring blankly from the little man to the girl, he pocketed his weapon, and, grasping Marian's arm, assisted her into the touring car.

"Thanks!" said P. Sybarite, jumping up on the running board. "You're most amiable, my friend!"

And with the heel of his open hand he struck the man forcibly upon the chest, so that he reeled back, tripping over the hapchance foot of an innocent bystander, and went sprawling and blaspheming upon his back.

Somebody laughed hysterically.

"Go" P. Sybarite cried to the chauffeur.

The crowd gave way before the lunge of the car

They were half way to Fifth avenue before pursuit was thought of; had turned the corner before it was fairly started; in five minutes had thrown it off entirely and were running free at a moderate pace up Broadway just above Columbus Circle.

"Where to now, boss?" the chauffeur presently inquired.

P. Sybarite looked inquiringly at his charge. Since her rescue she had neither moved nor spoken—had rested motionless in her corner of the tonneau, eyes closed, body relaxed and listless. But now she roused, unveiled the dear wonder of her eyes of brown; even mustered up the ghost of a smile.

"Wherever you think best," she told him gently.

"The Plaza? You might be bothered there. We may be traced—we're sure to. This only saves us for the day. Tomorrow—reporters—all that—perhaps. Perhaps not! Don't you know somebody out of town to whom you could go for the day? Once across the city line we're safe for a little."

She nodded; breathed an address in Westchester County.

Some time later P. Sybarite became sensible of an amazing fact. A hand of his rested on the cushioned seat, and in it lay, now warm and wonderfully soft and light, Marian's hand.

He stared incredulously until he had confirmed the substance of this impression; looked up, blinking; met the confident, straightforward and wistful regard of the girl; and blushed to his brows.

The car swept on and on, through the golden hush of that glorious Sunday morning.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Perceval Unashamed.

TOWARD 10 of that same Sunday morning a touring car of majestic mien drew up in front of a boarding house in Thirty-eighth street west.

From this alighted a little man with a somewhat bedraggled appearance and a somewhat weather-beaten, but heartfelt grin.

Ostentatiously (or so it seemed to one solitary and sour-mouthed spectator disturbed in his perusal of a comic supplement on the brown-stone stoop of the boarding house) he shook hands with the chauffeur, and, speaking guardedly, confirmed some secret understanding with him.

Then the car rolled off, and P. Sybarite shuffled meekly in through the gate, crossed the dooryard, and met the outraged glare of George Bross with an apologetic smile and the request:

"If you've got a pack of Sweets about you, George, I can use one in my business."

Without abating his manifestations of entire disapproval, George produced a box of cigarettes, permitted P. Sybarite to select one, and helped himself.

They shared a match even as brothers might before honest indignation escaped the grim portals of the shipping clerk's mouth.

"Sa-ay!" he exploded. "Looky here! Wherenell 've you been all night?"

"Ah-h!" P. Sybarite sighed provokingly. "That's a long and tiresome story, George."

With much the air of a transient, he sat him down by George's side.

"A very long and very weary story, George. I don't like to tell it to you, really. We'd be sure to quarrel."

"Why?" George demanded.

"Because you wouldn't believe me. I don't quite believe it myself, now that all's over, barring a page or two. Your great trouble, George, is that you have no imagination."

"The hell I ain't!"

"Perfectly right—you haven't. If you point with pride to that wild flight of fancy which identified 'Molly Lessing' with Marian Blessington, George, your position is (as you yourself say) untenable. It wasn't imagination—it was fact."

"No!" George ejaculated. "Is that right?"

"Word of honor. But it's a secret, as yet—from everybody except you and Violet; and even you we wouldn't tell had you not earned the right to know by guessing and making me semi-credulous—enough to start something—several somethings, in fact."

"Gwan!" George coaxed. "Feed it to me—I'll eat it right outa your hand. Watcha been doin' with yourself all night, P. S.?"

"I've been day of days-ing myself, George."

"Ah, can the kiddin', P. S. Come through! Whadja do?"

"Broke every commandment in the Decalogue, George, barring one or two of the more indelicate ones; kicked the laws of chance and probability into a cocked hat; fractured more of the municipal ordinances, and—let me see—oh, yes—dislocated the long arm of coincidence so badly that all of its subsequent performances are going to seem stiff and lack that air of spontaneity which"——

"My Gawd!" George despaired. "He's off again on that hardy annual talkalogue of his! Lis'n, P. S."——

"Call me Perceval," P. Sybarite suggested pleasantly.

"Wh-at!"

"Let it be Perceval hereafter, George—always. I give you free permission."

"But I thought you said"——

"So I did—a few hours ago. Now I—well, I rather like it. It makes all the difference who calls you that sort of a name first, and what her voice is like."

"One of us," George protested with profound conviction, "is plumb looney in the head!"

A Western Union boy, weary with the weariness of not less than 40 summers, was shuffling in at the gate.

"Sa-ay!" he called, with the asperity of ingrained ennui. "Either of youse guys know a guy named Perceval Sybarite 't lives here?"

Silently P. Sybarite held out his hand, took the greasy little book in its black oilskin binding, scrawled his signature in the proper blank, and received the message in its sealed yellow envelope.

"Wait," he commanded calmly, eying Western Union with suspicion.

"W'at's eatin' you? Is they a nanser?"

"They ain't no answer," P. Sybarite admitted.

"Well, watcha want? I got no time to stick round here kiddin'."

"One moment of your valuable time. I believe you delivered a message at the Monastery Apartments in Forty-Third street this morning."

"Well, an' what 'f I did?"

"Only this."

P. Sybarite extracted an immense roll of bills from his pocket; transferred it to his other hand; delved deeper; eventually he produced a single twenty-dollar gold piece.

"Take this," he said, tossing it to the boy with princely nonchalance. "It's the last of a lot, but—it's yours."

"What for?" Western Union demanded in amaze; while, as for George Bross, he developed marked symptoms of apoplexy.

"That you'll never know," said P. Sybarite. "Now run along before I come to."

In the shadow of this threat Western Union fled precipitately.

P. Sybarite rose, yawned, smiled benignantly upon George Bross.

"I'm off to bed—was only waiting for this message," he announced; "but before I go—tell me; how much money does Violet think you ought to be earning before you're eligible for the Matrimonial Stakes?"

"She said somethin' oncet about fifty per," George remembered gloomily.

"It's yours—doubled," P. Sybarite told him. "Tomorrow you will resign from the employ of Whigam & Wimper and go to Blessington's to enter their shipping department at a hundred a week; and if you don't earn it, may God have mercy on your wretched soul!"

George rose very suddenly.

"I'll go send for the doctor," he announced.

"One moment more," P. Sybarite dropped a detaining hand upon his arm. "You and Violet are invited to dinner tonight—at the Hotel Plaza. Don't be alarmed; you needn't dress; we'll dine privately in Marian's apartment."

"Marian!"

"Miss Blessington—Molly Lessing that was."

"Honest," said George sincerely, "I don't know whether to think you've gone bughouse or not. You've always been a bit queer and foolish in the bean, but never since I've known you"——

"And after dinner," P. Sybarite pursued evenly, "you're going to attend a very quiet little wedding party."

"Whose, for God's sake?"

"Marian's and mine; and the only reason why you can't be best man is that the best man will be my cousin, Peter Kenny."

"Is that straight?"

"On the level."

George concluded that there was sanity in P. Sybarite's eyes.

"Well, I certainly got to slip you the congrats!" he protested. "And say—you goin' to bounce Whigham & Wimper, too? And watcha goin' do then?"

"I? To tell you the truth, I'm considering joining the union and agitating for an eight-hour day of days. This one of mine has been eighteen hours long, more or less—since I got those theater tickets, you know—and I'm too dog tired to keep my eyes open another minute. After I've had a nap I'll tell you all about everything."

But he wasn't too tired to read his telegram, when he found himself again, and for the last time, in his hall-bedroom.

It said simply:

"I love you. MARIAN."

From this P. Sybarite looked up to his reflection in the glass. And presently he smiled sheepishly and blinked.

"Perceval!" said the little man fondly.

A LODGING FOR THE NIGHT, By Robert Louis Stevenson

try; ay, I have seen 30 on one elm, and a very poor figure they made; and when I asked someone how all these came to be hanged, I was told it was because they could not scrape together enough crowns to satisfy the men-at-arms."

"These things are a necessity of war, which the low-born must endure with constancy. It is true that some captains drive over hard; there are spirits in every rank not easily moved by pity; and indeed many follow arms who are no better than brigands."

"You see," said the poet, "you cannot separate the soldier from the brigand; and what is a thief but an isolated brigand with circumspect manners? I steal a couple of mutton chops, without so much as disturbing people's sleep; the farmer grumbles a bit, but sups none the less wholesomely on what remains. You come up blowing gloriously on a trumpet, take away the whole sheep, and beat the farmer pitifully into the bargain. I have no trumpet; I am only Tom, Dick, or Harry; I am a rogue and a dog, and hanging's too good for me—with all my heart; but just ask the farmer which of us he prefers, just find out which of us he lies awake to curse on cold nights."

"Look at us two," said his lordship. "I am old, strong and honored. If I were turned from my house tomorrow, hundreds would be proud to shelter me. Poor people would go out and pass the night in the streets with their children, if I merely hinted that I wished to be alone. And I find you up, wandering homeless, and picking farthings off dead women by the wayside! I fear no man and nothing; I have seen you tremble and lose countenance at a word. I wait God's summons contentedly in my own house, or, if it please the king to call me out again, upon the field of battle. You look for the gallows; a rough, swift death, without hope or honor. Is there no difference between these two?"

"As far as to the moon," Villon acquiesced. "But if I had been born lord of Brisetout, and you had been the poor scholar, Francis, would the difference have been any the less? Should not I have been warming my knees at this charcoal pan, and would not you have been groping for farthings in the snow? Should not I have been the soldier, and you the thief?"

"A thief?" cried the old man. "I a thief! If you understood your words, you would repent them."

Villon turned out his hands with a gesture of inimitable impudence. "If your lordship had done me the honor to follow my argument!" he said.

"I do you too much honor in submitting to your presence," said the knight. "Learn to curb your tongue when you speak with old and honorable men, or some one hastier than I may reprove you in a sharper fashion." And he rose and paced the lower end of the apartment, struggling with anger and antipathy. Villon surreptitiously refilled his cup, and settled himself more comfortably in the chair, crossing his knees and leaning his head upon one hand and the elbow against the back of the chair. He was now replete and warm; and he was in nowise frightened for his host, having gauged him as justly as was possible between two such different characters. The night was far spent, and in a very comfortable fashion after all; and he felt mortally certain of a safe departure on the morrow.

"Tell me one thing," said the old man, pausing in his walk. "Are you really a thief?"

"I claim the sacred rights of hospitality," returned the poet. "My lord, I am."

"You are very young," the knight continued.

"I should never have been so old," replied Villon, showing his fingers, "if I had not helped myself with these ten talents. They have been my nursing mothers and my nursing fathers."

"You may still repent and change."

"I repent daily," said the poet. "There are few people more given to repentance than poor Francis. As for change, let somebody change my circumstances. A man must continue to eat, if it were only that he may continue to repent."

"The change must begin in the heart," returned the old man solemnly.

"My dear lord," answered Villon, "do you really fancy that I steal for pleasure? I hate stealing, like any other piece of work or of danger. My teeth chatter when I see a gallows. But I must eat, I must drink, I must mix in society of some sort. What the devil! Man is not a solitary animal—Cui Deus foeminam tradit. Make me king's pantler—make me Abbot of St. Denis; make me bailly of the Patatrac; and then I shall be changed indeed. But as long as you leave me the poor scholar Francis Villon, without a farthing, why, of course, I remain the same."

"The grace of God is all-powerful."

"I should be a heretic to question it," said Francis. "It has made you lord of Brisetout and bailly of the Patatrac; it has given me nothing but the quick wits under my hat and these tentoes upon my hands. May I help myself to wine? I thank you respectfully. By God's grace, you have a very superior vintage."

The lord of Brisetout walked to and fro with his hands behind his back. Perhaps he was not yet quite settled in his mind about the parallel between thieves and soldiers; perhaps Villon had interested him by some cross-thread of sympathy; perhaps his wits were simply muddled by so much unfamiliar reasoning; but whatever the cause, he somehow yearned to convert the young man to a better way of thinking, and could not make up his mind to drive him forth again into the street.

"There is something more than I can understand in this," he said at length. "Your mouth is full of subtleties, and the devil has led you very far astray; but the devil is only a very weak spirit before God's truth, and all his subtleties vanish at a word of true honor, like darkness at morning. Listen to me once more. I learned long ago that a gentleman should live chivalrously and lovingly to God, and the King, and his lady; and though I have seen many strange things done, I have still striven to command my ways upon that rule. It is not only written in all noble histories, but in every man's heart, if he will take care to read. You speak of food and wine, and I know very well that hunger is a difficult trial to endure; but you do not speak of other wants; you say nothing of honor, of faith to God and other men, of courtesy, of love without reproach. It may be that I am not very wise—and yet I think I am—but you seem to me like one who has lost his way and made a great error in life. You are attending to the little wants, and you have totally forgotten the great and only real ones, like a man who should be doctoring toothache on the Judgment day. For such things as honor and love and faith are not only nobler than food and drink, but indeed I think we desire them more, and suffer more sharply for their absence. I speak to you as I think you will most easily understand me. Are you not, while careful to fill your belly, disregarding another appetite in your heart, which spoils the pleasure of your life and keeps you continually wretched?"

Villon was sensibly nettled under all this sermonizing. "You think I have no sense of honor!" he cried. "I'm poor enough, God knows! It's hard to see rich people with their gloves, and you blowing in your hands. An empty belly is a bitter thing, although you speak so lightly of it. If you had had as many as I, perhaps you would change your tune. Anyway, I'm a thief—make the most of that—but I'm not a devil from hell, God strike me dead. I would have you know I've an honor of my own, as good as yours, though I don't prate about it all day long, as if it were a God's miracle to have any. It seems quite natural to me; I keep it in its box till it's wanted. Why now, look you here, how long have I been in this room with you? Did you not tell me you were alone in the house? Look at your gold plate! You're strong, if you like, but you're old and unarmed, and I have my knife. What did I want but a jerk of the elbow and here would have been you with the cold steel in your bowels, and there would have been me, slinking in the streets, with an armful of golden cups! Did you suppose I hadn't wit enough to see that? And I scorned the action. There are your damned goblets, as safe as in a church; there are you, with your heart ticking as good as new; and here am I, ready to go out again as poor as I came in, with my one white that you threw in my teeth! And you think I have no sense of honor—God strike me dead!"

The old man stretched out his right arm. "I will tell you what you are," he said. "You are a rogue, my man, an impudent and black-hearted rogue and vagabond. I have passed an hour with you. Oh! believe me, I feel myself disgraced! And you have eaten and drunk at my table. But now I am sick at your presence; the day has come, and the night-bird should be off to his roost. Will you go before, or after?"

"Which you please," returned the poet, rising. "I believe you to be strictly honorable." He thoughtfully emptied his cup. "I wish I could add you were intelligent," he went on, knocking on his head with his knuckles. "Age! age! the brains stiff and rheumatic."

The old man preceded him from a point of self-respect. Villon followed, whistling, with his thumbs in his girdle.

"God pity you," said the lord of Brisetout at the door.

"Goodby, papa," returned Villon with a yawn. "Many thanks for the cold mutton."

The door closed behind him. The dawn was breaking over the white roofs. A chill, uncomfortable morning ushered in the day. Villon stood and heartily stretched himself in the middle of the road. "A very dull old gentleman," he thought. "I wonder what his goblets may be worth."

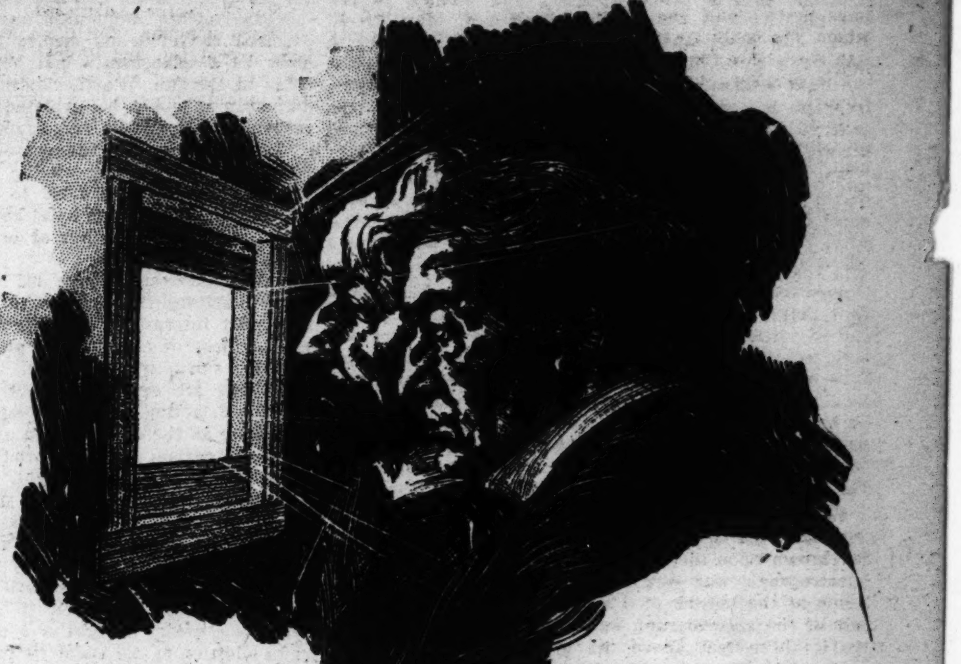
Scientists Claim Spirit Communication

Holland Physicists of Great Reputation Say That They Have Talked With the Dead by Instrumental Means

A Series of Startling Experiments Which Form the Basis for Their Theory Concerning the Life After Earthly Death

By HEREWARD CARRINGTON.



"The experimenters took u their positions in the passag and watched the instruments through the small window."

DIRECT communication with the spirit world has actually been established by instrumental means, is the startling claim made by two Dutch physicists—Drs. J. L. W. P. Matla and G. J. Zaalberg van Zelst, in their new book, "La Mystere de la Mort." (The Mystery of Death.) They are both inhabitants of The Hague, and for more than 22 years they have been constantly experimenting in the hope of answering the time-old question—the riddle of the Spinx—"If a man die, shall he live again?"

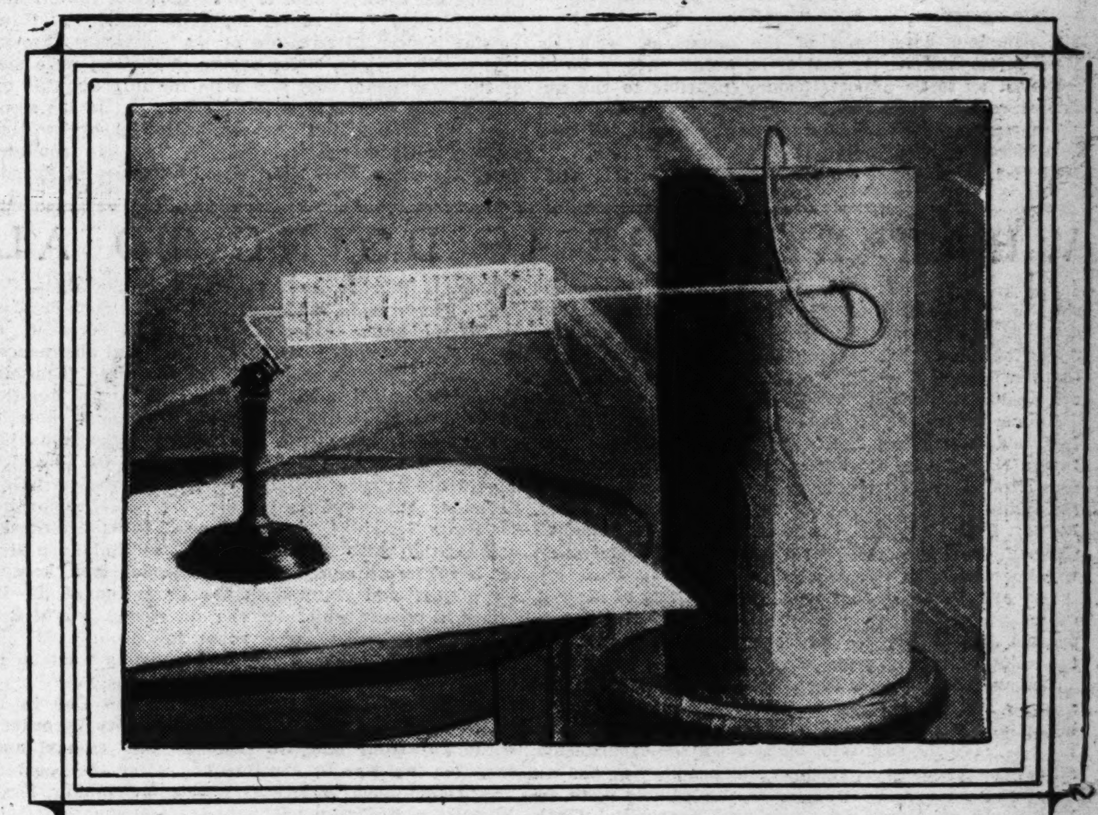
Doctors Malta and Zaalberg van Zelst are known in Holland for their original work in physics. In addition to the experiments here recorded, they have worked a great deal with high-frequency electric currents, in liquid air, and in the compression of various gases. Dr. van Zelst Sr.—the father of the present author, and now the "spirit" communicating by means of these instruments—was also noted as an ingenious scientific experimenter and physicist.

They went about their quest in a decidedly novel manner. Instead of employing a professional—or even an amateur—medium they used no medium whatever. They were aware of the constant cry of the skeptic—a cry which is, alas! only too often justified—that "a medium is invariably a trickster," and that even if one does get "phenomena," they are always open to question. So they decided to hold informal seances in their own home and in their immediate family; and finally they constructed delicate instruments which apparently enabled "spirits" to communicate direct, without any living person being present. The result of their years of labor is the "dynamistograph," by means of which, these experimenters assert, they have been able to talk to their dead relatives and friends—instruments alone being the "mediums."

This, surely, is a great forward step in the investigation of the unknown—of psychic phenomena! If once we could open up communication with the spiritual world by this means, it would soon be proved. And a word, just here, as to the theoretical possibility of such a thing—which may strike the reader as "impossible" at first sight.

We ordinarily suppose that "spirits" (even granting that they exist) cannot influence or affect our material world. In this we are, probably, quite right—they cannot. They manipulate their particular forms of energy; and we, ours. But suppose that an energy common to the two worlds should be discovered—an energy, i. e., which both spiritual and material beings could utilize and manipulate—we should then have direct communication by this means. The man who discovers what this energy is will go down in history as the greatest discoverer of all time—besides whom Darwin and Edison and Kant and Archimedes will shrink into comparative insignificance!

So there is nothing "impossible" in this theory of direct instrumental communication. Has it actually been done? The reports of these two Dutch physicists are certainly very striking; the experiments were very carefully conducted, and covered a number of years. For 10 years—during which time they were constantly holding sceances—they got only the message: "We have no force! We have no force!" Gradually they devised the apparatus they have since perfected, and today they believe that they have the means of communication ready to hand, and actually in operation!

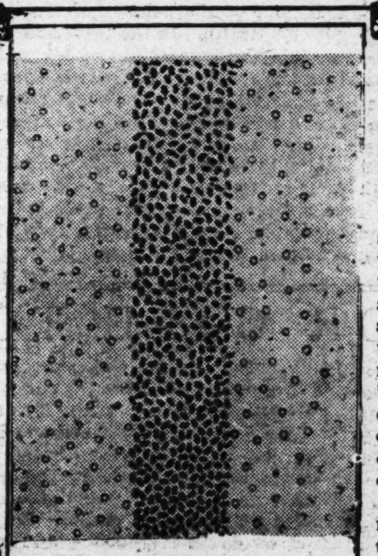


"A cardboard cylinder, about 50 cm. high and 25 c broad was covered with sheets of tin, rendering i hermetically sealed. The inside of this cylinder was quite shut off from the outside air—save by a small glass and rubber tube, connecting it with a recording instrument, called a manometer—constructed somewhat on the style of the thermometer, only containing one drop of alcohol in place of the mercury."

Here, then, are their experiments: A small room was constructed, about 2½ yards in length, by 2¼ wide, by 3 yards high. The room was connected with a passage by means of a door—all other doors and windows being carefully sealed and covered with thick black material. The floor of this room was specially strengthened, so as to prevent earth-vibrations from reaching the instruments (very important, in view of the delicate nature of the apparatus). The door into the passage contained a small window, guarded by blinds; and the experimenters took up their positions outside the room, in the passage, and watched the instruments through the small window. Thus, no one was in the experimental room during the sittings. Sometimes the observers had to employ opera glasses to read the vibrations on the recording instruments in the sceance room while the sitting was in progress.

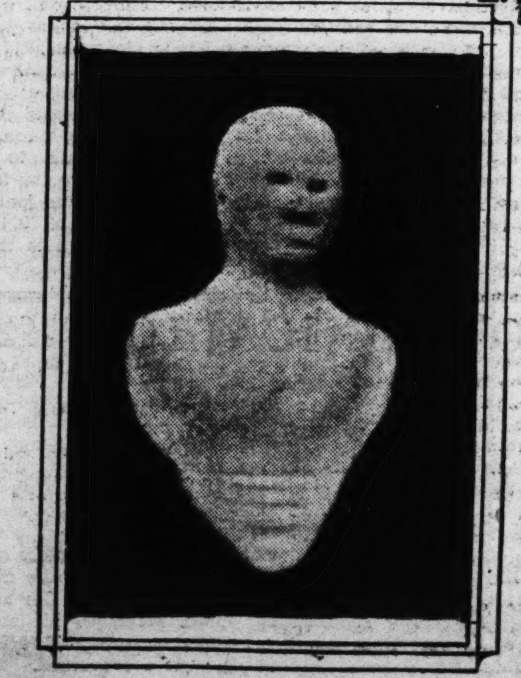
In this room, then, was placed, first of all, a cardboard cylinder, about 50 cm. high and 25 cm. broad. Its content was some 22 litres. (That is, it would contain about two-fifths of a solid human body.) This cardboard cylinder was covered with sheets of tin, rendering it hermetically sealed. Two strips of plain cardboard were left along each side, however, "for the entrance of the "man-force' — as the manifesting entity was throughout called. The inside of this cylinder was thus quite shut-off from the outside air—save by a small glass and rubber tube, connecting it with a recording instrument, called a "manometer" — constructed somewhat on the style of the thermometer, only containing one drop of alcohol in place of the mercury, so as to be easily displaced, as it ran up and down the glass tube. This recorded the degree of pressure or displacement of the air or gas inside the cylinder.

At first this small cylinder was tried. The "man-force" was asked to enter the cylinder; immediately afterwards the drop of alcohol was seen to run along the glass recording tube, showing that something was in the cylinder, displacing some of the gas. On being requested to leave the cylinder, the alcohol drop at once returned to its normal condition and remained there, until the "man-force" was asked to enter the cylinder again, when the same thing was repeated. This was gone through a number of times. Then, larger cylinders were employed; finally two cylinders, one of which the "man-force" entered, the other being used as a "control." The exact size, weight, density and structure of the "man-force" could thus be calculated.



"The man-force was asked to enter the cylinder; immediately afterwards the drop of alcohol was seen to run along the glass recording tube, showing that something was in the cylinder, displacing some of the gas."

"Doctors Malta and Zaalberg Van Zelst contend that the form of life in which man survives the death of the body is a finely attenuated material body; about the density of ordinary air, yet differing from it in many essential particulars. The head and shoulders are far more strongly developed than the rest of the body."



Of course the experimenters realized that various natural causes might prevail, imitating to some extent these phenomena. Thus, (1) temperature; and (2) added pressure (atmospheric or other), might also affect the contents of the cylinders, as well as the introduction into the cylinders of molecules—solid matter. All these natural causes were, however, most carefully guarded against by the experimenters; and, seemingly, they cannot account in the least for the results attained. Hence something solid entered the cylinders.

"But," I hear the reader say, "if this is the case, "spirits are material things; they have solid bodies!"

Precisely!

Doctors Malta and Zaalberg van Zelst contend most emphatically that the form of life in which man survives the death of the body is not "pure spirit" at all; but, on the contrary, a finely attenuated material body; about the density of ordinary air, yet differing from it in many essential particulars. The head and shoulders are far more strongly developed than the rest of the body. According to the accounts given by this entity, it does not have by any means a "fine time" of it in the next life; but is destined to wander about aimlessly, unable to do anything, having no useful members until it disintegrates in the same way that the physical body does here! It undergoes a "second death;" and then, annihilation! It is not a very cheerful doctrine—or one liable to be "made-up" by the experimenters—for most spiritualists and mediums invariably assert that those on "the other side are 'appy," as 'Arry said, in talking to 'Arriet, through a medium.

As a matter of fact, of course, the facts brought forward by these original savants do not in the least prove that the spirit of man does not and cannot live after the destruction of his second body. He would simply undergo a second death and pass on into a third form of life—a second Heaven, if you please—of which he would be as ignorant as we are of the first. There may be several heavens, one after the other—seven, if we are to accept the teachings of the Orientals, many spiritualists, Dante, Swedenborg and a few others who thought they knew something of such things!

What is the nature of this body which man is said to inhabit after death? According to the detailed mathematical calculations and deductions of these savants, its volume is about 50 liters. The body is capable of great expansion and contraction—under the action of the will of the "man-force"—it is capable of expanding

If one take a prism of glass and hold it to the sunlight, he will observe beams of red, blue, green, violet and other shades. These rays all combine to make the white light. The prism has simply broken the light beams into their component parts. The spectrograph is simply a telescope which collects all light rays within its field, dissects them and then photographs the result.

The spectrum is of invaluable aid to science. By means of it the chemical composition of all the burning gases of the sun can be ascertained. A given chemical when reduced to gas and the gas is ignited will show a given spectrum, unlike any other.

Spectrograph pictures of the sun already had shown that there were magnetic fields on its surface, around the so-called sun-spots. But no machine had been constructed that would catch the fine details of a picture that would show whether there was a general magnetic field around the whole planet. If such a machine could be built, it was believed, it would photograph self-luminous fields around the planet that would show whether there was any general magnetic field, as indicated in the Yerkes photograph of the corona.

First a 150-foot tower telescope was constructed. It was arranged in such a way that its reflections should be thrown upon the glass of a 75-foot spectrograph. The spectrograph was put in a pit, the collimating lens being at the bottom of a well about 80 feet deep. The slit of the spectrograph on which the images fell was about three feet above the ground. Still below the collimating lens was a grating, or apparatus on which the breaking up of light rays is done on a large scale and to it was attached a photgraphic device. All this meant that a single ray of light had to go through nearly 200 feet of costly apparatus before it could be broken up into particles fine enough for the purposes of this delicate operation.

A complete description of the apparatus, with its Nicol prism and all the rest of it, would have to be so technical as to be almost incomprehensible to the unskilled reader. What it finally does is to leave on a photographic plate a photograph of the spectra, divided into incredibly small sections.

Thousands of plates were photographed in this manner before Dr. Hale, who had been in personal charge of the experiments, announced any conclusions. Then he declared the evidence seemed sufficient to prove that observed displacements had been caused by magnetic fields in the sun. Furthermore, he did not think these disturbances could be explained by the magnetic disturbances around the sun spots.

"Disregarding, for the reasons already stated," Dr. Hale says in summing up the results, "the hypothesis of local whirls, we are led to seek the source of the sun's magnetism in its avial rotation. The north magnetic pole of the sun lies at or near the north pole of rotation."

Hale's discoveries have led to the promulgation of some startling theories by several scientists. One of the most interesting of these would upset all the accepted ideas of the celestial phenomena, for it declares that the sun is not hot at all, but that the earth's heat and light are caused by electric rays. These rays, it is argued, acting upon the resistance of the earth's atmosphere as the electricity in an incandescent lamp acts upon the carbon filament, produces a friction which, in turn, produces heat and light.

According to this theory, the sun is a cold, solid mass, radiating electric energy throughout the universe. If one were beyond the earth's atmosphere at noon, he would find nothing but an icy void of illimitable blackness. He might progress until he reached the very atmosphere of the sun itself, if this hypothesis is correct, without a gleam of light or a touch of heat.

In addition to the magnetic theory, two principel arguments are presented by those holding to this point of view. One is that if the sun is in a state of combustion it must have burnt itself out long ago, in the aeons science ascribes to its existence; the other is that terrestrial phenomena cannot be explained by the sun-combustion theory. Both of these horns of the dilemma are presented in a recent magazine article by Edwin Fairfax Nulty, an advocate of the electricity theory.

In the first place, Nulty argues, if the sun were made of the best steam coal and were burning up, this coal would all be consumed within 5000 years. In the second place, he argues that the combustion theory will not explain why, if the sun radiates heat, an equatorial mountain three miles high, which he names in Ecuador, with its summit nearest the sun, will have ice and snow and a temperature of 20 degrees at the peak, a temperature of 70 degrees half way down and, at the bottom, the torridity of a temperature of 120 degrees.

As an advocate of the electricity theory, he argues that this phenomena is explained by the fact that the atmosphere is less dense at the peak than at the base, consequently there is less opportunity for friction and therefore less heat and light. He points out that on the summit of such a mountain one can look without blinking into the sun, and says that this proves there is less light as well as less heat.

Accepted science puts this aside with another explanation. It is that the atmosphere of the earth acts just as the roof of a greenhouse does. That is, when the sun's heat penetrates to the earth, it is caught and imprisoned by the atmospheric envelope. At the summit of the mountain the envelope is thinner, consequently more heat escapes into space, and the temperature falls.

Edwin Fairfax Nulty, who recently wrote a magazine article in defense of the electricity theory, argued that there are two important forces in our solar system and that the sun is a combined dynamo and generator. The magnetic force of the system, he declared, flows towards the sun, entering it at its poles. These rays, coming from the North and South poles, meet at the center and set up a great electrical flow at its equator. This energy is then thrown off from the sun in radiation.

In other words, his argument is that the sun is a sort of heart of the entire system. That is, it draws magnetic force in from the other planets and sends it forth again as electricity, as the human heart draws the vitiated fluid through the veins and pumps it forth again, to pass, vivified, re-energized, through the arterial system.

It must be said that this electricity theory, although advocated from time to time for more than two decades, has never been accepted by orthodox scientists. It unquestionably leaves many things to be explained, such, for instance, as the phenomena of the solar spectrum, which appear to show conclusively that the sun is a great burning mass. But at any rate, its supporters are drawing considerable comfort from the recent discoveries of Hale.

WHAT EUROPE IS DOING TO ALCOHOL

The great colleges of Europe are taking the leadership in the prohibition movement, according to Gordon. At least, from the college professors and the students the most ardent advocates are obtained. A list of the distinguished men of science who have gone on record against alcohol is remarkable.

Among them are Prof. Demme of Berne; Prof. Kraepelin, Heidelberg; Prof. Smith and Dr. Gaule, Zurich; Dr. Philip N. Ekholm, Stockholm; Prof. Laitenin, Helsingfors; Prof. Kassowitz, Vienna; Dr. Bertholet, Lausanne; Dr. Rubner, Berlin; Dr. von Bunge, Basel; Dr. Schnyder, Berne; Prof. Lutoslawski, Lemberg. Eight hundred German professors and physicians signed a statement which ended with this paragraph:

"We are convinced that with the banishing of alcohol, other causes of human misery would be easily suppressed, that abstinence would contribute essentially to the solution of the great social question."

Demme, who is rector of the University of Berne, read a paper at the Christian Anti-Alcohol Congress that is being widely used as a weapon of the prohibitionists. In it he gave the results of many scientific experiments, all of which showed deleterious effects following the use of alcohol in any quantity. His experiments were enlarged and confirmed by Smith and Kraepelin. Gaule declared he had found that alcohol has a withering effect upon all protoplasm. Kessowitz conducted experiments which, he believed, conclusively showed that the belief there is food value in alcoholic drinks is a myth. Bertholet declared that alcohol has a pronounced asexual effect. Dr. Floras, a pupil of Von Bunge, who examined and classified the teeth of hundreds of persons, declared that the average number of decayed teeth in the mouth of a drinker is twice as great as in the mouth of a nondrinker.

Among the strongest allies the prohibitionists have found in Europe are leading Socialists. Dr. Otto Lang and Dr. H. Blocher, leaders of the Swiss Socialists, Prof. Emile Vandervelde, leader of the Belgian Socialists, and Dr. Victor Adler, leader of the Austrian Socialists, are on record as unqualifiedly in favor of total abstinence.

Russian trade unionists in 1910 organized themselves into development clubs, which printed 10,000 questions to be used in an investigation of the liquor question, but the police mercilessly crushed the propaganda. The Socialist papers such as The Abstinent of Berlin and the Abstinente Arbeiter openly advocate teetotalism. Dutch Socialists have organized abstinence societies, as have the Swiss Socialists. Swedish Socialists have formed an organization with 23,000 members. In Finland a strike of 70,000 workingmen against alcohol was kept up for a year and resulted in the formation of the Red Guard, a society which led the movement by which the National Assembly twice voted for prohibition. The Norwegian Socialists in national assembly went on record as opposed to the use of intoxicants.

German Socialists at the Leipzig Party Day in 1909 called upon the people to boycott spirits in order to withdraw from the Government the money necessary for increase in armaments. After the resolution was passed, such leaders as Bebel, Molkenbuhr, Singer, Wengels and Pfannkuch signed a statement, declaring that "out of the pennies of the drinkers the aristocrat gets his wealth. In the tears and deprivations of women are laid the foundations of his pride and luxury. With every drop of brandy which goes down your throats, you pay tribute to your worst enemy. German workers, if you will no longer be Junkers' serfs, avoid schnapps!"

July 11, 1911, representatives of the Social Democratic leagues of Germany, Austria and Switzerland, after an 11-hour debate in convention at Dresden, agreed on a common program. This indicated, as a final aim, the prohibition by popular vote of the production and traffic in alcohol drinks. In Munich, Budapest, Graz, Basel, Remscheid and even in Paris and Rouen, Socialists are freely circulating total abstinence literature.

It is among the college students that the most zealous abstinence partisans are found. This information is all the more startling when the German university drinking customs are remembered. Yet even among the German students abstainers are at work. In 1909 251 student corporations stood ready to admit abstainers and 103 had already admitted them. Yet a few years ago, an abstaining German student would have been a curiosity.

Munich abstainers have organized a large and prosperous society. A similar society at Heidelberg engages lecturers of international reputation. A group at Vienna is growing rapidly and is spending money liberally in circulating literature. Prague students operate 16 circulating temperance libraries. At Basel the abstainers' society, called Libertas, gives big social events. Libertas at Berne has induced the faculty to give a course of lectures on alcoholism. Salubritas at Freiburg has accomplished a similar work. Libertas in Geneva brings student lecturers, many of them Russian.

Stuttgart abstainers have formed clubs which take mountain-climbing jaunts at frequent intervals. All the important Scandinavian colleges have large colonies of abstainers. One of these societies numbers 1374 persons training to be teachers. The Northern societies are extending their propaganda into the common schools. Members of a large Polish society have taken a "fourfold pledge" to abstain from alcohol, tobacco, gambling and sexual immorality.

Throughout Europe the prohibitionists are working in the common schools, hoping to reach the children. The theory is that the children of today will be the voters of tomorrow. And it is doubtless this quiet missionary work which will be the biggest thing Old John Barleycorn will have to fight after all.

ALL ABOARD FOR CAPE TOWN! IN 1916

extended the line to Sennar and then to Kosti.

At the other end, the discovery of diamond fields had brought the railroad to Kimberley; the finding of gold carried it northward again to the Rand; and the opening up of Rhodesia led the iron highway to Bulawayo. There it stopped, apparently for good.

This was the situation when Rhodes appealed to the Imperial Government for aid in realizing his dream. The man who, in South Africa, had added to the British Empire a territory as large as Germany, Austria, France and Italy combined, expected to receive a respectful hearing. He was told that his vision was picturesque and romantic, but impracticable and impossible.

Rhodes returned to Africa, and after months of hardships and privation, facing death from native spears, poisonous snakes and the sleeping sickness, his men weakened by malaria and his animals killed by the tsetse fly, he set out for England with surveys and estimates. These he presented to Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, Chancellor of the Exchequer.

This immaculate statesmen, twirling his monocle negligently and regarding with supercilious disfavor the fever-sunken cheeks and unkempt appearance of the pioneer, remarked coldly:

"Really, Mr. Rhodes, I fear it is quite out of the question for Her Majesty's Government to lend its countenance to your scheme." Rhodes, as he went out, slammed the door in the Minister's face, and betook himself to Alfred Beit and his partner, Wernher, old friends of Kimberley days. What the Government refused to do was accomplished by two German Jews. Within a fortnight they had obtained subscriptions for four and a half million pounds sterling, or about $22,000,000. It was private capital with which the railroad was undertaken.

Rhodes' ambition for an "all red" route, or one all the way under the British flag, was apparently frustrated by the convention which established German East Africa directly across his proposed right of way. The line was to cross to the east of Lake Tanganyika. Rhodes went so far as to open negotiations with the Kaiser himself for the acquisition, by treaty or purchase, of a British zone through the German protectorate. Germany refused.

Then the proposed line was boldly swept hundreds of miles to the west, on the other side of the lake, so as to pass through the Belgian Congo. Only within the recent months, however, was the Belgian Government persuaded to cede a strip of land to Great Britain. This at last makes possible an "all red" route, without a break, from Alexandria to Cape Town.

Although the project is described as the Cape-to-Cairo railroad, only 4979 miles of the route will be by train. The remaining distance will be traveled by steamboat. The various stages of the journey are described as follows: Cape Town to Bukama (by train), 2632 miles; Bukama to Congola (by steamer), 398 miles; Congola to Kindu (by train), 217 miles; Kindu to Pointhierville (by steamer), 196 miles; Pointehrville to Stanleyville (by train), 77 miles; Stanleyville to Mahagi (by train), 683 miles; Mahagi to Kosti (by steamer) 1163 miles; Kosti to Wady Halfa, via Khartoum (by train), 815 miles; Wady Halfa to Assuan (by steamer) 208 miles; Assuan to Cairo (by train), 555 miles—in all 6944 miles, or, if we add the journey from Cairo to the sea at Alexandria, a total of 7074 miles. The 683 miles from Stanleyville to Mahagi is the section still to be completed.

itself 1.26 mm., which equals about one-forty millionth of the volume of its body; or of contracting itself 8 mm., which equals one six-and-a-quarter millionth.

What else can we find out about this body? By careful experiments it was ascertained that its weight was about 67 grams. (This closely resembling the results obtained by Dr. Duncan MacDougall, some years ago.)

By means of their "dynamistograph"—a very complicated electrical instrument, through which the "man-force" learned to talk directly (spelling out words to the sitters by pressing an electric key as a circular disc containing the alphabet rolled beneath it, thus completing the circuit), much more was learned. The following are the authors' main conclusions:

1. That after the death of the body, a second form of life continues to exist.

2. That this form of life—the "man-force"—is still subject to the law of gravitation.

3. That the "man-force" can influence the minds of those still living (as was proved by experiments).

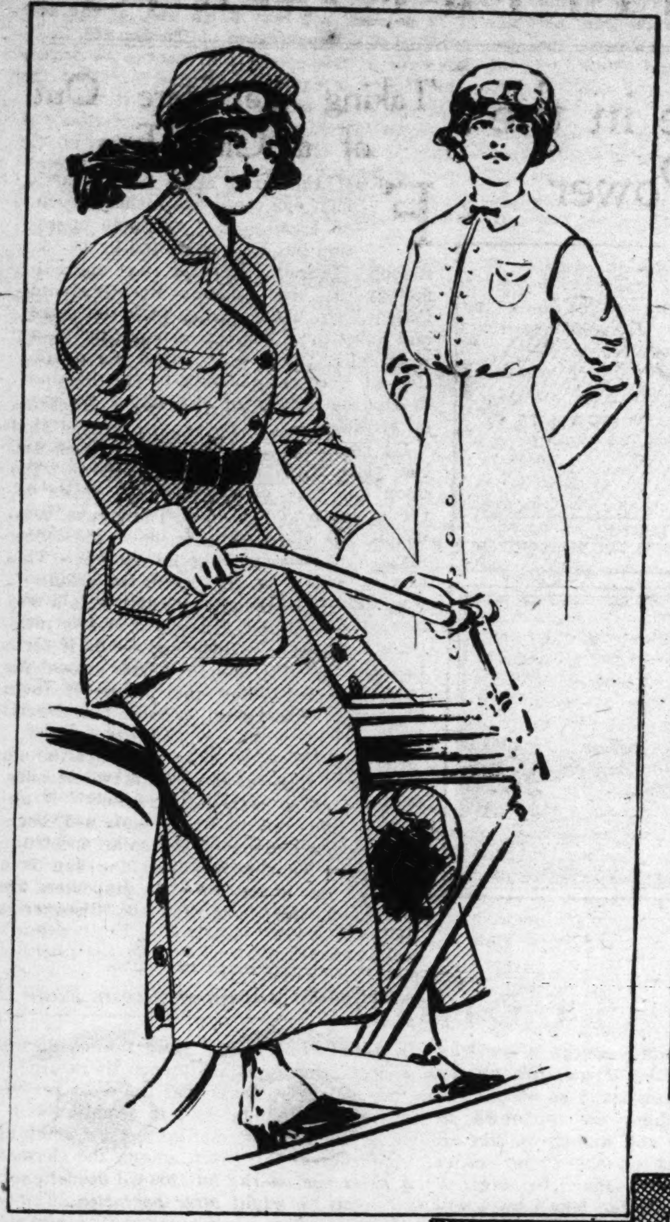
4. That, in this second form of life, the "law of might"—the survival of the fittest—reigns as it does here.

5. That this second form of life is temporary; the "man-force" gradually disintegrates, and hence suffers final annihilation.

Let us summarize the results of this startling book. According to these Dutch savants, the second body which we inhabit after death has a volume of 52 liters; and a weight of 67 grams. There is an X-force (unknown) which holds this gaseous body together. Its specific weight is 12.24 mgs. lighter than hydrogen, and 176.5 times lighter than air. The will acts upon this body mechanically, causing it to expand (rise) or contract (descend). If, however, it rises too high, it disintegrates; and then we see the fearful spectacle of a man going-to-pieces before our eyes!

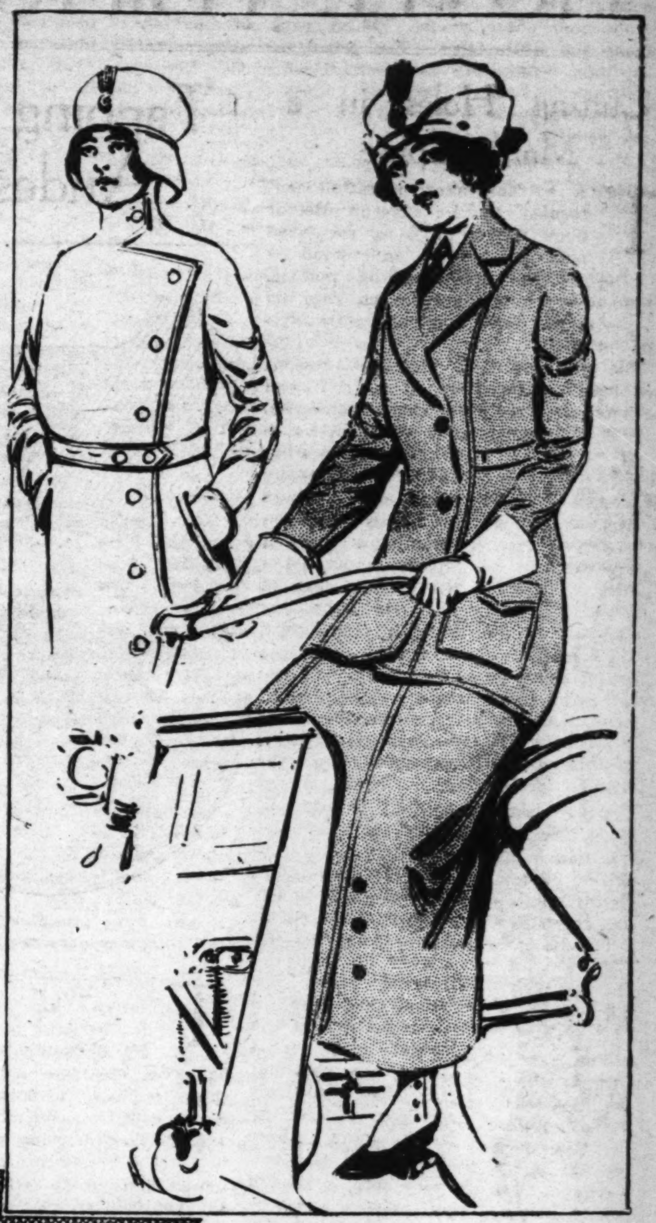
Whether a form of life exists after this second form or not is a quandary. Our authors incline to think not; but many other psychic students insist that there is yet a higher form of life in which these dangers and tribulations are avoided.

What Do You Wear When You Motor-Cycle?

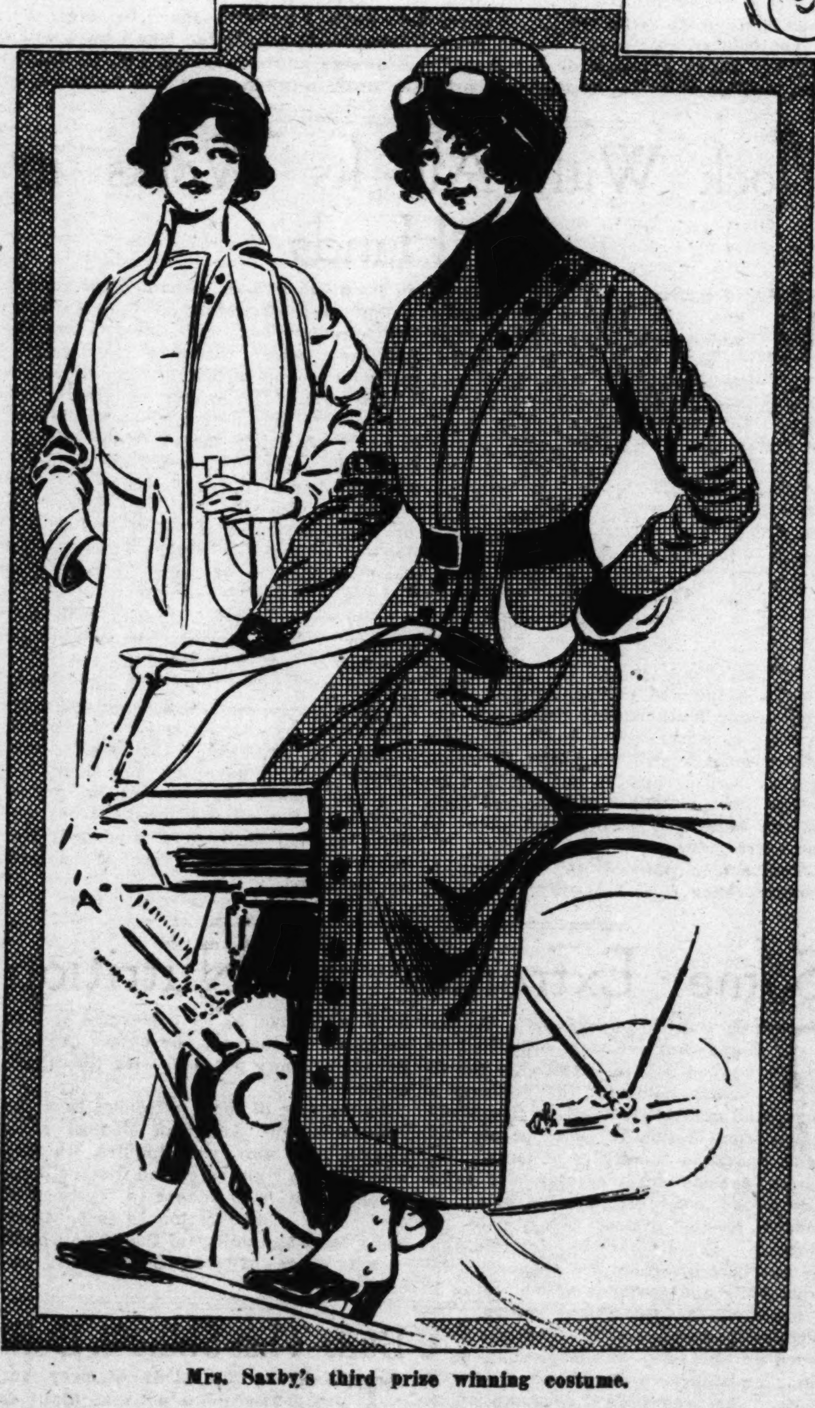


Mrs. Mortimer's second prize winning costume.

Three costumes which won first prizes in an English competition and are said to embody all the ideals of safe, warm, comfortable and well appearing cycle dress . .



Miss Lillywhite's first prize winning costume.



Mrs. Saxby's third prize winning costume.

WHAT to wear on a motor cycle is a problem an increasing number of women have to solve. In England, where the motor cycle is ridden by hundreds of thousands of women, the demand for a perfected costume led Ladies' Field to open a prize competition. The three best costumes entered in the competition are now being manufactured for ready-to-wear sale in London.

Miss Margery Lillywhite of Westerton, Chichester, Sussex, was the first prize winner. Her design, which is shown in the picture, differs only in small details from those which won the second and third prizes and all have long, divided skirts. The short skirts which some St. Louis women affect are not approved by the English and although a majority of English horseback riders use the side saddle, many motor cycle riders use wheels built for men and wear divided skirts.

Miss Lillywhite's description of her own costume follows:

"The one essential is a small hat. If the dressing of the hair permits, elastic should be worn rather than hatpins, as this not only keeps the hat absolutely firm, but also holds the hair in place and is safe if an accident occurs. I prefer a hat with a small brim, as if caught in a storm one only has to turn down the brim and jam the hat well down on the head, and all necessity for a veil or other protection is done away with. A veil of the very thinnest and finest net or gauze will be found to not only keep out all insects, but if of dark blue will be very restful to the eyes in sunny weather.

"The most suitable 'dress' is undoubtedly a coat and skirt. I have found the closely woven materials, similar to gentlemen's suitings, more serviceable than loosely woven things, such as Donegal tweeds, etc., especially if outside pockets are worn. It is more expensive to buy, but the extra wear amply compensates for this. Of course, it is well known that a skirt always gets shabby before a coat. This is slightly more marked when used for motor cycling; therefore, it will be found economical to provide each coat with two skirts, to be worn alternately. I have found an overcoat of good grayish fawn covert-coating with band only halfway round, well lined throughout, with the collar turned up, absolutely impervious to rain, wind and cold. Dirt of all kinds simply rolls off it; it wears forever, the color is pleasing and serviceable, and the texture is suitable for practically any occasion.

"Brown leather boots or shoes are best. I prefer the look of shoes and generally wear them, but perhaps boots are rather more serviceable, as they protect the legs from rain, dust, etc., when the weather does not demand the use of leggings. In the winter I always wear puttee spats, which have never yet allowed my legs to get wet or cold. Breeches should always be worn. I find the best materials are tussore silk for summer, ordinary cloth for spring and autumn, and whipcord for winter. These last should be made so that the puttees, or whatever leggings are worn will overlap."

Mrs. Mortimer, winner of the second prize, emphasizes the point that the knickers must be made to fit closely over the knees similar to men's riding breeches. Her skirt is made with corslet top, which saves all the bother of sagging skirt and waist belt. The fastening of the skirt down the center seam is so plain it can be worn as a walking skirt. The waterproof coat is three-quarter length; a strap at the waist prevents ballooning. Her boots reach to the knee and are large enough to permit wearing woolen stockings. The gaiters are long and carried up over the knees. Goggles, with side view, are essential.

Mrs. Saxby, winner of the third prize, wears a ninon veil instead of goggles in winter and lays stress on the necessity for covering the hair which otherwise becomes dry and impoverished from much motor cycling. She opens the skirt from the waist line while the first and second prize winners prefer a lesser opening.

Do You Sit Gracefully?

LET us consider where you fall short of your ideal of grace and charm. Call our friend, the mirror, into the consultation, and examine yourself as dispassionately as though you were a bisque figure in a china shop. Draw up a chair before its truthful reflection, and seat yourself. Notice whether you sit down heavily; whether you unconsciously grasp the arms of the chair and lower yourself; whether you flop down quickly as if to get it over; or whether you slowly unbend and relax and sink gracefully back. Quite likely the latter achievement is beyond you, as yet, if you have been too busy a woman to give much thought to your own attractiveness hitherto.

In sitting, the body should be well back in the chair. If the muscles are well trained, the spine should not quite touch the chair; if they lack training, as is apt to be the case, sit so that the end of the spine is against the back of the chair at its joining with the seat, says Bettina Van Ness in The Mother's Magazine. You can then lean gracefully against the back of the chair without spoiling the lines of the body. Never slide down in the chair—no matter how comfortable the attitude may seem to you.

Next, look to the position of your legs. Are they crossed? Oh, yes, of course I know that the ultra-smart set are making fashionable a pronounced freedom of attitude. But crossed legs are not at all pretty, as your mirror will tell you when you critically examine the lines they produce, and it may not be amiss to add that physicians say, through the pressure of veins and arteries which results, appendicitis and rheumatism quite frequently follow in their train.

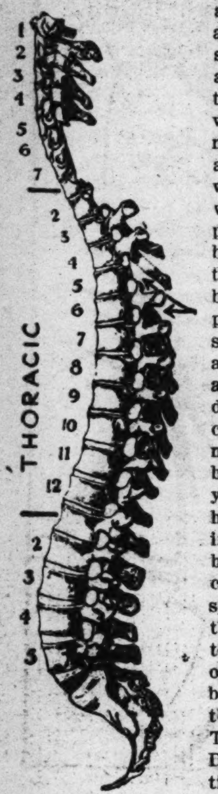
If your feet are wound ingeniously around the leg of your chair or eac other, or are tilted on their toes, I sha have no trouble in making you adr that the attitude is not one which wo appeal to the casual observer as full grace. Rest the soles of your feet on the floor at a graceful angle, with not more than the toes showing from beneath your gown.

NOVEL THINGS WORTH KNOWING

Cutting Holes in a Man's Spine

THE extraordinary operation performed by Dr. Joseph Rector upon the spine of a paralyzed man can best be understood by looking at the accompanying picture. This shows a human spine, seen from the left, with the parts removed by Dr. Rector indicated.

The patient's fifth thoracic vertebra has been shattered by an accident and he was paralyzed from that point down. The spine consists of a series of bones articulated together and surrounding the spinal cord. There are holes between these bones, through which emerge the nerves that connect all parts of the body with the spinal cord, which is merely a prolongation of the brain. When one of the vertebrae is broken part of it presses upon the spinal cord, perhaps actually injuring it, and from this point down the body is cut off from communication with the brain. This paralysis may extend higher up than the injured point, for blood clots may become lodged in the spinal canal and these are sufficient to cause paralysis of every part of the body below where they are situated. The description of Dr. Rector's operation seem to indicate that this was so in the case of his patient.



Black part shows portion of spine cut away and replaced; arrows point to part removed altogether.

Dr. Rector laid bare the spine as far up as the fifth cervical vertebra, at the base of the neck. He sawed out the back part of the sixth and seventh cervical and the first and second thoracic vertebrae. (Some of the published accounts included the "eighth cervical vertebra." There is no such thing, man, like all other mammals, always having seven cervical vertebrae.) This exposed the spinal cord. The third and fourth thoracic vertebrae were left undisturbed.

The fifth thoracic vertebra was the one broken. The posterior half of this was cut away and discarded. After Dr. Rector had lifted the spinal cord slightly he bathed it in salt water and removed three blood clots from the canal. Then he carefully replaced it, put the pieces he had cut from the upper vertebrae back in place, wired the bones together, replaced the muscles, stitched up the skin and adjusted a plaster cast.

In the picture the bone that was cut away and not replaced is indicated by arrows.

At present writing the patient is doing well, but such operations are always a last experiment and it never astonishes a surgeon if they fail to save the patient's life.

Polysyllabic Troubles

THE following, taken from an account in a scientific magazine of a recent congress of neurologists and nerve specialists, are a few of the more novel terms they used in their addresses and in their debates:

Mistakeshepsomania.—The common habit that young men have of pulling their budding mustaches.

Otodactylomania.—The habit of putting the little finger into the ear and agitating it violently.

Strebsorhabdomania.—Twirling the umbrella as one walks.

Oniphagomania.—Biting the nails.

Stomadactylomania. — The habit, so common among babies, but by no means uncommon among adults, of keeping a finger in the mouth.

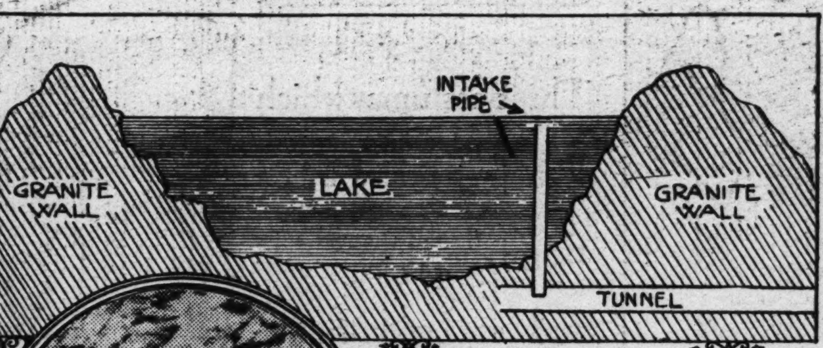
Harmoniomania.—Beating a tattoo with the finger tips upon the window, the table or other furniture.

Trepod mania.—Moving the legs nervously.

the Kratopomania.—Crossing the legs one Ther the other and pulling up the trouser show to reveal the socks.

care. these curiosities may be added The more serious psychoses which are signs of real though perhaps only slight mental derangement, namely, "agoraphobia" or dread of open places, and "kleitophobia" or dread of inclosed places.

Tapping an Aerial Lake in the Andes for Water Power



Mouth of the tunnel whence the pipe will emerge to the turbines.

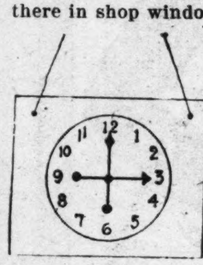
The Lake of the Incas.

TEN THOUSAND FEET above the valley of the Aconcagua in Chili is the Lake of the Incas. It is a wide stretch of water navigated by great steamers which were carried there in pieces, principally on the backs of mules. It is the highest lake in the world. The inclosing wall of the lake is of granite, but so thin that a slight earthquake shock might fracture it and allow the contents of this aerial sea to pour down the valley and destroy the largest interior cities of Chili. Partially to prevent this possible catastrophe and more directly to secure a great head of water power American engineers drove a tunnel into the mountain to the bed of the lake. A pipe will be driven through the lake bed to the tunnel and so permit the flow of water under control down to turbines, so large and numerous that all the power needed by the valley cities for every purpose may be created. Through this tunnel the lake's level will be lowered and the pressure on its thinner walls relieved.

Clock With All Its Works in Its Hands

MANY persons must have wondered how the transparent clocks which seemingly have no works to move the hands are operated.

This clock, which is seen here and there in shop windows, consists of a plate glass, half a yard square, with a dial marked on it and having a pair of hands pivoted in the center. It is suspended from the ceiling or from a peg by two thin strings. No works are to be seen, the glass is transparent and the suspending strings cannot, of course, conduct electricity, nor is there any "wireless" apparatus in sight. The hands may be spun around at will in either direction or they may be held in one position, together, for any length of time and upon release both will return and point to the correct time.



The explanation of the mystery is simple: Each hand is perfectly balanced on its pivot, and the ornament or round weight at its extremity is really a hollow circular box containing a watch movement which causes a tiny weight to travel around within the circumference of the box. The center of gravity of the hand is thus destroyed by the movement of the weight, which in the minute hand makes one revolution in an hour and the hand, of course, moves at corresponding speed. The hour hand has an identical movement at its extremity, but, of course, the weight in this case revolves once in 12 hours, making the hand do the same.

It is evident that if the hands be deranged or held together the weights in the movements will continue to travel around and upon release of the hands the hands will at once assume the positions fixed by the movements, springing forward or backward to the correct time.

Some models have one movement for the two hands, the hour hand being geared to the minute hand. Is is obvious that in such an arrangement the hands cannot be spun around at will nor deranged.

Some Extremes in Nutrition

THE Danish physiologists, August and Marie Krogh, organized an expedition to investigate the dietary habits of the Eskimos at the island of Disco in Western Greenland. The normal ration of these people contains enormous quantities of meat. The eating periods are irregular and infrequent, the meal occasionally being extended to the utmost capacity of the stomach. Despite this we are told that no nutritive disorders are apparent aside from boils and frequent nose-bleeding in the periods of over-liberal eating. The physical endurance of the Eskimos nourished in this way is conspicuous, as is their resistance to the rigors of the climate. The highest food consumption actually measured by the Kroghs was nearly four pounds of boiled meat in one day. This is said to be far below a record figure, however.

The other extreme is reported by Hindhede in Copenhagen. His subject was able to maintain himself in excellent efficiency for months on a diet of potatoes and margarin. The amount of potato was extremely large, amounting to four pounds a day, which few persons could manage to consume, day after day. When hard work had to be performed it was necessary to increase the potato to eight pounds or more per day, with liberal additions of fat.

In the face of these extremes, says the Journal of the American Medical Association, one may well inquire whether many of the rigid rules and dietary dicta of physicians who adhere to "systems of diet" have a justification in fact. Obviously the adaptability of the human body to wide ranges of food possibilities is considerable.

Birds That Shine in Dark

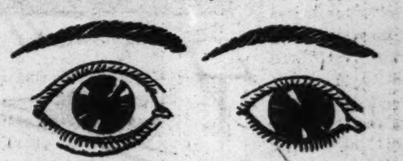
THAT certain birds of prey are sometimes luminous at night is a fact well known to observant naturalists. It is explained by the presence on their feathers of the phosphorescent spores of certain fungi that grow upon the trees in which they roost. But the Bulletin of the National Acclimatization Society of France records the observation of a white swan that was luminous all night from July to October of last year, while none of the other birds that inhabited the same lake could be seen after dark.

Taking the Stare Out of a Glass Eye

FROM the fixed stare of the artificial eye there has hitherto been no escape. But a simple operation has been perfected by Dr. N. Bishop Harman, lecturer on ophthalmology at the London Post-Graduate College, which does away with the stare and substitutes for it a suggestion of a wink. Dr. Harman described his operation at a recent meeting of the Section of Ophthalmology of the Royal Society of Medicine.

He remarked that the effectiveness of the glass eye as a disguise depended upon the size of the opening between the eyelids; when this was small it was usually so effective that many wearing glass eyes passed unremarked even by careful observers. But when the opening was wide the glass eye became the most marked feature of the face. Instead of being a disguise it seemed to make manifest the loss. There is usually a space between the eyelid and the iris of the glass eye, and there is always a deep hollow beneath the eyebrow and a lesser furrow in the lower lid.

Dr. Harman's operation consists in splitting both eyelids for a short distance from the outer corner, drawing the cut edges together and sewing them, thus making the opening of the eye smaller. This is not the place to describe the surgical technique of the operation, which is so simple that the stitches and bandages are removed on the fourth day.



A glass eye on the left before operation; on the right after operation.

The effect of this operation is, in Dr. Harman's words, admirable. "To a critical judgment," he said in his address, "it is noticeable that in place of the fixed stare of the glass eye and the sunken lids, there is produced a slight and subtle wink. The union of the lids at the canthus or outer corner brings the remaining margins forward on to the shell, slightly reducing the exposed area of the shell and shadowing it the more, so masking its artificiality. Yet the full line of the lid is continued by the united rows of lashes beyond the new canthus. The pull of the lids against each other smooths out appreciably the furrows above and below the lids; indeed, that of the lower lid is lost. The apparent movement of the eye is increased.

"The whole effect of the change produced by the operation upon the physiognomy of the patient is to make the natural eye the feature that catches the eye of the beholder.

"Finally, the operation complete and the tissues healed, it is possible where glasses are ordinarily worn to give such a glass for the blind side as will make the palpebral fissure appear of equal vertical width with the natural side, and at the same time enlarge the upper lid so as to diminish still more the upper sulcus or depression. In the case of a man the wearing of a monocle on the natural side affords an additional disguise to any inequality between the conditions of the eyes. But even without these accessories the effect of the operation is sufficient."

NEW AND ODD THINGS IN SCIENCE

An All-Torpedo Warship

CHIEF ENGINEER CUNIBERTI of the Italian Navy Shipbuilding Department, believes that the day of the great battleship is rapidly drawing to a close and that it will soon give way to small, rapid, almost submarine vessels armed only with torpedo tubes.

In an article in the Rivista Marittima he presents his arguments. The mechanism of the automatic torpedo has been perfected, and now it can be used successfully at distances of from a mile to a mile and a half. Its speed has reached 40 knots an hour, and the charge of explosives which it carries gives it tremendous power. It has therefore become a weapon which deserves a far more important role than that hitherto assigned to it.

It is a primary rule of naval construction, as Capt. Sauvaire Jourdan of the French navy writes in La Nature, that a warship must be about evenly balanced between offensive and defensive qualities; that is to say, it must be protected by armor in due proportion to the strength of its armament. Cannon have hitherto been the only weapons considered in the defenses of warships, so armorplating has been sufficient for their defense. Their cannon are adequately protected by the plating of their turrets.

It is different with torpedo boats. These have no protection whatever, and must rely for safety upon their speed. But though they have now become enormously powerful engines of attack they still have no possible defensive qualities.

Cuniberti remarks that great changes in naval construction, as in women's costumes, come in cycles of about ten years. The cycle of the all-heavy-guns ships, which began with the Dreadnought ten years ago, is about to close, and he foresees that its place is to be taken by what he calls the all-torpedo vessel.

Another famous Italian engineer, Lorenzo d'Adda, agrees with Cuniberti as to the imminent close of the day of the heavy battleship, but offers a slightly different substitute for the morrow. He has designed a torpedo boat protected by armor 15 3-5 inches thick at the water line and 12 1-2 inches thick above; with a speed of from 25 to 26 knots, carrying 15 15-centimeter cannon in a redoubt, with which to protect itself against attacks by ordinary torpedo boats; and below the water line 20 torpedo tubes.

This armored torpedo boat will be 432 feet long, have 10,000 tons displacement, and will be driven by Parsons turbine engines of 32,000 horse-power.

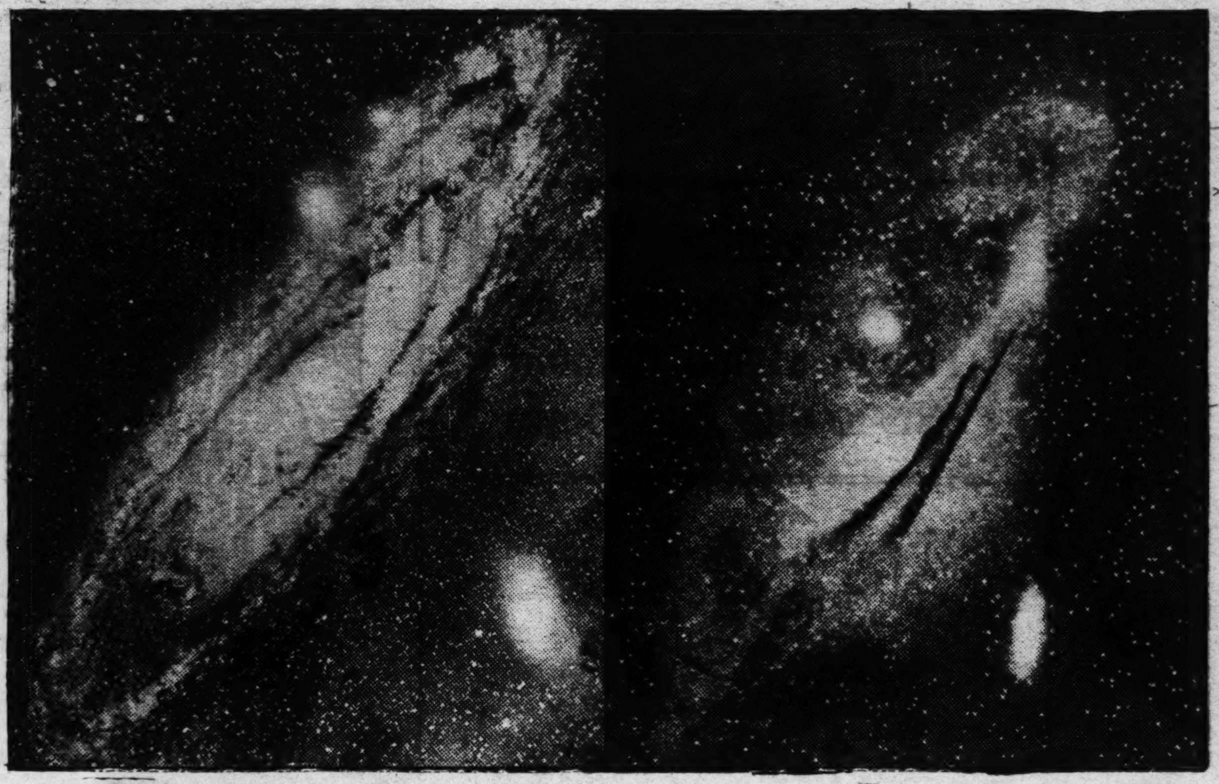
Capt. Jourdan remarks that such a vessel would be a formidable enemy, for its speed would enable it to choose its own moment for fighting; its thick armor would make it secure against all ordinary projectiles, and a swarm of its powerful torpedoes would, if not destroy the enemy, at least put it hors de combat.

Success of Prenatal Care

THE Committee on Infant Social Service of the Women's Municipal League of Boston has for more than four years been having poor pregnant women visited every ten days by a competent nurse who gives them advice, but no drugs, except cascara. The committee's report for this year shows definite results of this prenatal care.

The percentage of stillbirths fell from 2.6 per cent, the average for the first three years, to 1.7 per cent for the fourth year. The percentage of premature births fell from 1.7 per cent to 0.7 per cent. A slight increase in the average birth weight is also recorded.

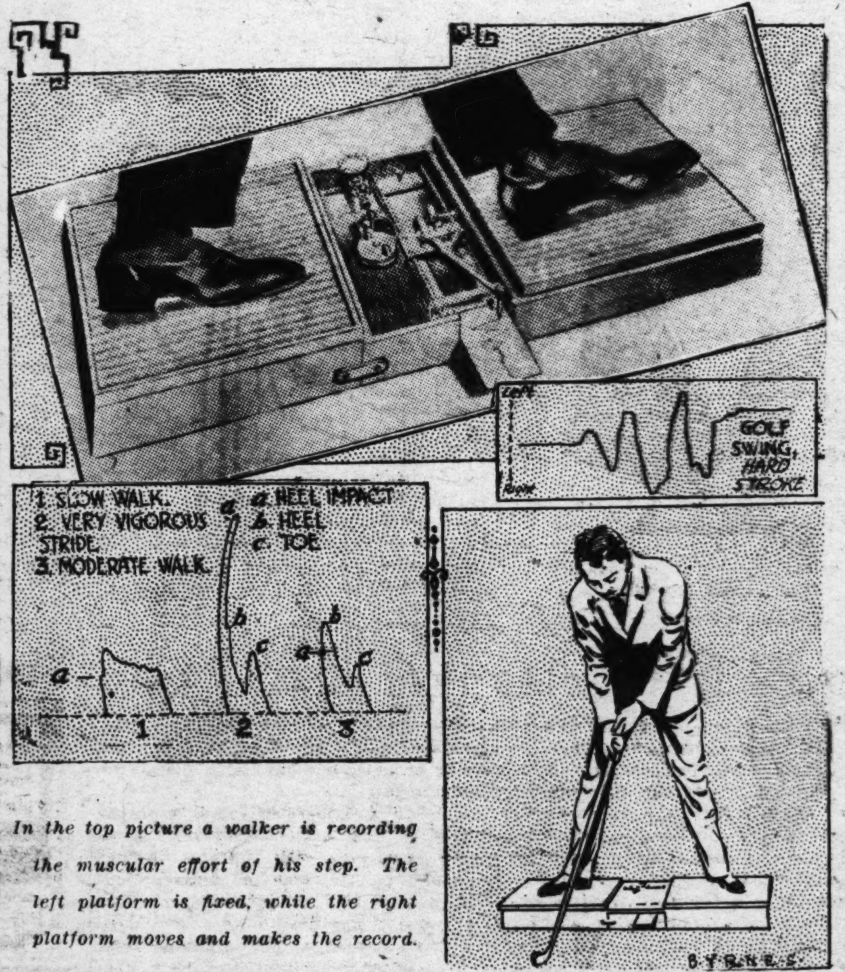
Nebula of Andromeda as Seen by an Artist-Astronomer and by the Camera



As photographed after an exposure of 4½ hours. As drawn by Astronomer Trouvelot.

TROUVELOT'S drawing of the Andromeda Nebula shows how an artist-astronomer may attain nearly to a faithful picture, and yet miss the whole point of the structure. Trouvelot has drawn the two dark rifts as straight lines: They are really slightly curved, as seen in the photograph, and the curvature at once indicates the whirling nature of the rings or spirals round the central mass. The failure of the artist, says the London Illustrated News, is simply due to the fact that he could only see at any one time a very small part of the Nebula; his complete drawing is the result of piecing together the various small views, and the slight, but vitally important, curvature of the rifts was lost in this process. The photographic plate can receive simultaneous impressions from the whole structure.

Curves of Walking and Golfing Registered by Machine



In the top picture a walker is recording the muscular effort of his step. The left platform is fixed, while the right platform moves and makes the record.

HERE is a machine to register the muscular effort of walking and golfing. It was invented by an Englishman, H. S. Hele-Shaw. The recording apparatus produces records that are constantly characteristic of the effort. A golf curve would never be mistaken for a walking curve. The inventor has suggested that records of criminals' walk would be as valuable as thumb prints in their future identification, as no two persons will produce exactly the same curve.

Cannon's Twenty-Five Million Horsepower

COMMANDER REGNAULT of the French navy in an address to an association of civil engineers calculated that the force developed in the heart of a large cannon firing a 500 kilogram projectile with a muzzle velocity of 900 inches a second is equivalent to 25,000,000 horsepower. That of a field gun firing a projectile weighing about seven kilograms with a muzzle velocity of 500 inches is 115,000 horsepower.

Taking the Cinders Out Smoke

THE New York Edison Co., after many years of experiments, has at last devised a method of taking cinders out of smoke. Residents in the neighborhood of its Waterside stations Nos. 1 and 2 complained about the cinders that fell over their property. The editor of Power describes how the problem was solved.

A "wind rose" was charted, and showed that 76 per cent of the cinder emitted from the stacks was blown into the river, due to the prevailing winds from the northwest. The other portion represents the area within which the remaining 24 per cent of the cinder was distributed. This rose shows that less than one quarter of the cinder emitted was deposited in an area from which complaints came. This fact indicates what a large amount was blown from stacks, when less than one-quarter of it caused the protests that had been made.

The company's engineers erected a special cinder-producing plant, with which they tested the various apparatus. They tried to precipitate the cinders by reducing the velocity of the gases, but this proved futile. Next, settling chambers, baffles, screens, water sprays, etc., were tried. Finally, high gas velocity with sharp changes in direction of flow and impingement on films and surfaces of water proved successful.

Next Year Look for the Turbine Auto

THE Royal Automobile Club of England has just announced that it will hold a competition next year for internal combustion turbine motors.

A double novelty is here—a motor car run by a turbine and a turbine worked by internal combustion. It was said years ago that an internal combustion turbine would be possible, if only platinum were not the most precious of metals—the idea being that nothing but platinum or some similar practically infusible metal could be used for the rotor blades.

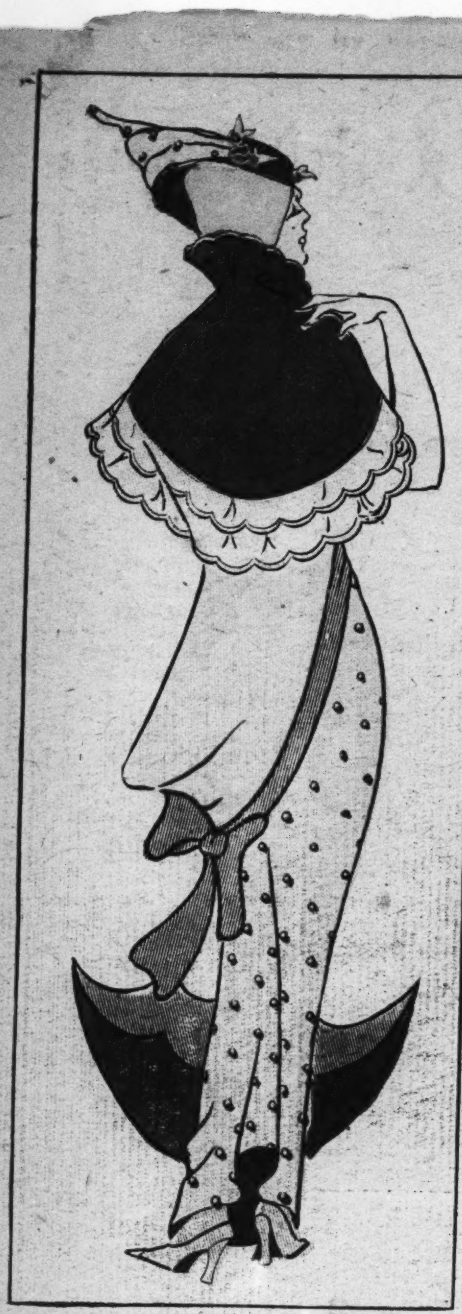
W. Whittall, motoring editor of the Illustrated London News, says: "There is in existence at the present moment an internal combustion turbine motor which I am told on excellent authority does comply with all the requirements necessary for success. In power output for weight of motor it compares quite favorably with engines of the reciprocating type, while in point of fuel efficiency I am told that it leaves little to be desired."

Resetting a Shoulder

A DISLOCATED shoulder may be replaced with scarcely any pain by the following procedure, according to Dr. Julius Caesar of Ilchester, England.

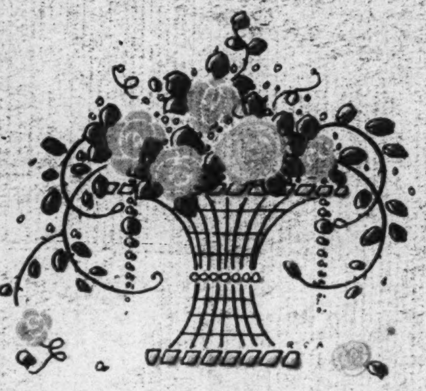
Divest the patient of outer clothing. Place him on the ground in a sitting posture. Grasp the wrist of the dislocated arm and have a third person grasp the wrist of the other arm. Raise both arms simultaneously over the head, taking care to keep them parallel, and extending them upward till the patient is just raised from the ground. At this point a click is heard and felt. This is the sound of the arm on going back into its socket.

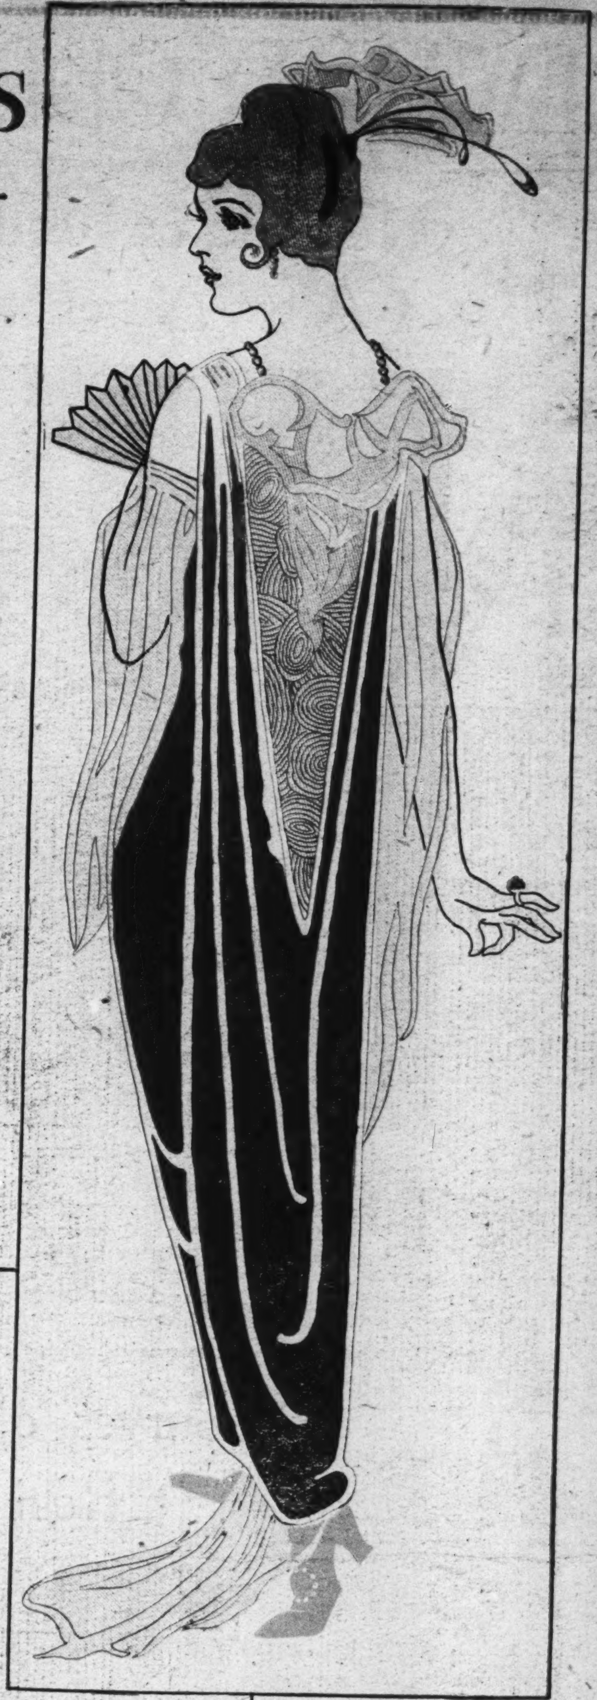
MAKE two equal balls of lead, shoot them about on a billiard table, and if they strike each other head on they come to a dead stop; they do not rebound. If they strike each other at an angle the balls rotate around each other for a part of one turn, and each moves off in a straight line tangent.

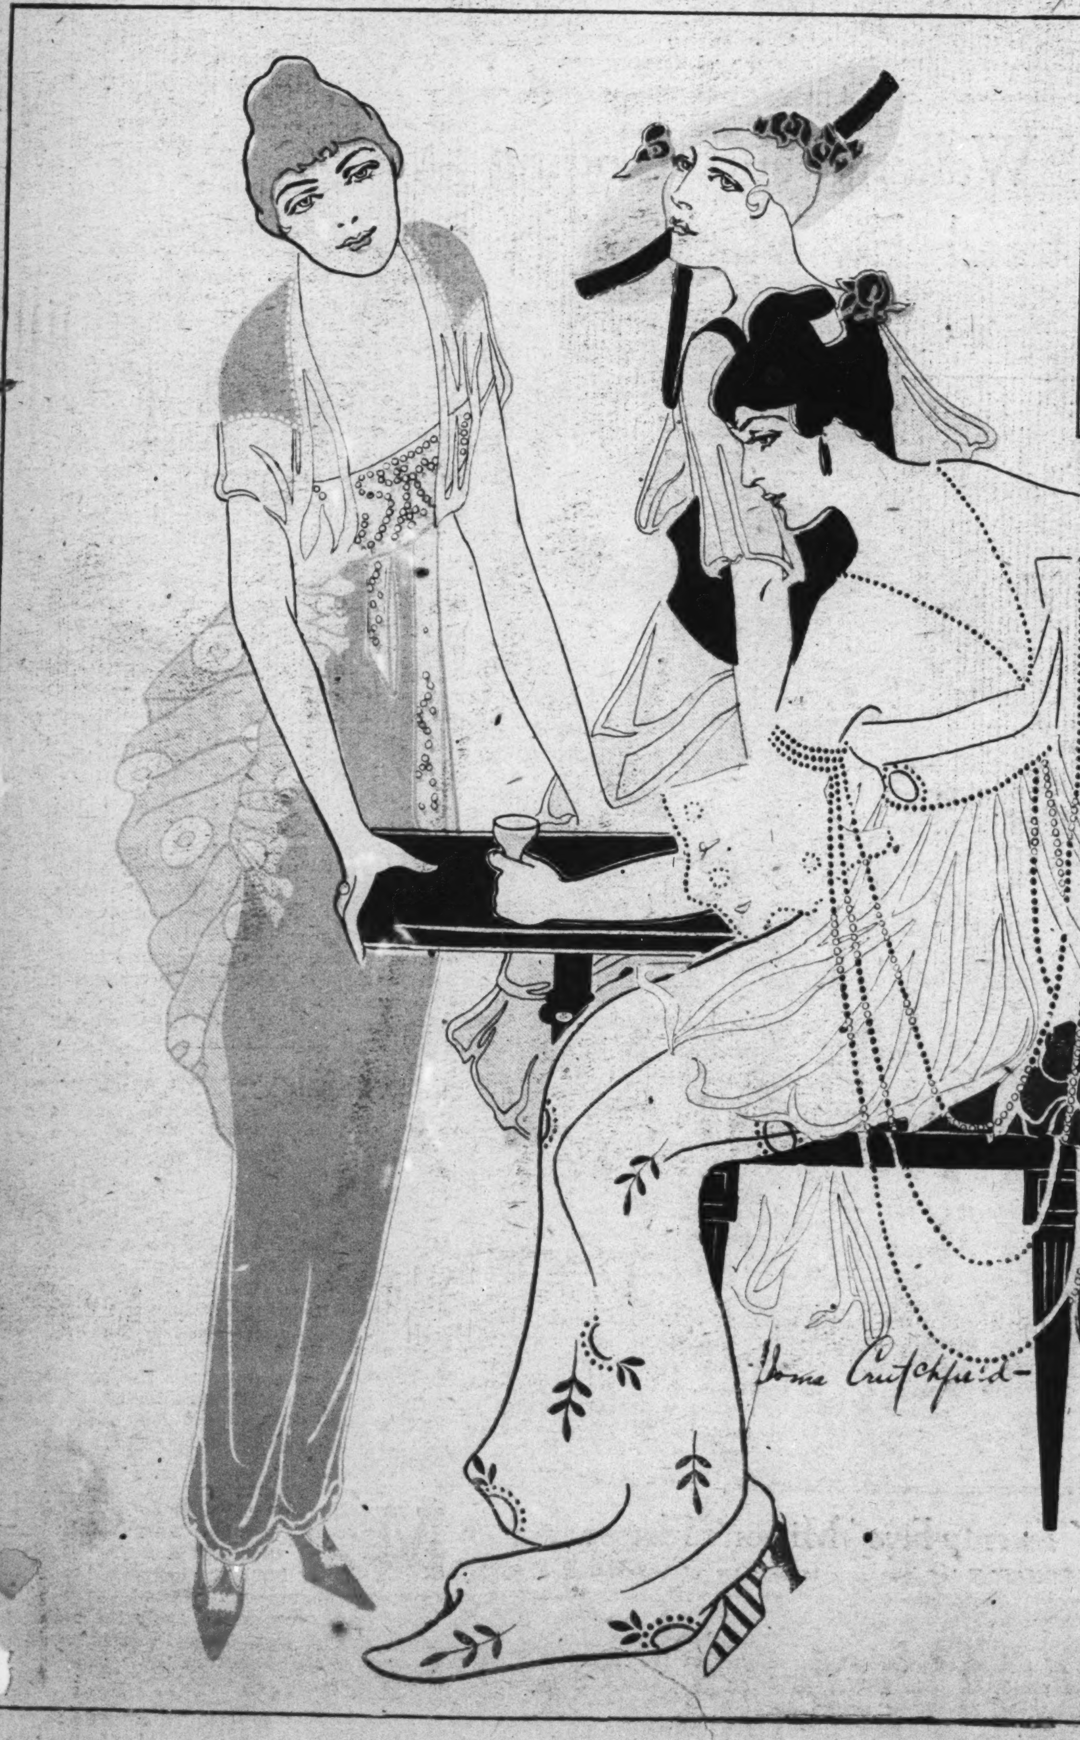


Vivid Colors for Piquant Spring Gowns

Anything Milady Wants Except Room to Move Her Feet and Comfort When She Sits Down







ANARCHY reigns in Paris. No, not in the Chambre des Deputes, but in the Bois de Boulogne. They have stolen a Louis Quartorze hat, to top a cape of the age of George the Third. They have taken the trousers of the harem and joined them to the bustle of Queen Victoria. They have confused the ballet dancer and the shepherdess; the ingenue and the widow of forty. They have split the rainbow into a thousand different shades, and then jumbled them together in a perfect riot of color. They have created chaos, these designers, but mon Dieu, what would you? It is Mademoiselle who wants it, not they, and have it she must.

So they make her a gown of rose taffeta, in which they modestly suggest the pantalette, and on it they place a bustle of rich and many-toned brocade. And the bodice, too, displays some rose, but its foundation is gray velvet, and its trimming is of beads of bright blue hues. Or they wrap her in an evening cloak of violet blue velvet with gray brocade, and they top it with pink chiffon, just to lend a touch of color!

They make her an evening gown which, they say, can boast a bodice; but its sleeves don't touch the elbows and come nowhere near the shoulders, and each bead is indispensible to the safety of the back. But the skirt attests the plentitude of the necessary materials, for it flares wide at the hips and swathes around the feet.

Yes, Madamoiselle, may have what she likes—a plentiful lack or a voluminous fullness of chiffon or taffeta, brocade or satin. She may top a yellow gown with a brilliant crimson rose; she may wear a pelerine and a bustle at one and the same time. She may do anything she pleases—with two little exceptions. She may not walk in comfort or sit down without reflection.
